FLOAT FROM AMUNDSEN AIRPLANE PICKED UP

"No Hope Left" Says Explorer Sverdrup Hearing of Wreckage Found Near Fugloe Islands, Norway.

PONTOON SEEMINGLY TORN FROM PLANE

This Is First Relic of Craft in Which Six Flyers Set Out to Rescue of the Italia Crew.

By the Associated Press.

OSLO, Sept. 1.—Discovery of the pontoon from the Amundsen plane is proof that he and his five companions have perished, in the opinion of Capt. Otto Sverdrup, Arctic explorer.

"There's no hope left," Sverdrup said.

Virtually, none here believes Amundsen, Capt. Rene Gilbaud, Lieut. Leif Dietrichsen or any of the plane's crew of three still to be alive.

He thinks that the disaster occurred before the big Latham seaplane reached Bear Island on its flight from Tromsoe. He bases this on the fact that there were many fishing vessels near the island at that time, but none of them saw the plane nor found traces of it in that neighborhood.

The captain accounted for the pontoon's discovery by a Norwegian fishing vessel, the Brood, on the beach, near the outer Fugloe Islands, by saying that it was very light and therefore the winds, which have been from the northwest all summer, would drive it towards the Norwegian coast, despite ocean currents setting in a different direction. The pontoon is the first relic found ot the Amundsen party since it set out from Tromsoe last June 18.

The Pontoon Identified.

The little steamer Brood last night picked up the float, which it thought at first to be an oil barrel, then recognized as the pontoon of the missing seaplane. The Brood immediately turned about and put in at Tromsoe at 3:30 this morning, showing the pontoon to the French Consul there, who by photographs in his possession and by word from Bergen, where copper plates had been attached to its bottom in the course of repairs, identified it as a relic of the Latham.

The pontoon is about seven feet in length, 20 inches in depth, and slightly less in breadth, with four water-tight bulkheads. Its bottom showed one hole, possibly made by the impact of polar ice. It was painted blue-gray, the color of the Latham.

Apparently Torn From Plane.

The float bore evidence of having been wrenched with great violence from the body of the seaplane. The pontoon, being constructed with water-tight compartments, remained afloat.

No trace has been found of the plane itself, or of its passengers. It was held a safe presumption here that the plane sank, shortly after its float was wrenched from it, and that those aboard perished then.

Generally it was held that the accident, whatever it was, took place midway between the Norgegian mainland and Bear Island while the plane was proceeding to Spitzbergen. Others believed that the location of the float near the Fugloe Islands indicatod that the crash came after it had turned and was flying back to Tromsoe, as other planes at that time had to do.

Amundsen's Quarrel With Nobile.

Roald Amundsen's was a career of adventure from the beginning. He was the first man to visit the South Pole, in 1911. In 1926, with Lincoln Ellsworth and Col. Umberto Nobile on the dirigible Norge he was a member of the second group of men to view the North Pole from the air. On this last trip there was an open break between Amundsen and Nobile following the flight of the Norge. Amundsen charged that Nobile mismanaged the dirigible. Nobile retorted that Amundsen had been, in fact, no more than a passenger of the dirigible which he (Nobile) had commanded.

When word came last May that the second Nobile dirigible, the Italia, had fallen north of Spitzbergen, Amundsen immediately pledged himself to assist in the rescue work. After several hitches in the rescue plans, he accepted the invitation of the French ace, Guilbaud, to accompany the Latham to Spitzbergen.

With Amundsen aboard the Latham, were Guilbaud, in charge

SISTERS RUNNING TO BUY CANDY KILLED BY AUTO

Jane Giegerich, 6, and Eline, 11, Run Down at Corner of Kossuth and Prairie Avenues.

Eline, 11 years old, and Jane, 6, the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Martin C. Giegerich of 3755 Kossuth avenue, were killed by an automobile near their home at 7:45 o'clock last night as they ran toward a corner confectionery to spend six pennies which Jane had received as a birthday gift.

The sisters had gone west on Kossuth avenue from their home half a block and were crossing Prairie avenue, opposite their destination, when they were struck and knocked down by a southbound automobile driven by Herbert Michaels, 19, a bricklayer, of 4201 North Prairie avenue. Jane was killed outright and Eline died on the way to Barnes Hospital.

It was the birthday of Jane and her twin sister, and a neighbor had given each six pennies a few minutes before the accident. Jane and her older sister ran off immediately to buy candy. Some of the pennies were still in her hand when her body was taken from the street.

Michaels, who was held for the Coroner's inquest, told police he did not see the children until they ran directly in the path of his automobile. The Giegerichs have three other children.

CALLES REFUSES TO CONTINUE IN THE PRESIDENCY

Also Tells Congress That Never at Any Time Will He Again Be Mexico's Executive.

APPEALS TO NATION FOR SOBER RESTRAINT

Declares Obregon's Death Presents Opportunity to Establish Law, Not Individual, as Supreme.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 1.—President Plutarco Elias Calles in the most emphatic terms today refused to continue in office after the expiration of his term Nov. 30, solemnly asserting, moreover, that he never at any time will again be President of Mexico.

This declaration, one of the most important presidential messages in the history of Mexico, came in the course of the President's address upon the convening of the new Congress in its regular four-month session this afternoon.

The President urged that only considerations of highest patriotism guide Congress in its selection of a provisional President to succeed him in December, and he appealed to the Army and leaders of all phases of Mexican life to conduct themselves with sober restraint for the best interests of the country in one of the most solemn moments of its history.

Comments on Obregon.

President Calles deplored the "irreparable loss" to the country resulting from the assassination of the President-elect, Gen. Alvaro Obregon, and lamented the situation which it had thrust upon the country. But, he said, this situation presented the opportunity for Mexico to attain new political orientation by establishing institutions and law, not one individual, as the supreme government.

The President declared that if Congress, the Army, and the Mexican people will work unitedly and with patriotic motives at this crucial period of Mexican history, Mexico can at last get way from the idea that only strong military chieftains can govern. Instead, he said, will be established the sanctity of power of laws and institutions which will command respect for whomsoever may be made President.

Attacking the country's problems from still another angle, the President advised that all minority and reactionary groups, "even the clerical reactionaries," have representation in Congress. Continuing, he asekd Congress and the Army so to conduct themselves that in the elections for his successor Mexico would have a really democratic contest in which all men, civilian and military alike, may engage.

Urges Congressional Caution.

Congress was asked not to act hastily in selecting a provisional President and not to call the election for the provisional President's successor too quickly. He said that the idea to be kept in mind always was that everything must be done calmly and deliberately in a democratic manner. This would, he said, bring in a new political era, giving every candidate an opportunity, and would end an era of rule of Mexico by a "Caudillo," or military chieftain.

The President said that although he never again would serve as President of Mexico he would not abandon his civic duties, but would accept whatever post he considered in the line of his duty to his country and to the "revolution."

Civic virtue and ability to legislate and rule for Mexico's good alone should guide Congress in the selection of a provisional President, he said, appealing for the abandonment of personal ambitions and for generosity and purity of ideals in making the choice.

Particularly did he ask for an abandonment of the old style of heated and undignified contest in the selection of a successor to the provisonal president which might lead to violence and disorder.

The Mexican "Revolutionary" Party was urged in the address to stand united and avoid dissension? within their own ranks lest all the gains of the long revolutionary fight be lost.

Revolt Now "Criminal."

Confidence in the loyalty and honor of the army was expressed in "this most solemn hour of our life," and he begged that it not be beguiled by anybody into any action against the Government.

"In this poignant hour,' he said, "it would be criminal for any man to attempt to come into presidential

PRINCE OF WALES CRACKS A JOKE FOR GENE TUNNEY

"So You Are Retiring to Get Married—I Think I'll Have to Because I Don't."

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Gene Tunney, former world's heavyweight champion, disappeared on a trip to the country today to escape being badgered as to the details of his interview yesterday with the Prince of Wales. Likewise the press department at York House, the Prince's residence, was kept up late last night by persistent queries, but refused to divulge any information. Today the office was closed for the week-end. Gratification was expressed there before closing, however, at Tunney's obedience to the ancient and always enforced rule that conversations with royalty are private.

One remark that the Prince is said to have made is verbally circulated today and as it certainly didn't come from Tunney, it would seem, if it is authentic, to have come from the Prince himself.

The Prince is said to have remarked: "So you are retiring because you are getting married? I sometimes think I'll have to retire because I don't."

BABE RUTH REFUSES TO POSE WITH HOOVER AT BALL GAME

"It's a Matter of Politics" Says Home Run King; Nominee Had Consented.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1. — Babe Ruth refused to pose today with Herbert Hoover for the photographers at American League baseball park before the opening of the game between New York and Washington.

The request that the home run king go over to the box of the Republican presidential candidate was conveyed by Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club, at the request of a photographer.

"It's a matter of politics," Ruth told Griffith in stating his refusal.

Before asking that Ruth be invited the photographer inquired of Hoover's secretary if the nominee would pose and Hoover consented.

KING'S YACHTING TROUSERS SERVING THEIR TENTH SEASON

George V. Makes Them Last by Special Cleaning Process— Cap is 11 Years Old.

By the Associated Press.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Sept. 1.—King George is so fond of his old white yachting cap that he recently brought it out for the eleventh year. It is a quaint old cap totally unlike those affected by "swanky" yacht skippers. It is round like a pancake without any peak and looks like those worn by sailors in the Royal Navy.

His old white yachting trousers are now serving through their tenth yachting season. His Majesty has made them last, he confided to intimate friends here, by having them cleaned by a special process instead of sending them to the laundry.

ROBBERS LOCK UP FOUR EMPLOYES AND GET $1203

Negroes Escape With Payroll Money of Wm. Ruprecht Co. on South Broadway.

Three women and a man employed in the office of the William Ruprecht Construction and Hauling Co., 8011 South Broadway, were locked in a private office, where they remained prisoners for 15 minutes, by four Negro robbers who entered the place at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and escaped with $1203 in cash.

Miss Gussie Boeke of 5621 Minnesota avenue, the cashier, was sorting $1150 of payroll money when the robbers entered, brandishing revolvers. "Keep quiet or we'll blow your heads off," the leader threatened as he marched the office force to the rear room.

When the prisoners were released by a driver who entered the office to report they found that the payroll money was gone from Miss Boeke's desk and $53 had been taken from the safe, which was not locked. No one saw the Negroes leave.

POLICE-BOOTLEG GRAFT $29,400 IN FIVE MONTHS IN PHILADELPHIA

From Only One of Several Alcohol Plants — This Merely Scratches Surface, Prosecutor Says.

ENTRY OF $10,000 FOR THE 'CHIEF COP'

Seized Records Also Show $800 a Month Notation After Name of Another High Official.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1—With the grand jury in possession of evidence that behind the gang murders there is a league of big bootleggers and bribed police, District Attorney Monaghan today promised not only arrests of the corrupt officials, but a disclosure of their operations which will bring to Philadelphia a complete cleanup.

"We are rapidly tearing away the veil of mystery which has surrounded gangdom," said Monaghan, "and behind it we find a rotten condition which must be eradicated."

Developments; Records Seized.

The developments on which the District Attorney bases his hopes for a cleanup are:

Examination of the records seized by order of the grand jury in the office of Marks, Weinberg & Co., public accountants, disclose a police payroll which contains the names of men on whom the city has placed reliance of all the alcohol distilleries in the city from which huge quantities of alcohol have been drawn by bootleggers.

Each distillery had its payroll, which covered the corruption of police and police officials in the district in which it operated and through whch its cargoes of alcohol were run.

In one ledger were found the names of aout 25 prominent police officials.

In this ledger a record was found that more than $20,000 had been paid to two men.

The actual detailed records ear out the District Attorney's original statement that enormous amounts of money had been paid to police as graft.

Several new witnesses have been found who will take further disclosures to the grand jury, one of whom, it is said, will give even more definite information regarding the operations of Max (Boo-Boo) Hoff, already designated by the District Attorney as the "king of the Philadelphia bootleggers."

The grand jury, whose term was indefinitely extended by Judge Lewis yesterday, will now redouble its efforts to carry out his instructions to go to the bottom of these conditions.

Statement by Prosecutor.

As an example of what already has been unearthed, Monaghan, after questioning Capt. Charles Beckman of the Detective Bureau for about an hour in the grand jury room, issued the following statement:

"I have no hesitation in saying that full names of police officials were found in the accounting records of working sheets taken from the books of a denaturing plant of an alcohol distillery.

"It would appear that a total amount of $29,400 was paid for police protection covering a period of five months.

"This is only from one plant, and merely scratches the surface of this part of our investigation.

"One item of this $29,400 was paid on one person, designated as 'chief cop.' After this was a comma and an entry of $10,000.

"Underneath this was the full name of a high official and $800 a month written after it.

"Below this line were a number of names with the word 'cop' after them, showing amounts paid them totaling $12,000. With these names were the days and dates of various amounts paid."

Policeman Came Into $200,000.

Monaghan would not disclose the nature of the examination of Beckman. The captain of detectives had already been questioned about gang conditions in the city, particularly regarding a speech which he made to the detective force immediately after the McLoon and O'Leary murders in which he declared that detectives and policemen would have to stop fraternizing with gangsters.

Beckman, who recently made a trip to Germany, announced on his return that he had inherited about

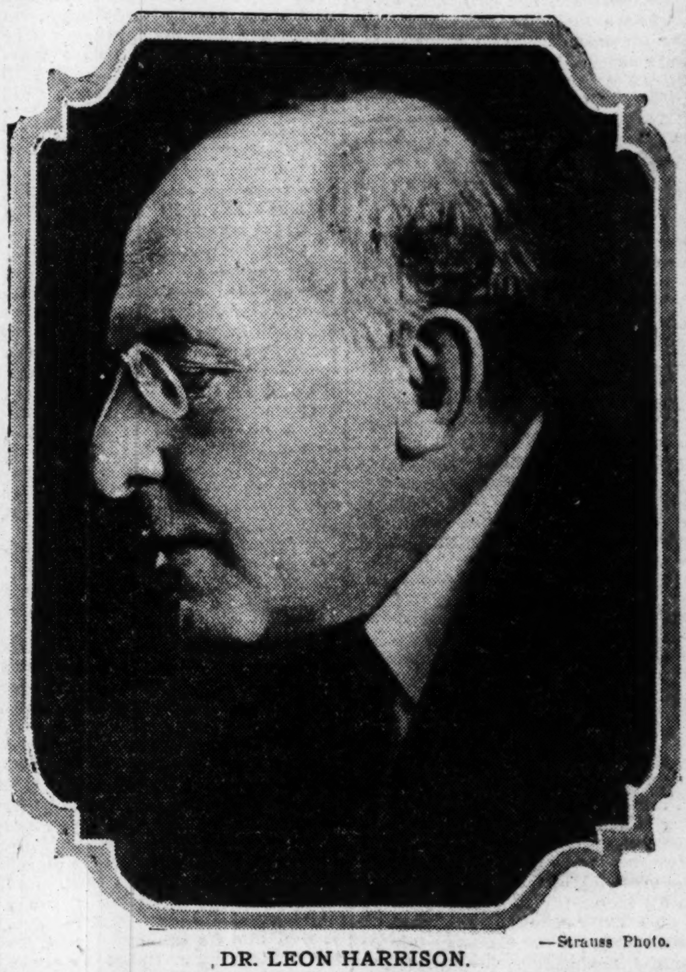
RABBI HARRISON KILLED WHEN HE FALLS IN FRONT OF NEW YORK SUBWAY TRAIN



DR. LEON HARRISON. —Strauss Photo.

ACCIDENT LAID TO VERTIGO OR NEARSIGHTEDNESS

Pastor of Temple Israel Meets Death at Station Adjoining Columbia U., His Alma Mater.

HE WAS ON VISIT TO HIS SISTER

Famous Pulpit Orator Had Just Returned From Trip to Europe — He Was 62 Years Old.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Dr. Leon Harrison, rabbi of Temple Isreal at St. Louis for 36 years and widely known pulpit orator, was killed here today when he fell under the wheels of a subway train. He was 62 years old.

The accident occurred at 8:30 a. m. at 116th street and Broadway, at the station adjacent to Columbia University, from which Dr. Harrison was graduated 43 years ago at the age of 19.

Dr. Harrison had left the nearby home of his sister, Mrs. D. C. Goodman, at 417 Riverside Drive, saying that he was going to a barber shop, then to the downtown office of his brother-in-law, Goodman, and later to keep an appointment with a dentist.

Spectators in the subway later recalled that Dr. Harrison walked from the platform for boarding downtown trains to the one opposite for boarding uptown trains. The downtown platform was crowded, but there were only a few persons on the uptown platform.

Fell on Tracks.

As one of the uptown trains approached the station, its motorman, John Quinn, saw Dr. Harrison fall onto the tracks 50 feet in front of the train. The motorman applied his brakes, but the wheels of the front truck passed over Dr. Harrison's body. The train crew tried to dislodge the body, but were compelled to call a police emergency crew, and it was 25 minutes before it finally was taken from the tracks to a police station and traffice was resumed.

Travelers' checks in Dr. Harrison's pockets and the mark of a St. Louis tailor on his clothing led to his identification.

Dr. Harrison's brother, Abraham, was found in a hotel where he resides and went to the station where he identifed the body. He told the police that he thought that his brother had become dizzy and had fallen onto the tracks.

"He had been ill lately," Abraham Harrison said, "and suffered for many years from vertigo. He also was near-sighted. I believe that he did not know how near the edge of the platform he was and that he suffered a dizzy spell and toppled over."

Accidental, Police Say.

Detective Harris reviewing the facts, noted that apparently Dr. Harrison had not been wearing his eyeglasses at the time of the accident and agreed that either Dr. Harrison had become dizzy or that his fall was the result of his faulty vision.

Previously the police had accepted the statement of the motorman that Dr. Harrison appeared to leap onto the tracks and had reported his death as suicide. They finally listed it officially as an accident.

Dr. Harrison had returned from Europe on the liner Belgenland last Monday and had gone to the home of his sister, Mrs. Goodman. He had been suffering from nervousness and had sent on word to St. Louis that he would not be able to conduct services in the celebration of the Jewish New Year, beginning Sept. 14, and that he planned to take a long rest.

Nobile Ill With High Fever.

MILAN, Sept. 1.—Gen. Umberto Nobile, who has been taken ill with a high fever from the arm broken in his Italia expedition, decided suddenly this afternoon to leave his home here and return to Rome. He entrained for that city this evening, amid a sympathetic demonstration of a crowd which gathered to see him off.

RADIO FANS GET STORY OF KILLING BY EYE-WITNESS

Dallas, Tex., Announcer Watching From Window Describes Murder Over Election Bet.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 1. — Radio fans who tuned in on station WFAA, Dallas, for a breakfast-hour program today heard a running eye witness account of a murder.

Miss Vera Meade Grimes was playing "Moonlight and Roses," on the piano when Ralph Schulze, announcer, heard what he thought was an automobile tire blowing out. He looked out of the window. Below he saw a man running across the street pursued by another man who was shooting.

Cutting off "Moonlight and Roses" unceremoniously, Schulze took the microphone and dictated an account of the shooting of Orville Mathews, 41 years old, a bank executive, by V. R. Adams, a Bartlett, Tex., farmer, who had disagreed with Mathews over an election bet. The shooting occurred at Main and Akard streets, the busiest corner in town.

Listeners hundreds of miles away got a narrative of the shooting before Dallas newspapers knew there had been a murder.

Victor Poisson, a passerby, was struck in the mouth by a 45-caliber bullet from Adams' pistol. His teeth were shattered, but metal in the front of his mouth stopped the bullet.

Mathews had held $2000 stakes on a bet which Adams and friends had made on a recent Texas United States senatorial runoff primary. Adams said the stakes were handed to Mathews with the understanding that the winner would collect Thursday in the presence of Adams and Ben C. Richards, Dallas insurance man, with whom Adams says he made the bet, although Richards denies it.

When he appeared Thursday, Adams said, Mathews told him he had paid the money to a Clyde R. Vest, on the strength of a telegram signed with Ramsey's name and a letter similarly signed and witnessed by a notary. Ramsey said the signatures were forgeries. Another conference had been arranged for today, and Adams apparently met Mathews at a drug store next to the bank. Adams says Mathews refused to pay and threatened him when he protested.

FUNERAL TO BE HELD ON TUESDAY IN NEW YORK

Dr. Harrison Will Be Buried in Family Plot Beside His Father and Mother at Former Home.

Rabbi Leon Harrison will be buried Tuesday in New York in a family plot beside his father and mother.

Members of his congregation at Temple Israel desired to see him buried in St. Louis—the scene of his long career in the pulpit—but it was the wish of his relatives that his body remain in the East.

The funeral services probably will be at the home of his sister, Mrs. David C. Goodman, 471 Riverside drive, followed by services at Temple Israel at Ninety-third street and Broadway, at 10 a. m. These arrangements are subject to change.

Walter L. Glaser, vice president of Temple Israel Congregation here, will go to New York today as representative of the congregation at the funeral. Under present plans, no special services will be held here, he says.

Meanwhile, tribute was paid to Dr. Harrison's sipiritual and civic leadership by his associates, by Catholic and Protestant church leaders and others who knew him.

Rabbi Miller to Serve Here.

When word of his death reached St. Louis, members of his congregation were proceeding with arrangements to have Rabbi Julian Miller substitute for Dr. Harrison in the celebration of the Jewish New Year, beginning Sept. 14.

Walter Glaser, who has been acting president in the absence of the president, Julius Glaser, had received a message sent by Dr. Harrison on shipboard before his arrival at New York Monday. He informed the congregation his health was not good and he thought perhaps he would take a rest in the East. He had been suffering from nervousness and for a time had been in a sanitarium in Vienna, where he spent most of his trip abroad. Glaser said that Dr. Harrison was not well when he left St. Louis last June 1.

About a year ago, Dr. Harrison had trouble with his voice, and there were rumors at the time that it was permanently impaired. Glaser said that the trouble was a certain roughness from which public speakers sometimes suffer, but that it was no more serious than a temporary huskiness.

Resided With Sister.

Dr. Harrison was a bachelor. He resided with a sister, Mrs. William H. Goldman, at 5515 Cabanne avenue.

ILLINOIS MINERS ACCEPT 15 PCT. REDUCTION IN PAY

New Four-Year Contract, Subject to Referendum, Agreed to by Operators and the Workers.

$6.10 FOR DAY MEN, 91 CENTS ON TONNAGE

Agreement Expected to Result Soon in Employment of 20,000 More Men in Coal Fields.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—A new four-year contract providing for a reduction of from 15 to 20 per cent in the wages of Illinois coal miners was formally agreed upon today by the general joint conference of Illinois miners and operators.

The new contract, subject to a referendum vote of the State's 90,000 miners, calls for a basic wage scale of $6.10 a day for the day worker and 91 cents a ton for the tonnage miners, as compared respectively with the $7.50 day rate and $1.08 a ton rate under the Jacksonville agreement which expired a year and a half ago.

If ratified by the miners, and it was said there was no doubt that the agreement would be accepted, the new contract will become effective Sept. 16 and continune until March 31, 1932.

Officers of the operators' association said the immediate effect of the new agreement would be the re-employment of perhaps 20,000 more miners just as quickly as the mines could be re-conditioned and prepared for re-opening. There are now about 30,000 miners at work, although not regularly, under individual agreements with the mine owners.

It will perhaps require more than a year for the industry in Illinois to regain the production it had before the Jacksonville agreement expired, due to lost markets and other conditions within the industry.

W. J. Jenkins, president of the Illinois operators and chairman of the joint conference, in a statement said: "While the agreement means an improvement in the mining industry of Illinois and the nation, it is not entirely what the operators wanted. However, it will be a help."

Harry Fishwick, president of the Illinois mine workers, while not appearing overly enthusiastic in discussing the new contract, said the union men believed they had taken a step toward improving their conditions.

The operators' rights to install mechanical loaders and conveyors of all types were recognized by the miners in the new contract. It was understood that this point had been one of the chief stumbling blocks in drawing up the new agreement.

The loading of coal with machinery is to be paid for on a tonnage basis, if practicable, the contract reads, and with this end in view a commission of two operators and two miners will be appointed to study the various conditions surrounding the use of machinery to aid them in determining a satisfactory rate for the tonnage basis.

Until the commission accomplishes its task, the agreement calls for the following rates: Men loading coal on conveyors, $8.04 a day; drillers, snubbers and shooters, $8.20 a day; cutting machine operators and helpers, $10.07 a day; mechanical loading machine operators, $10.07 a day; loading helpers, $9 a day; members of loading machine crew, $7.50 a day.

All men employed on the mechanical loaders, conveyors and undercutting machines are to work a full eight-hour day and be under the supervision of the mine management.

Agreement Will Give More Belleville Miners Work.

Tentative settlement of the prolonged wage dispute between miners and operators is expected to result in the immediate reopening of several coal mines in the Belleville district which have been closed for months, according to James Mason, secretary and treasurer of the Belleville subdistrict of the United Mine Workers.

This will mean that aproximately 4500 of the district's 8000 miners, after a long period of idleness, will join the 3500 or so who have remained at work. Those now employed are working part time under the old Jacksonville scale. Acceptance of the new scale, while reducing their rate of pay will have the effect of increasing their weekly earnings by permitting full-time employment. Most of the mines which have continued to operate have worked only three or four days a week.

In the Southern Illinois district, which numbers more than two-thirds of the State's miners, 40 or 50 per cent have worked intermittently during the last year. Announcement of the settlement is reported to have been well received at Marion and Herrin. General good feeling in the Williamson and Jackson county fields is expected to result in heavy attendance tomorrow at the annual Labor Day celebration in Herrin.

Dr. Harrison, Brilliant Scholar, Of National Fame as an Orator Was Always Intensely Human

His Eloquence and Breadth of View Drew to Temple Israel Many Followers of Other Creeds.

Rabbi Leon Harrison went to his end, yesterday, beneath the wheels of a New York subway train, and the eloquent lips, which had won him great fame and made of him an outstanding figure among the ecclesiastics of his country, were forever stilled. His high reputation, made from the pulpit of Temple Israel, had spread in every direction until, penetrating to the far reaches of this land, his eminence especially among the Jews, attained a height seldom gained by churchmen or laymen.

Standing in his pulpit, his head thrust slightly forward, his strong hands holding fast to the corners of the lectern, he spoke with such pungency, held forth so staunchly for the right, as God gave him to see the right, that men and women of other faiths, and men and women of no faith whatsoever, walked within the doors of his Temple and gave him heed.

Nor did the profundity and excellence of his talk, the great scope of subjects he took for his thremes, alone bring him his audience and their approval; many there were who came to sit before him who, differing with him or not, loved to hear his suave eloquence, the beautiful diction of the man, to watch his few gestures, catch the cadence, the harmony and sheer beauty of his speech.

Conducted Services on Sundays.

Departing, many years ago, from the ancient Hebraic custom, he conducted not only the Jewish services of Friday evening and Saturday morning, but being in Rome, saw fit to do as the Roman did; he took the pulpit on Sunday morning, and paying due heed to his creed with prayers and Biblical readings handed down from his Fathers, spent most of these Sunday morning periods in lectures on contemporary literature, on social movements, on affairs of state, on world topics, on subjects interesting to all men.

For his fertile brain could not confine itself to theology alone; he did not believe the preacher should limit himself to that province. The minister of God, he contended, must be a teacher as well as the bearer of the Lord's word. And so this student and philosopher talked of what he deemed fitting, and the manner in which his lecturing was received told the story of this man's appeal. Jews, Gentiles, unbelievers, held by his pronouncements, fascinated by his oratory, swept to laughter by the humor that played about the seriousness of his discussions, and relieved it, gase him unstintedly of their praise.

He was not graced by great height, he was not what the world calls a handsome man, but there was about him such strength, solidity, soundness, as made him imposing. Short in stature, a little man as height goes; he was far sturdier than the average. His chest was deep, his shoulders broad, the head, always held in a settled position, was seemingly joined to his shoulders with but the mere suggestion of a neck.

His nose was large and prominent, it stood out from his face decisively. Hebraic in mold it was, but the coloring of the face gave no hint of the Mediterranean. The fair, rosy cheeks, the blue eyes, the sandy hair, suspiciously red when caught in the proper light, might have been the coloring of a man from Teutonic lands. But those blue eyes were clear and steadfast, and with the strong nose, and the large, full mouth, formed the high points of a striking face. There was about the head that quality which is alluded to as leonine, and the sturdiness of the body paid proper tribute to the massive head.

Came to America at 15.

Leon Harrison was born in Liverpool, England, Aug. 13, 1866. When he was 15 his family moved to New York, and his preliminary education, begun in England was continued in America. He was distinguished in his studies; it is said he ranked every class he ever entered. And he ranked, the year of his public school graduation the whole city of New York.

His preliminary education completed, he entered the College of the City of New York, but his stay there was brief. He preferred Columbia University, transferred his credits to that institution, attended classes there in the mornings. But in the afternoons he spent his time at Emmanuel Theological Seminary, in the same city.

For he had determined at an early age that the pulpit was his calling, and he pursued his studies to that end, pursued them at two institutions of collegiate rank, and still found time to earn the money for his education.

Always the Student.

Always the student, his outstanding classwork earned for him the key of Phi Beta Kappa, the honorary college fraternity for excellence in studies. He once said, regarding his congenital studiousness:

"My parents told me when I was less than 10 years old they would find me curled up in a book shop lost to the world in some book. My ambition always was to read books—to lead a scholarly life that would give me time to read books."

When he was graduated from Columbia he continued reading books. He obtained his degree of Doctor of Philosophy at Columbia. And now the student years—student years under professorial direction—were over, and the young Rabbi Harrison, but recently consecrated, began to look about for an ecclesiastical charge. He found a pastorate just across the river, in Brooklyn; a small temple, known as Temple Israel.

So this shepherd of a flock, who was but a boy in his twenties, set about learning his business. One of his earliest duties was a marriage ceremony he was called to perform. The bride was 35, the groom 45. But their boyish pastor was not dismayed. He conducted the wedding ceremonial in the accepted manner, not neglecting to give them the expected profoundly paternad and spiritual advice. And he got away with it.

Spoke at Beecher's Funeral.

He was but 21 when Henry Ward Beecher died, and rather to his dismay, was called upon to represent his community in 20 minutes of oratory at the funeral. He was disturbed before he started, but once the already fluent tongue had sent a few words across the space between himself and his audience, courage settled upon his shoulders like a sheltering cloak, and his discourse was received in a manner that must have meant for him great inspiration.

But Temple Israel of Brooklyn did not hold him long. Another Temple Israel, this time in the then to him unknown west country of St. Louis, was calling.

Temple Israel of St. Louis occupied in those days a sanctuary at Pine and Twenty-eighth streets, small in this day, but of noble proportions then. This Temple Israel, however, needed a successor to the then celebrated Rabbi Solomon Sonnenschein. Temple Israel was proud of its sanctuary, proud of its congregation; it was even more proud of its Rabi Sonneschein. Who would take that able cleric's place?

Its members cast about, and hearing good things of a young man named Harrison in Brooklyn, offered him its rabbinical post. To St. Louis young Rabbi Harrison made his way—in St. Louis he stayed. From the very first his eloquence and his ability, his musical deftness of speech and the worthiness of his topics impressed themselves on his flock; he became an integral part of the congregation; in a few years his fame was on the rise. Never, perhaps, had another Jewish priest so embracingly and immediately endeared himself to a St. Louis Hebrew congregation.

For this pastor, despite his continual admonitions to his flock, his urgings that they were Jews and must follow the rules laid down by their forbears, was not an austere, beetle-browed man. There was about him a humanity that made itself felt in the pulpit and in social intercourse alike. There was many a wedding, many a gala occasion of his church, which found him doing his considerable share toward being "the life of the party."

Bachelor that he was and always remained, weddings seemed to bring out all that was lightest and gayest in the man. The very thought of them seemed to bring cheer to his soul. It was not strange to see him arrive before a wedding place, casually munching an apple or a pear. But once the ceremony was begun, official solemnity fell upon him. Serious, almost austere, he was as he read the wedding ritual, there was no trace of lightness across his face as he held forth the marriage cup so bride and groom might drink. But once his spiritual duties were at end, so was his solemnity; his humor began to play, his talk held sway, and the bride and groom lost temporary prominence as the two or three who had begun to listen to him increased to five or six and steadily assumed greater proportions.

At one particular wedding at the Columbian Club—a large and gay affair—the Rabbi was in high good humor. He drifted from dining table to dining table, talking lightly and gracefully until one lady present, wishing to twit him a bit, said: "Dr. Harrison, do you think such gayety becomes a Rabbi? You are never this way when you are in the pulpit."

Then came the ever ready answer. "Madam," he said, "when I am in the pulpit I am with the angels."

Rejected Offers of Other Pulpits.

The congregation of Temple Israel worshiped in its sanctuary on Pine street for many years after Rabbi Harrison came as its pastor. It was in that small church that his worth became broadcast; there he laid the foundations of his fame.

Other proffers of rabbinical office came to him from various cities; he was offered this pulpit and that, sometimes at greater salaries, but the bond between the congregation and its pastor worked both ways—they wanted him, and he evidently wanted them. For such posts as were offered were only offered to be rejected.

It was in 1908 that the congregation moved to the edifice in which it now worships, at the northwest corner of Kingshighway and Washington boulevards. As the congregation increased in size, as its sanctuary increased in beauty, world things, too, were on the increase for its ecclesiastical leader. His yearly stipend was raised to $12,000, then to $18,000, until at the time of his death he received $25,000 yearly. This October would have marked the thirty-seventh anniversary of his service with Temple Israel. Years ago he was elected the congregation's minister for life.

Discussed Ibsen With His Barber.

When Temple Israel entered its present sanctuary its Rabbi found the new location much to his liking. Among other things, a barber shop nearby, which it was his wont to visit just as shortly before his Saturday morning service as it was humanly possible, held a barber who helped the preacher while away his time in the chair. The barber was a student of Ibsen, and great discussions rose during the morning ministration between the soapy-faced Rabbi and his white-coated barber friend.

But the priest, though always interested in letters, was no puny bookworm. He was a man of great muscular development, great muscles stood out upon his back like cords; his biceps were potent, his legs agile. He never gave up his swift play upon the handball courts, where he accepted the challenges of younger men, and defeated them.

His relatives protested that a man of 60 years and over should not engage in so strenuous a game, one that taxed the strength of much younger man, but his only answer was more handball. And if it wasn't handball, it was throwing about a heavy medicine ball, or engaging in similar exercises.

Rode Bicycle About Streets.

For years he was a familiar figure, pedaling around the city's streets on his bicycle. This bicycling again caused his relatives much concern, for he was very near-sighted, but bicycle he would, and bicycle he did, here and on visits to Europe.

He was not far behind the vanguard of St. Louisans who went in for automobiling, and his defective sight caused him often to scrape a nearby fender, or to violate lesser traffic mandates. But many knew him, and those who did not, on learning who he was, usually permitted him to proceed upon his way, undisturbed.

It was only a few years ago—perhaps six—that his faulty eyes caused him to crash into the rear end of a street car at Twelfth boulevard and Olive street. The crash threw him and a companion out of the machine and left that vehicle in a sad state. But the Rabbi picked himself up, and exhibiting his usual poise—he might have been in his pulpit—philosophized, "My automobile looks like a dreadful pile of junk. But, think how bad it could have been."

Enjoyed Visits to Europe.

Europe was for him a favorite stamping ground, almost every summer found him there, his means of travel as likely as not his bicycle. He was a close and interested observer of foreign lands and foreign affairs, and he was not above speaking out as he saw fit concerning the countries he visited. His judgments were not lightly disregarded—in 1911 he perdicted the war soon would come between England and Germany—his opinions often were asked, and found utterance in the press.

His friends among other sects were many, for his views were broad, and much as he beseeched his congregation to remain true to their creed, his humanity was all-embracing; there was no belittling, in public or in private, of other sects.

His Speech in Christ Church.

Speaking at Christ Church Cathedral on Armistice Day, 1926, he opened his sermon with tears in his voice and a catch in his throat. It was an occasion of great joy to him, he said, speaking from the pulpit of that cathedral. For, he continued "It is the first time I have had the privilige in my years of ministry of speaking in a Christian cathedral. No better hope for peace among nations could be found than for me, a Jewish Rabbi, to be allowed to speak in this church where Bishop Tuttle and many other great leaders have spoken. It shows a spirit of love, and the beginning of better understanding between the churches. From that understanding may spread good will among nations."

On another occasion, in an address by radio, the Rabbi said: "Bishop Tuttle lived a full life, and it was a life that came into helpful contact with every philanthropy and every religion. He was helpfully associated with Jews as well as with Christians. He was a stranger to no church or sanctuary, whether Catholic, Protestant or Hebrew. He knew no distinction of color, race or creed."

Creed No Barrier.

Nor did Leon Harrison. Four years ago he officiated at a Christian funeral. A woman had died who admired him and frequented his lectures. She was afflicted with an incurable disease, and before the end she asked that the Rabbi conduct her funeral services. Her parents joined in that request, and for the first time in his life this Hebrew priest said the service for a member of a creed other than his own.

"The naturalness of the request," he said at the time, "made me very glad to officiate. The family didn't seem to think there was anything unusual in it. It demonstrates there is still a simple spirit of humanity in the hearts of good persons."

What with being the orator he was, what with his prominence he was much sought after as a speaker at high school graduations, not only in the city but out in the State as well. And many were the commencement addresses he gave.

Of course, there was always the danger of his never arriving quite on time. He was forgetful and many the poor hostess who waited and waited for him to appear, only to be informed, on his tardy arrival, that his memory had again played him a trick, again caused him to be unpunctual.

But he was forgetful only as to trivialities. He never forgot the high purposes of life. It was in 1909 that he announced Temple Israel was open to Jews, Catholics, Protestants, any who cared to come within its doors. For, he said, "the pulpit of Temple Israel has always stood for ideals of civic righteousness, and has attempted to teach practical ethics to all men of whatever race or creed." So he said, and so he believed. He was a liberal in religion, and a liberal in life. But a forthright one, and one sometimes caustic. Once, when the Supreme Court of Missouri reversed and dismissed the case of Edward Butler, convicted by Circuit Attorney Folk of attempted bribery, the Rabbi's ironic comment was: "I have heard of courts of justice—in China where there is no justice, where the briber, though already condemned, is turned loose. The rascals are turned loose because there are rascals on the bench—in China."

His Choice of Books.

Greatly, with all the realm of thought his scope, did this man live. All things of moment appealed to him, likewise things of beauty. His returns from Europe usually found in his luggage fine prints, etchings, engravings; if not quite a collector of them, he was at worst their champion. He had a large library, as varied in contents as were his tastes. A list of books he recommended were: Flammarion, "Wonders of the Heavens;" Gieke, "Primer of Geology;" Tyler, "Primitive Man;" Spencer, "Study of Sociology;" Lebon, "Psychology of the Crowd;" Lecky, "History of European Morals;" Clark, "Ten Great Religions of the World;" "The Book of Genesis."

During the last year of his life it became noticeable to members of his family that he no longer seemed possessed of his old vigor. Returning to his home after his day's work, he would throw himself into a chair, and say to those about him "I'm tired. I'm tired." But every evening, regardless of weariness, he would be on his way to visit the sick in the hospitals.

If yesterday you chanced to pass Temple Israel, you may have seen upon its framed announcement board, "Leon Harrison, Rabbi." There was about that sight that which was eerie, something almost sinister; it seemed as though the great gray Temple, bereft of its leader, still clung to its grip upon his name, not knowing what to do without it. Waiting perhaps, for another David to pass that way and say: "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?"

KAROLYI ALLOWED TO LAND IN U. S. FOR SHORT TIME

Count Declares He is "Astonished at Another of Those Quaint American Paradoxes."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1. — Count Michael Karolyi, who for a few months served as the first President of Hungary, arrived in the United States today for a brief visit.

When the Count came to this country three years ago he was permitted to land only on condition that he neither write nor speak for publication on political questions. On his arrival this morning aboard the Spanish Royal Mail steamer Cristobal Colon, bound for Barcelona from Mexico, he found that immigration officials did not seek to detain him, but were willing to let him stay the two days the little steamer will be in port.

"I am astonished, utterly astonished," he exclaimed when informed that he could land. "It is another of those quaint American paradoxes."

Count Karolyi immediately began to make the most of his brief sojourn. He addressed the enthusiastic crowd of sympathizers that gathered at the pier to greet him, hurried to the financial district to speak to an outdoor noonday gathering and then drove to the Pennsylvania Station.

Takes Plane to Washington.

It had been planned that he would go to Curtiss Field to board a plane for Washington for a special conference at the State Department and at the Alien Property Custodian's office, but no plane was obtainable at Curtiss Field, which had ceased operations for the day in respect to the memory of M. M. Merrill, its manager, who was killed in a crash.

He later took a private plane to the capital, where he and his counsel, Morris L. Ernst, were to have conferences regarding the $16,000 collected by Karoyli for the Republican cause in Hungary when he was here in 1014.

The meeting on Wall street was followed by some confusion. A group of young people, who said they were members of the Young Workers' Communist Party, were thrice dispersed by the police as they gathered on three successive street corners to sing the "Internationale."

Laughs Over Paradox.

When told that Secretary of State Kellogg was out of the country, the Count laughed and said, "Well, it is very unfortunate. I did not expect to land in America and therefore there was no timing of my arrival to tally with the movements of your diplomats."

"I had expected that I should be handcuffed and tied to the Statue of Liberty," he said, adding that he hoped the State Department's attitude toward him had changed. He had intended to ask permission to return to the United States later.

It was a strange paradox, he said, for the United States to permit De Valera from the "Irish Republic" to land at the time of the World War and campaign without interference, when he, Karolyi an ally of England and America, was barred.

Asked if he were an exile from Hungary, the Count shook his head and replied. "Not exactly. They have a warrant for my arrest." The warrant, he explained, "specifies high treason as one charge; and secondly that I was friendly to America."

When told Premier Bethen of Hungary had stated recently that Bethlen and his party all along had been a party of peace, Karolyi laughed and said:

"That is too bad—too bad we should have learned this so late."

Lord Rothermere's plan to restore Hungary to the prestige she enjoyed before the Versailles treaty, the Count believed, would plunge all Europe into war again. Neither he nor his party stood for such a sacrifice, he added.

"I am a socialist," Karolyi said, when asked what he would do if he were ever returned to poltical power. "The Government under me would be upon Socialistic lines."

ters—Mrs. Goodman, Mrs. Harry Lillienthal, Miss Rebecca Harrison and Miss Rae Harrison, all of New York—and two brothers, Abe Harrison of New York and Newton Harrison of Milford, Conn.

The following were Dr. Harrison's nephews and nieces: E. J. Goldman, Leon Harrison Goldman of 6601 Kingsbury avenue; Mrs. Charles Barnett of Cleveland and Miss Olga Harrison, Miss Alma Harrison and Howard Harrison of New York.

Tributes follow:

Archbishop Glennon: I knew Dr. Harrison ever since I came to St. Louis, and always found him to be very generous, very broad-minded, very helpful, a very brilliant speaker and a very good friend. We served on quite a number of commissions, committees, trusteeships and such together, and he always had the very best interests of the people at heart. He could only work unselfishly.

Bishop Frederick F. Johnson of the Missouri Episcopal Diocese telegraphed from Newton, Conn.: "St. Louis has lost a man of outstanding intellectual and spiritual power, a man whose sympathies were broad enough to give him an interest in all religious causes without regard to party lines; a man whose co-operation could always be counted upon in behalf of every measure for civic and moral betterment. He has been to me a genial and helpful personal friend. I deeply regret his untimely death."

The Rev. Dr. Samuel D. Press, president of the Church Federation and president of Eden Theological Seminary, telegraphed from Falls City, Neb.: "Rabbi Leon Harrison was not only one of the most outstanding figures and constructive factors in the civic life of St. Louis, but he held the solid respect of the community on account of his splendid character, his fearless sincerity in facing squarely the issues presented by the problems of life. It is with a keen sense of regret that we learn of his sudden removal from the wonted scenes of his very active life. Not only the community to which he ministered directly but all other communities to which he ministered indirectly and yet in a very personal way will miss his presence in our midst."

Rabbi Samuel Thurman of the United Hebrew Temple, 225 South Skinker boulevard: "Rabbi Harrison was one of the outstanding rabbis of the country, a man of unusual goodness and of tremendous strength of mind and body. As an orator he probably was second to none in the country, regardless of creed, and was so recognized. Locally, his sudden demise casts a dark pall not only on his congregation or the Jewish community, but upon the whole city and State, in the life of which his own work has been so closely interwoven for nearly half a century. Personally, I feel a deep and shocking grief at his sudden taking away. He was a devoted and loyal and kindly friend to me from the first moment I came to this community."

Harold M. Bixby, chairman of the board of the Chamber of Commerce: "A most valuable and highly regarded citizen has been lost to St. Louis, a forceful thinker and orator, whose sound leadership has been a considerable factor in the new St. Louis."

A. Rosenthal, editor of "The Modern View," a Jewish religious periodical: "Rabbi Harrison's sermons gladdened innumerable hearts, enlightened many minds and influenced for good a legion of people of several generations and all faiths. A multitude will grieve and lament his sad, untimely fate."

Dr. C. E. Lemmon, pastor of Hamilton Avenue Christian Church and a member of the Executive Board of the Church Federation, said:

"The community sustains an irreparable loss in the tragic death of Rabbi Harrison. Because of his long service and masterly eloquence he was easily the leading pulpiteer of this city, a great influence for the moral uplift of all the people. He was an eloquent and passionate preacher of righteousness, tolerance and the spiritual concept of life. In his death the nation has lost one of its most eloquent preachers. Every minister in the city will regret his passing."

Dr. Charles Rederer, president of Temple Israel Parent-Teachers Association: "Dr. Harrison's death is a signal loss. His Sunday discourses did much to break down the little prejudice existent, and placed the Jew in his true light. His knowledge of little children, and his ability to reach their hearts and minds in the formation of their character, was a true expression of genius. His profundity of thought and his witticisms left a lasting impression. His passing is a loss to humanity and his memory a privilege to all who knew him."

DEATHS OF 17 POISONER NURSED INVESTIGATED

Franklin County Grand Jury Checked Many of Mrs. Gifford's Sickbed Ministrations.

TALK OF EXHUMING BODIES FOR TESTS

Only by That Means Can It Be Proved Whether Fatal Doses of Poison Were Administered.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

UNION, Mo., Sept. 1.—A total of 17 deaths of persons after Mrs. Bertha Gifford, 58-year-old amateur nurse and confessed poisoner, had helped minister to them, were under scrutny by the Franklin County grand jury that indicted her on two murder counts, it is learned today.

Indictments charging her with causing the death of 7-year-old Elmer Schamel, son of a hired man, and "Ed" Brinley, 48 year-old Catawissa farmer, were brought in because it could be shown, in each case, that Mrs. Gifford had bought arsenic a short time before the deaths—accompanied by some symptoms of arsenical poisoning—occurred in the Gifford home.

Three days before the death of James Louis Ogle, middle-aged hired man on the Gifford farm who had complained the Giffords owed him money he could not collect, Mrs. Gifford purchased arsenic at a drug store in Pacific, Mo. That was 11 years ago. It was considered that a stronger showing could be made on the more recent deaths, the chances being that if exhumed, the bodies would be in better condition for autopsy.

Before the grand jurors, Catawissa farmers or their wives followed one another to the stand, telling of the death of those who were nursed by Mrs. Gifford.

Recital of Deaths.

George Schamel told of the death of his two small sons and of his sister, Mrs. Leona Slocum. George Stuhlfelder, who lived on a farm adjoining the Gifford place, gave details of the death of three of his children and of his mother, after Mrs. Gifford had "sat up" with them. Members of the Pounds family told of the death of Sherman Pounds, known as one of the strongest men in the Catawissa district, and of his 3-year-old grandchild, Beulah Pounds, each exhibiting arsenical symptoms at death. The deaths of Mrs. Gifford's first husband, of her mother-in-law, of her husband's young brother, all under the Gifford roof, and of four other persons at whose bedside she was a watcher until death came, were gone into in detail.

The indictments were found after Dr. W. H. Hempker, who treated most of the persons Mrs. Gifford nursed, told the grand jurors that he had suggested to relatives, in several cases following suspicious deaths, that the circumstances warranted post-mortem examinations.

"Suspicious," Doctor Says.

To a Post-Dispatch reporter, Dr. Hempker said today: "I felt I had done my duty when I told the relatives to have an inquest. 'You bet if those were my boys, I'd order a post-mortem,' I said to Schamel, following the death of his two children. I couldn't convince him. When Ed Brinley died, I talked to his widow and his relatives. They wanted a private post-mortem and thought it was arranged. They went over to talk to the county authorities and the affair lapsed until Prosecuting Attorney Jenny made his first grand jury presentation.

"I had my doubts about those three cases and now that Mrs. Gifford has confessed I can understand other cases that baffled me. Take the case of 'Grandma' Stuhlfelder. I was treating her for heart disease. She was getting along splendidly and I left some medicine for her. The next day they called me. She had died. I was astonished. I spoke to my wife about it.

"I felt that I could not, on my own responsibility, order a post-mortem. I talked to the relatives and if they had given consent, inquests would have followed. I did not care to be the target if the post-mortem findings failed to show poison."

Laxity of Doctors Rebuked.

In this connection, Dr. James [illegible]wart, State Health Commissioner, who may be asked to provide expert medical opinion if bodies are exhumed, said in a written statement issued at Jefferson City:

"A physician's duty is to determine the cause of death before signing a death certificate. It is not only his duty to his community, but it is his duty to himself. If physicians would insist on calling the Coroner where there is any doubt as to the cause of death, the so-called 'mystery' deaths in this State would stop. It is entirely possible for some one to be poisoned, buried and forgotten if the laxity in filling out death certificates which now prevails in Missouri is not ended. Hereafter the State Board of Health will insist on concise and clear statements of the cause of death on all death certificates filed."

May Exhume Bodies.

An examination of the bodies of the two Schamel boys and Ed Brinkley will be necessary to determine positively whether or not poison caused their death.

"Mrs. Gifford says she gave arcenic to those two boys and to Brinley," Dr. Hempker said, "but she did not mention the amounts. The symptoms in each case were undoubtedly suspicious. The actual presence of arsenic in the bodies, however, will have to be shown, and in sufficient quantity to produce death.

Relatives of the dead, who at first frowned on post-mortems, now want to have the bodies exhumed. Arsenic is an insoluble compound, and can be detected years after the burial of a body.

"I've been occupied with other cases," Prosecuting Attorney H. F. Jenny of Franklin County said," but we have considered exhuming the bodies. We may ask the State for medical aid or we may seek medical aid in St. Louis. We haven't decided."

Walks the Floor, Crying.

Mrs. Gifford has doffed the florid red and yellow kimono worn since she was placed in the upper cell tier of the jail, and put on one of the crisply ironed white nurse costumes worn by her in attendance at so many sickbeds. She also contrived a gauze pack which she soaked in water and kept over her face during the day. She does not leave her cot by day and stirs about in her cell only at night. She walks the floor, moaning and crying aloud intermittently.

Mrs. Gifford, on being imprisoned Aug. 24, refused food for five days but since then has eaten regularly. She declines to talk to anyone save her husband, Gene, who was arrested and fined for operating a still in 1926, and to Sheriff Arthur Gorg.

Up to yesterday, it was known that 15 deaths had been examined into by the grand jury. Investigation by the Post-Dispatch nowever, revealed that the death of "Grandma" Birdie Unnerstall, who lived directly across from the Gifford "house of mystery," and of Mrs. Leona Slocum, aunt of the Schamel children, were also part of the grand jury investigation, bringing the number of fatalities looked into up to 17.

Gus Unnerstall, son of the elderly woman who became violently ill when Mrs. Gifford visited her and who died in a few hours, also told the Grand Jury of the events that caused him to have Mrs. Gifford placed under a bond of $500 in 1926 to keep the peace.

"Just before Gene Gifford got into that bootlegging trouble," Unnerstall said, "we had a little misunderstanding. It was a falling out over some of Gene's property that was left in one of my sheds. I went to the Gifford place one day to talk things over and Mrs. Gifford chased me with a butcher knife and cursed me. A few days later I went back and she threatened me and cursed me some more. I had her arrested for peace disturbance."

Mrs. Gifford's arraignment on the two charged of first degree murder is set for the third Monday in November, when Circuit Court opens here.

10-CENT RISE IN BUTTER PRICES LAID TO SHORTAGE

Butter is approximately 10 cents a pound higher at retail than it was six weeks ago, and brokers say the fall and winter supply is 25,000,000 pounds less than last year.

Butter which six weeks ago was 48 and 46 cents a pound yesterday was retailed at 58 and 52 cents. Prices paid producers also have advanced. Current prices to producers for best creamery butter are 3 cents higher than last September, and, for the three cheaper grades, 6 cents higher on each.

High grain prices and the cool spring were mentioned as causes of the comparative shortage, but opinions varied as to whether prices might be expected to decline or rise still further.

POLICE - BOOTLEG GRAFT $29,400 IN FIVE MONTHS

$200,000 from a relative there. He has been an important figure in the police department for some time.

Before Beckman was called into the jury room, three other witnesses had been examined. They were Hoff, the dapper "manager of boxers," declared by a former employe, Louis R. Elfman, to be the head of the "bootlegging racket" in this city; H. Zachary Marks, senior member of the accounting firm from whose offices the records were taken; and Benjamin Pergament, bookkeeper for the firm.

It was the fifth appearance of Hoff before the grand jury, and it was announced that the investigators are not nearly through with him.

Although there will be no sessions of the grand jury either today or Monday, the investigation is being pressed by the District Attorney and further revelations may be made.

U. S. Experts Examine Records.

The seized records are being further examined by four experts from the United States Bureau of Internal Revenue and Patrick McKewen, chief of county detectives, and several of his assistants.

In each case where a record of payments to a policeman or police official is found detectives are put to work to check up on the financial condition of the indicated recipient. The investigation covers his wealth and any possible legitimate sources from which he might have derived it.

In the course of the examination, the Bureau of Internal Revenue officers are obtaining data which will later be made the basis for Federal prosecutions to obtain for the Government huge amounts. This money is collectible as tax on the alcohol illegally diverted into the bootlegging trade.

Monaghan was particularly pleased with the results of the grand jury session yesterday. Marks and Pergament, it is said, were questioned regarding the notations on the seized records. What they told, the District Attorney would not say, but he seemed satisfied with their examinations, as far as it has gone. It is understood they will be recalled.

Other Witnesses to Be Heard.

It is also probable that during the coming week Nathan Robinson, president of the Hoff-Lazar-Schwartz-Golder Corporation, known as the Franklin Mortgage & Investment Co., will also be questioned again, together with Miss Florence Ziegler, his secretary.

The grand jury also has subpenaed Joseh Fries, otherwise known as Stanley Melco, who was shot in the leg when Hugh McLoon was murdered and William Meister was wounded 21 times at Tenth and Cuthbert streets on Aug. 9. He probably will be examined next week after the jury has cleaned up the question of bribery.

Fries appeared at the habeas corpus hearing of the McLoon and O'Leary murder defendants yesterday, and said he knew nothing about the killers. The District Attorney's assistants think some information regarding the gangsters can be extracted from him in the grand jury room.

Regarding the names of the police and police officials found on the seized records, Monaghan said: "That they will be told you can be sure, but to divulge them just now, while we are investigating, would not be good policy."

FLOAT FROM AMUNDSEN PLANE IS PICKED UP

of the plane, Lieut. Dietrichsen, himself an arctic explorer of considerable note, and a crew composed of Lieut. Albert Cuverville, pilot; Emil Vaizette, radio operator and Gilbert Brazy, mechanic.

Newspaper Speculates on Details of Supposed Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 1.—Dispatches to the newspaper Fstrabladet reporting the finding of one of the pontoons of the Amundsen hydro-airplane, says that the float bore marks of having been violently torn from the machine. It had evidently been in the water a long time.

The newspaper thinks the plane must have crashed June 18 between 7 and 8 o'clock at night when the plane was midway between the Norwegian coast and Bear Island. The last report from the plane reached the Geophysics Laboratory Radio Station at Tromso about 7 p. m. of that day.

Acquaintances of Amundsen, who were present when he started his journey, have identified the pontoon as belonging to the Latham.

Considerable feeling was in evidence on Paris boulevards with the announcements in the papers of the finding of the wreckage. One woman shrieked hysterically: "That's what Frenchmen get for attempting to assist Italians," while shouts of "Shame on Nobile" were heard. At the Ministry of Marine telephone queries as to the fate of the six men in the Latham were answered: "We ing about Capt. Guilbauld, officially."

Floats May Have Been Dropped Purposely to Lighten Plane.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—Friends of Rene Guilbaud, who piloted the plane in which Roald Amundsen was riding when he disappeared are not convinced that the finding of the pontoon from the machine means that it was wrecked. They conjecture that the floats were dropped purposely in order to lighten the plane after its departure from Tromsoe.

ILLINOISAN BEATS FATHER-IN-LAW TO DEATH WITH FISTS

Greenville, Ill., Truck Driver Says He Had Been Accused of Embracing His Mother-in-Law.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GREENVILLE, Ill., Sept. 1.—Charged with the murder of Bert File, his father-in-law, in a quarrel over his alleged attentions to his mother-in-law, Harold H. Brown, 27-year-old truck-driver, is held here without bond.

Brown gave himself up to the authorities late Friday night after he had beaten his father-in-law to death in a fist fight on a hard road a quarter mile south of the city limits. Before a Coroner's jury today he told of the argument that started when File accused him of putting his arm around Mrs. Nellie File, as the three were seated in the File touring car.

Brown's wife filed suit against him for divorce on Aug. 3, charging him with cruelty. The son-in-law met File Friday morning, he said, and the two men discussed Brown's domestic difficulties. After several hours of drinking in a bar at Pocahontas, they returned to Greenville, and separated.

"Late that afternoon I saw my father-in-law again," Brown said. "His car was parked near his house and my mother-in-law was in the seat with him. They told me to get in. I entered the car and reached my hand back to close the door. When I did that my father-in-law accused me of hugging my mother-in-law. I didn't want an argument and I started to get out of the car. My father-in-law kicked me in the stomach then. That made me mad. I told him to get out of that car and fight, but he wouldn't budge."

Mrs. File got out of the car, Brown said, and his father-in-law told him then that they must drive to the edge of town to "fight this thing out." When they had reached a secluded spot a quarter-mile south of town, File jumped out of the car, Brown declared, and shouted: "Now you're going to take it."

Brown said he pleaded with his father-in-law not to force a fight, but the older man reached his hand suddenly to his hip-pocket. Then Brown hit him in the temple, he said, knocking him down. The fight lasted a half-hour. When Brown left his father-in-law, File's countenance had been battered beyond all recognition and every bone in his face had been broken. Brown swore he used only his fists. Later he went home, washed the blood from his hands, and then gave himself up.

The Coroner's jury made no recommendation for holding Brown for the Grand Jury, finding merely that Bert File had met his death at the hands of Brown in a fight. State's Attorney J. H. Allio of Bond County, however, heard Brown's story, and had a warrant sworn out, charging him with murder.

There was no witness to the fight, but Brown's brother, who reached the scene as the truck-driver was leaving his father-in-law's body, said Brown remarked: "Well, I laid him out."

WISCONSIN ATTORNEY IS SHOT TO DEATH IN STREET

Alleged Assailant, Involved With Victim in $34,000 Law Suit, Denies Guilt.

By the Associated Press.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., Sept. 1.—Assassination of a prominent Fond Du Lac attorney as he sat in his parked automobile in the downtown district at noon today, followed by the capture of his alleged assailant a few moments later, is believed to have been based on a $34,000 law suit in which the men have been enmeshed for more than two years.

The dead man is E. W. Phelps, 73 years old, attorney and real estate operator, and the alleged slayer is James Devoy, 65, a farmer living near the town of Oakfield.

Phelps was killed as he sat talking to Miss Frances Tooley of Green Bay, while her aunt, Miss Mary Tooley, who lived at Phelps' home, was shopping. The slayer, identified by Miss Tooley as Devoy, approached the car, she said. He made a gesture as if to shake hands with the attorney. "Well what are you going to do about it," the man is said to have asked, at the same time reaching into his pocket and drawing a revolver, Miss Tooley said.

"You can't shoot me; don't," Phelps screamed, Miss Tooley said.

The man did not answer but shot at the attorney, who slumped in his seat with a bullet below the right eye. Physicians said Phelps died instantly. The man then tossed the revolver into the car with, "take that, too," wheeled around and walked calmly away.

Devoy was taken to the station. Police said he denied he did the shooting.

LABOR DAY THRONGS AT STATION LARGEST IN YEARS

Lines at Ticket Windows Seven and Eight Deep—700 Fans to Cincinnati.

Viewing the throng of men, women and children that poured through the midway and waiting rooms of Union Station last night, lining seven and eight deep at the ticket windows, station executives declared it the largest crowd that had passed through the station in recent years.

E. B. Hickman, general superintendent of the Terminal Railroad Association, estimated that between 15,000 and 20,000 persons boarded trains in the station between 2 and 10 p. m., exceeding by one-third the number that left the city during last year's Labor day holidays.

During the eight-hour period, 25 special trains pulled out of the station, including excurson trains and extra sections of regular trains, each laden with its share of humanity. Among the specials were three trains bound for Cincinnati, with about 700 baseball fans who planned to attend the Cardinals-Cincinnati game today.

OPERATORS GET INCREASE IN LARGER PICTURE THEATERS

New Union Wage Rate Adding $5 a Week Announced After Conference of Representatives.

Union moving picture machine operators here have been granted a wage increase of $5 a week in theaters charging 25 cents or more for admission, it was announced following a conference late yesterday between union officers and representatives of theater owners. The increase becomes effective today.

The wage increase applies to practically all the chain theaters, all the large houses and five of the 58 theaters in the independent group. The admission charge in the majority of the independent theaters is less than 25 cents a person, and the operators' pay in these houses will remain $53 a week. Under the agreement operators' wages in the theaters affected by the increase will now range from $58 a week to $85 in the larger theaters having continuous daily performances. The independent theater operators recently imposed a $4-a-week cut in wages upon union musicians playing in their theaters.

SMITH TO SPEND LABOR DAY IN REST AT HOME

Decides That Week-End at Sea Shore or in Mountains Would Be Too Fatiguing.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Gov. Smith settled down today to enjoy a quiet week-end at the Executive Mansion. He barred politics and work for a few days, and figured he could get more comfort and rest here than by joining the Labor Day exodus to the sea or mountains.

Before he became a Democratic presidential nominee, Smith was able, even though Governor, to slip away for a vacation with some degree of seclusion. Those days are over. His last week-end in New Jersey, where he continuously was the center of crowds, convinced him of that.

More than anything right now, as he prepares for the hardships of campaigning, the Democratic standard bearer is looking for rest and sleep. At the Executive Mansion he feels that he can get both, and at the same time enjoy close contact with his family.

The Governor's Mansion.

The mansion, a rambling red brick structure among trees about six blocks from the Capitol, was first used more than a half century ago by Gov. Samuel J. Tilden just before, as a Democrat, he almost captured the presidency. It is surrounded by a high iron fence that serves to exclude the curious, although none of the gates is ever locked. On three sides of the big house are porches, the rooms have high ceilings and are cool, and to the rear is the Zoo housing the monkeys, deer and other animals that have been presented to the Governor.

In these surroundings the Democratic leader will take it easy for a few days. There he will be able to romp with his three small grandchildren, the eldest just old enough to sing "The Sidewalks of New York," and propose "three cheers for the next President of the United States."

Plays Golf With Kenny.

For the week-end the family circle has been expanded to include the Governor's close friend, William F. Kenny, New York millionaire, on whose special car the nominee will travel during the campaign. It was Kenny, the heaviest contributor to his preconvention campaign fund, who told Senate investigators he was ready to plunge still deeper into his pocket to aid his friend in his quest for the presidency.

Kenny brought along the golf sticks and with the weather ideal the Governor and he lost little time today in getting in some exercise. They also had in mind a swim or two over the holiday in the pool on the farm, near Albany, of Lieutenant-Governor Corning.

Gov. Smith put this holiday rest schedule into effect today by calling off his usual daily press conference. He sent word to newspaper men that he had no news, and particularly that he had no comment to make at this time on the cable from Europe of William R. Hearst, predicting his defeat and taking a fling at Tammany and John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

CALLES REFUSES TO CONTINUE IN THE PRESIDENCY

power by any other than constitutional means."

"The death of the President-elect constitutes an irreparable loss," the President continued. "It leaves the country in a particularly difficult situation because of the total lack, not of capable, well prepared men, which fortunately we have, but of unquestionable outstanding personalities whose names and prestige have sufficient hold on public opinion to merit general confidence. With the disappearance of Gen. Obregon, the country faces one of its gravest, most vital problems, not merely of political character but affecting the very life of the nation."

"I first deem it necessary to make a final, unalterable declaration on my word of honor to Congress, to the country and to the family of civilized nations," he said. "Perhaps never have circumstances placed the head of a nation in a more propitious atmosphere to return to the principle of perpetuation in office of one man. Suggestions and promises have been made to me, even certain pressure exerted, all under guise that it would be for the best interest of the country for me to continue in office. But I have decided solemnly with such clearness of words that it cannot be misinterpreted, that I shall not seek prolongation of my term either by accepting a prolongation of my present term of office or my appointment as a provisional President. Aside from other considerations, I do this because of the need I consider categorical and final, to pass from the system of government by Caudillos to a clean one of government by institutions. Never, for any reason, under any circumstances, shall I return to the presidency.

Not to Quit Public Life.

"This does not mean that I have even the remote intention of abandoning my civic duties or of retiring from the life of struggle and responsibilities which is the lot of every soldier and of every man in the 'revolution.' I know there are plenty of situations in the military, administration, political and civic fields which I can occupy, which, however modest and insignificant, will mean for me complete acceptance of the responsibilities and dangers involved and give me an opportunity to discharge my duties as a man of the 'revolution.'

"Thus we eliminate the traditional policy in Mexico of 'the indispensable man'."

Calles then advised Congress to call the presidential elections at a date which would give everybody desirous of running plenty of time and opportunity to do so and also abundant time for the formation of public opinion.

"In selecting a provisional President it is not the man himself but the exaltation of the law that can and must be the source of strength, prestige, loyalty and authority for his success as executive of the nation. Your selection will receive all of the material and moral support of my Government as well as the material and moral support of the army which fulfills and dignifies its noble and only mission as guardian of the dignity and safety of the nation."

The President said that the workers, peasants and revolutionary family of intellectual and privileged classes, even opponents of the new conception of the revolution all will support this common aspiration of directing Mexico under a genuinely institutional Government which will be the guarantee of material stability and organic peace.

MRS. MEREDITH NICHOLSON WILL VOTE FOR GOV. SMITH

Author's Wife, Formerly Republican, Believes He Is "Admirably Qualified" for President.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Mrs. Meredith Nicholson of Indianapolis, wife of the author and heretofore a Republican, in a letter to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, chairman of the Women's Advisory Committee of the Democratic National Committee, yesterday said she would vote for Gov. Smith for President, Democratic headquarters announced.

"Gov. Smith impresses me as representing finely the hope and promise of American life," Mrs. Nicholson's letter said. "All that I have heard of him encourages the belief that he is in every way admirably qualified to serve the American people as President with all honor and dignity."

OFFICIAL ACTS OF TOOMBS' AIDS INQUIRED INTO

Investigation Made in Preparation for Presentation of Case to Grand Jury This Month.

When the September grand jury meets this month Circuit Attorney Sidener will present evidence against four officers and one employe of the International Life Insurance Co. besides Roy C. Toombs, who was president until the company was reinsured by the Missouri State Life, and against whom four extradition warrants charging larceny and illegal issue of stock have been granted by the Governor of Illinois for his removal from Chicago to St. Louis.

The Post-Dispatch learned yesterday that the Circuit Attorney's office has been studying documentary evidence and questioning prospective grand jury witnesses to determine what part other officers and employes of the International might have had in some of the transactions by Toombs that resulted in wrecking the company by his withdrawal of $3,500,000 of its assets for which he has not accounted.

The offical acts of Dr. D. F. Morgenstiern, W. F. Grantges and T. J. McReynolds Jr., vice president of the company under the administration of Toombs, are known to be under inquiry by the Circuit Attorney's office as part of the general investigation.

Darst's Indictment to Be Sought.

W. G. Darst, secretary of the company, who has admitted signing stock certificates made out to Toombs as owner, has been arrested under a warrant in this connection, and an indictment againest him will be sought.

An employe whose acts have been inquired into is B. O. McReynolds, who with his brother, T. J. McReynolds Jr., has the Memphis agency of the company. He accompanied Dr. Morgenstiern, confidential adviser of Toombs, when Dr. Morgenstiern took $500,000 in securities of the insurance company to New York for Toombs. McReynolds has stated he merely accompanied Dr. Morgenstiern as a guard and had no hand in the transaction.

The name of T. J. McReynolds as a vice president and member of the finance committee of the company, is on a certificate for 10,000 shares of stock made out to Toombs as owner and upon which Toombs borrowed $235,000 in New York. This certificate is said to be an overissue of stock in the company. McReynolds has said he did not sign it.

Grantges Going to Minneapolis.

Grantges was a member of the Board of Directors, and Toombs asserts this body approved some of his deals. A few days ago Grantges announced he would join the Missouri State Life organization as a vice president to work on the International account, but since then has accepted an offer with an insurance company with headquarters at Minneapolis and will not be connected with the Missouri company.

Circuit Attorney Sidener was in Chicago most of last week endeavoring to get service on Toombs under the extradition warrants issued by Gov. Small, but probably will wait until Toombs is released from Federal custody as a bankruptcy court witness.

Several hearings in the bankruptcy proceeding were held last week in Chicago and adjournment was taken until Sept. 12. Referee Charles had little success in tracing assets missing from Toombs & Daily Co., the Chicago investment house of Toombs.

Claims Against Bank.

In addition to the claim for $43,000 filed in Chicago against Toombs & Daily by Dr. George Rendleman of St. Louis, medical examiner of the International Life, who said he gave securities in this amount to Toombs to convert into cash, there was another claim of $115,000 filed with State Auditor Nelson against the State Bank & Trust Co. of Downers Grove, a suburb of Chicago, of which Toombs was president. This claim was filed by the J. J. Dunnegan Contracting Co. of South Bend, Ind., with the statement that Toombs removed these securities from the bank on a promise to sell them for cash and return the money to the Dunnegan, but did not do so.

To Reorganize Bank.

Directors of the bank voted Friday night to organize a new depository and take over the deposit liabilities of the old. The new bank probably will be named the Downers Grove State Bank.

The new suburban bank, it is announced by State Auditor Oscar Nelson, will assume $700,000 in liabilities of the State Bank & Trust Co., which was closed Aug. 17, shortly after Toombs had resigned as its president.

The new bank is expected to open in about 10 days with a capital and surplus of $100,000 each.

Work Addresses Maine Workers.

By the Associated Press.

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 1.—Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the Republican National Committee, addressed the members of the State Committee and the various chairmen of the County Committees here today. He was the first National Committee chairman to visit Maine since 1920.

DRY PRESIDENTIAL NOMINEE DESERTED BY HIS CHAIRMAN

Varney Must Raise His Own Fund as Committee Will Use $100,000 to Fight Smith.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—William F. Varney, presidential nominee of the Prohibition party, decided today to conduct a lone campaign for election. This decision was reached, after Dr. D. Leigh Colvin, chairman of the National Committee of the party, who holds that four-fifths of the party members favor Hoover, announced he would solicit campaign funds of $100,000 for the sole purpose of an "anti-Smith" campaign.

By a vote of four to three, the Executive Committee of the party, decided yesterday to keep Varney and James Edgerton, vice presidential nominee, in the field. Dr. Colvin did not vote.

Today Varney conferred with Dr. Colvin and then announced tentative arrangements for a special campaign committee, which will raise its funds and conduct its campaign entirely separate from the campaign of the National Committee.

"We are out to fight Gov. Al Smith," Dr. Colvin stated. "The country does not realize what it would mean to have a wet Tammany man possessing the powers of party leadership as President.

"Four-fifths of the prohibition party are in favor of Herbert Hoover for President. The supreme objective of all good citizens in this campaign is to annihilate the beverage liquor traffic and maintain the Constitution."

Five Swim Away From Ellis Island

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Five Scandinavians held at Ellis Island for deportation escaped today and swam to Jersey City, where two of them were captured. Txor Nelson, 29 years old and Scefre Knussezer, 20, both of Norway, were arrested.

ENDS LIFE BY POISON WHEN WIFE LEAVES HIM

Harry Woodman, Father of Eight Children Found Kneeling at Bedside, Dead.

Harry Woodman, 56 years old, owner of the Elite Jewelry and Novelty Co., 4808 Delmar boulevard, and father of eight children, whose wife left him after a quarrel Thursday, ended his life by swallowing poison at his home, 4730A Olive street, early yesterday.

His body was found in a kneeling position beside his bed at 6 o'clock in the morning. A can of poison, a glass and a spoon were near. The children said he had been despondent over his wife's departure and had cried during the night.

The children are Doris, 19; William, 16; Helen, 14; Earl, 10; Ralph, 8; Ruth, 6, all living at home, and Albert Woodman, a wounded ex-service man, living in California, and Mrs. Mildred McKenna of Everett, Mass. The family moved to St. Louis from Milwaukee two years ago.

FREIBURG PASSION PLAY GIVEN IN PARK

First of Nine Presentations at Municipal Theater a Moving Performance.

The first performance of the Freiburg Passion Play, which will be presented for nine evenings in St. Louis, was given last night at the Municipal Theater before an audience that filled about half the auditorium. The large cast was made up entirely of the original Freiburg players headed by Adolph Fassnacht who undertook the role of The Christ. The singing chorus in the pit, however, was recruited from local talent as were the various supernumeraries and members of the mob who participated in the stage action.

The dramatic narrative was concerned with the last three days of Jesus' life beginning with his final entrance into Jerusalem and ending with the Crucifixion.

One assumes that in the original Passion Play at Freiburg the crudities and naivete of a dramatic performance given by untrained peasants, helped to make it all the more effective. Under conditions of that sort, in fact, artistry would be artificiality. But when the play is removed from the setting in which it arose more or less spontaneously and is transferred to a stage of a certain amount of stagecraft becomes immediately necessary.

Last night's performance suffered from a general lack of this technique. There was little evidence that any sort of artistic principles had been applied to the working out of the dramatic narrative, to the grouping of the figures on the stage, to the lighting or the incidental music. The lighting and music were particularly ineffective.

In spite of these defects, however, the excellent group of principal players gave, what was on the whole, a moving performance. Though the dialogue was spoken in German the audience had little difficulty in following its general meaning even where it strayed from the Biblical story.

Adolph Fassnacht had all the dignity, restraint and nobility of utterance that one would expect from a player who essayed the delicate task of portraying the character of the Nazarene.

The orchestra was under the direction of Frederick Fischer and the musical accompaniment to the progress of the play was derived from Wagner, Faure, Haendel and others. —T. B. S.

An "air derby" for model airplanes will be held on the old air mail field in Forest Park, opposite Forest Park Highlands, beginning at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

The exhibition is sponsored by the B. Nugent & Bro. Dry Goods Co., which has organized a Junior Aero Club of 500 members, the majority of whom have entered model planes in the competition. Winners will be awarded prizes offered by the Chamber of Commerce, the Post-Dispatch, St. Louis Star, St. Louis Times, Robertson Aircraft Corporation, the St. Louis Police Board, Parks Air Lines, Col. John A. Paegelow, commandant of Scott Field, and others. The models are propelled by twisted rubber bands.

Judges of the contest will be Harlan Gurney, air mail pilot, and George Clark, secretary of the St. Louis Model Airplane Club. Prizes will be awarded by Col. Paegelow. Planes from Lambert-St. Louis Field and Parks Airport, and dirigibles from Scott Field will fly over the park during the "derby."

WOMAN FINDS EX-CONVICT WHO STOLE RING AND $275

After Five Months Rooming House Proprietor Locates James Monroe, Who Confesses.

James R. Monroe, 48 years old, a three-term ex-convict, yesterday confessed the theft of a diamond ring and $275 cash on April 9, last, from the rooming house of Mrs. Mamie Allison, at 1919 North Thirteenth street, where he had been employed for a day of carpenter work.

For five months Mrs. Allison investigated privately but not until Friday did she learn that Monroe was living at Northgate and Colburg drives in the "Riverview Gardens" district of North St. Louis. She told police and Monroe was found there. He said he had given the ring to a woman and spent the money for liquor.

CHAMBERLAIN KEEPS TO CABIN

By the Associated Press.

LA ROCHELLE, France, Sept. 1.—The condition of Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Minister, has shown little improvement on the first two days of his sea voyage to the coast of California. He was carried aboard the steamer Orcoma at Liverpool Thursday and today, when the ship called at La Rochelle, was too ill to receive official French callers.

MISSOURI HARD TO WIN, DAVIS TELLS COOLIDGE

War Secretary, at Summer White House, Places Hope on Farmer Vote and Democratic Split.

SAYS WEST COAST IS STRONG FOR HOOVER

President Also Listens to Political Reports From Ohio and Hears of Agrarian Conditions.

By the Associated Press.

SUPERIOR, Wis., Sept. 1.—Consideration of the general agricultural situation in the country and discussion of some army matters consumed most of the President's day at the Summer White House, where Secretary Davis of the War Department and Eugene Meyer, chairman of the Federal Farm Loan Board, were guests.

The War Secretary said he had found the West Coast States even more ardently pro-Hoover than when he had left them to go to Hawaii. Regarding his own plans in the campaign, he said upon arriving in Washington he would consult with Representative Walter Newton of Minnesota, head of the Republican Campaign Speakers' Bureau, to determine how he could best be useful to his party's cause.

Before leaving Superior after his visit to the Summer White House, Secretary Davis said that the necessity for improving and extending waterways as a means of obtaining cheaper transportation rates would be the principal theme of what campaign speeches he would make.

Indicating the preference for the St. Lawrence canal over other proposed Great Lakes-to-ocean waterways, the War Secretary said that he would emphasize in his addresses the benefits which cheaper transportation would bring to inland states, but especially to the Central agricultural region which would thereby be in a much better position to face foreign agrarian competition.

Comments on Missouri Campaign.

Davis admitted that the November electoral fight in his home state of Missouri would be very hard. He thought, however, that on account of the split in the Democratic ranks in that state over the prohibition issue and due also to the belief that Hoover would pick up many farm votes which heretofore had been Democratic, the Republicans would in all likelihood carry the state.

He added that Gov. Smith's criticism of the present allocation of immigration quotas under the 1924 act would lose him votes among the city population of German origin despite their sympathy with the Democratic nominee's attitude on prohibition. Secretary Davis had reservations to continue on his trip tonight.

With Meyer's arrival at the White House, President Coolidge had at his disposal the gist of numerous reports which had come to the Farm Loan Bureau relating to conditions in the various agrarian states. The chief executive was much interested to receive such expert advice.

Mr. Coolidge was all the more interested in Meyer's information on account of the reports which he has been receiving lately from a long succession of White House visitors regarding the political outlook in Middle Western and Northwestern states. Walter Brown, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, who was prominent in Herbert Hoover's preconvention campaign, especially in Ohio, departed only this evening after an overnight stay at Cedar Island Lodge, during which he explained to the chief executive conditions in Ohio.

President Fishes in Lake.

The first day of the closed trout season in Wisconsin in open streams found Mr. Coolidge angling in one of the privately stocked lakes on the estate. Although regretting greatly his inability to continue fishing on the Brule River, whose daily generosity with its fish provided him with more fun than he has had in years, the chief executive found that the fish he went after today were not as bad sport as he had been led to believe they would be.

Although not as game or as vivacious as the trout in the free and hazardous life of the open stream, the fish in today's lakes were bigger than most of those in the river and, therefore, required enough skill for their capture not to make the day's sport uninteresting.

President and Mrs. Coolidge will have their son John with them for the last time tomorrow at Sunday services at the little church at Brule. John is off for the East on Monday, ostensibly to find work and settle down to earn his living. His destination is said to be Hartford, Conn., where he has often stayed before as guest of the family of Gov. Trumbull of that State.

His exact plans after arriving at Hartford John will not reveal, not even to the extent of saying whether he has or has not accepted an occupation. To young friends he has made this summer in the neighborhood of Cedar Island Lodge he has often referred, however, to a "job" he would soon take up.

FARMER-LABOR PARTY TO NOMINATE AGAIN SEPT. 5

Secretary Failed to Notify Nominees, Both of Whom Declined Anyway.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 1.—A call has been issued for a second Farmer-Labor party convention to be held in Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 5, says William Penn Collins, National Executive Committeeman of the party, in a statement today. "The Farmer-Labor party nominated candidates for President and Vice President in July, Norris and Vereen, both of whom declined," his statement says. "It is understood now that Bert Martin of Denver, national secretary, failed to notify the candidates. A new national secretary will be elected."

AUTOGRAPHIC COPY OF "THE RAVEN" SOLD

Collector Buys Manuscript With Prospect It Will Go to British Museum.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The only known autographic copy of "The Raven," Edgar Allan Poe's masterpiece, has been bought by a collector, with the prospect that the British Museum will become its final home. This balances the recent withdrawal from England of the manuscript copy of "Alice in Wonderland," given by the author to the original of "Alice" soon after the issue of the book.

Present owners of the two manuscripts have been equally firm in having their identity and prices they paid withheld from publication, but experts surmise that each of the transactions may well have approached six figures.

"The Raven" copy carries the ful 16 stanzas of the poem, all in the refined autograph of Poe, on two double sheets of paper, measuring 8 by 10 inches, four pages, four stanzas to a page, with the Poe signature at the end and an added line of inscription.

Poe Letter in Morgan Library.

The only other quotation from "The Raven" in Poe's hand, of which collectors know, is a Poe letter in the J. P. Morgan library, which contains only two stanzas, and is regarded as a priceless document.

Thomas F. Madigan, a veteran dealer in rare autographs, whose shop is a resort for collectors, made the sale of "The Raven" rarity. It had never been publicly offered. The "Alice" manuscript, of which the public first heard last April, passed through the hands of Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, and the year's laurels in autograph exchanges of the first importance thus crown the enterprise of two American dealers.

Dr. Rosenbach paid $75,259 for "Alice" in Sotheby's, London, in April, at an auction sale for the account of Alice Pleasance Hargreaves, the "Alice" of Carroll's story, whose circumstances at 74 led her to part with her childhood keepsake. English sentiment resented the capture of such a treasure by an American buyer, and Dr. Rosenbach offered to surrender the manuscript to any British institution that would pay his cost for it.

No one came forward to meet that price, and Dr. Rosenbach brought the manuscript home with him. Soon after his return he announced that he had sold it, but did not name the buyer or the price. It was understood that a Philadelphia collector got it. Joseph E. Widener's name has been linked with the last purchase.

Copied It for Classmate.

Poe copied "The Raven" with an inscription to his college classmate and constant friend, Dr. Samuel A. Whitaker of Phoenixville, Pa. It remained in the Whitaker family until May of last year, when Mrs. Edith D. Whitaker, tempted by the extraordinary prices for literary treasures at public sale, decided to try the market with it.

She consulted George C. Grasburger, a Philadelphia bookseller, who called in Madigan. He bought it and kept it until the unnamed collector acquired it. Nothing was heard of the sale until whisperings among collectors brought it to the New York World's attention today. Madigan confirmed the news of the sale, but respected the injunction laid upon him as to purchaser and price.

Poe letters without association interest have sold at public auction as high as $4000. A first edition of "Tamerlane," of small pamphlet size, written undoubtedly by Poe, although the title page said "By a Bostonian," has sold for $17,600. Owen D. Young, a Poe collector, has a first edition of the same work, for which he is understood to have paid Charles Goodspeed of Boston $15,000.

Poe had trouble in finding a publisher for "The Raven." He failed to place it with George A. Graham of Philadelphia, although he pleaded with him that he was in pressing need of money and his wife was starving. Finally the American Whig Review paid him $10 for it. The manuscript bought by that paper went to the printers in the usual way of manuscripts and was tossed aside after the type had been set from it.

MORE G. O. P. VOTES TO SMITH ON LIQUOR ISSUE

Three Additional Missouri Anti-Prohibition Leaders Say They Will Vote for New Yorker.

The names of 11 more men have been added to the list of St. Louis Republicans who intend to vote for Gov. Smith because of his stand on the prohibition question.

Three Repubican members of the Advisory Committee of the Missouri Association Against Prohibition yesterday declared themselves for Gov. Smith, in response to inquiries by the Post-Dispatch, in addition to five Republican members who previously had announced a similar intention. Eight of the nine members of the law firm of Schneider, Cooney & Garesche, in the Central National Bank Building, also have announced they will vote for Gov. Smith.

William R. Schneider, unsuccessful candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor of Missouri in the recent primary, alone of the wine law partners, intends to vote a staright Republican ticket. The Smith supporters in his office are Joseph J. Cooney, Sarpy J. Noonan, Alex A. A. Garesche, Martin Meyer, Henry J. McMahon, Edward A. Ferrenbach, Anthony Canzoneri and August Walz.

Smith "Admirable" Man.

Noonan, who has voted a straight Republican ticket for many years, expressed the view of himself and his associates. He said: "Hoover's contention that the prohibition law cannot be changed is ridiculous. His contention that it can be enforced has already been disproven and any thinking man will realize that the fact must be admitted. Gov. Smith has courageously declared himself. He is an admirable man who has established a reputation for honesty and intelligence. He has broken with the old ideas of Bryanism and the other wornout traditions of his party. I am supporting him both as an individual and an enemy of prohibition."

The other seven "Smith Republicans" indorsed Noonan's view and Garesche, the son of the late Judge Vital M. Garesche, a Repbulican, added a purely economic argument to the effect that the man who spends $100 a month for liquor to entertain his friends, would save at least half that sum if the eighteenth amendment were revoked or changed.

Schneider argues that his Republican colleagues put too much importance on the prohibition question and holds that it is a minor issue.

More Anti-Dry Support.

The additions to the Smith supporters in the ranks of the Missouri Association Against Prohibition are:

George H. Capen of 501 Clara avenue, partner in the insurance firm of George D. Capen & Co.

Edward H. Vogel of 4057A Lafayette avenue, machinery dealer.

Charles Scudder of 4400 McPherson avenue, a member of the investment firm of Whitaker & Co.

A. L. Shapleigh, chairman of the board of the Shapleigh Hardware Co., president of the St. Louis Public Service Co., a vice-president of the association, and a Republican who has helped to finance the party for many years, wired from Harbor Springs, Mich.: "I expect to support all Republicans who believe as I do that the present prohibition laws are wrong in theory, ineffective in operation and are working an injury to our country by breeding disrespect for all laws." Presumably this eliminates Hoover.

George H. Capen's Views.

George H. Capen said: "Yes, I'm a Republican and while I may change my mind I intend now to vote for Gov. Smith. I believe he is the logical candidate. I am in sympathy with his views on prohibition and admire his constructive policies and executive ability in handling affairs of state."

Edward H Vogel telegraphed from Memphis: "I have always been a Republican nationally but due to the frank and courageous position of Gov. Smith on the prohibition question, I have decided to vote for and support him at the forthcoming election. I consider the Eighteenth Amendment a menace to our government."

Charles Scudder telegraphed from Midland, Ontario: "It is my intention to vote for Gov. Smith on account of the position he has taken with regard to the eighteenth amendment."

Organizing Smith Clubs.

Organization of "Smith for President" clubs in Missouri, Illinosi, Iowa, Nebraska. Kansas, Oklahoma Kentucky and Tennessee has begun under the auspices of the Democratic Central Regional Headquarters here, with George H. Moore, former United States Collector of Internal Revenue, in charge of the work. Several hundred such clubs have been established one at Muskogee, Okla., which has 500 members, all of whom are said to Republicans. A former Republican, it was announced, is State President of the Nebraska "Smith for President" Clubs.

An advisory committee of 100 is being selected from the 3000 members of the 'Smith for President Club of St. Louis and their first meeting will be held Thursday evening. A centrally-located headquarters for the club also will be selected this week. Fred H. Fricke, former State Food and Drug Commissioner is president of the club; Richard Reichard, vice president; Joseph T. Davis, treasurer, and Frank S. Kowalski, secretary.

ANTI-CATHOLIC CABAL ASSAILED BY DR. VAN DYKE

Its Activity Deplored by Protestant Clergyman and Former Minister to Netherlands.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The reilgious issue in the presidential campaign was brought out of the whispering stage by the Democratic National Committee today.

The Smith managers made public a long warning to the American people by Dr. Henry Van Dyke, Protestant clergyman, author and diplomat, against the anti-Catholic cabal directed to keep Gov. Smith from the White House, solely because of his Roman Catholic religious faith.

Absolving Herbert Hoover from participation in the cabal, Dr. Van Dyke, who was Minister to the Netherlands during the World War, calls attention to the Republican nominee's failure to attempt to restrain and check "the pernicious activity of his supporters, who are convinced that a victory for their party justifies any means which they employ to secure it."

"The danger to America's dearly gained liberties has taken a new fomr, more subtle, more plausible and therefore more menacing than in the early days of the republic," Dr. Van Dyke asserts in a letter to William Church Osborn, director of finance for the Democratic National Committee in New York State. "To exclude a man from the presidency by votes cast against him on the ground that he is a Catholic would dishonor the pledged faith of America and cast away her most precious heritage.

To Meet Issue Openly.

It is the view of the Smith managers that the religious intolerance issue must be dealt a smashing blow if Gov. Smith is to have a fair chance of consideration on the legitimate issues of the campaign. The method of combat to be used, it is understood, is to appeal to the Americanism and fairness of the electorate. Dr. Van Dyke's appeal, which he has called "In Defense of Religious Liberty," is to be but one of many such combative efforts.

Dr. Van Dyke last month answered an article in the Congregationalist written by Dr. Charles E. Jefferson of the Broadway Tabernacle on religion and the Smith candidacy. Dr. Van Dyke has been praised and attacked for his deefnse of Gov. Smith and his rebuke to those "who are attempting to arouse and array religious prejudice and hostility in a political campaign in the United States of America."

Asserting that his advanced age, 75 years (he says he is "pretty near the end of this life") puts him in a positioi of having nothing to gain or lose in the way of political office, Dr. Van Dyck wrote that he "will resist to the very end of life," the anti-Catholic campaign against Gov. Smith.

The question of religious tolerance "seems to me far and away the most important question before the country today," wrote Dr. Van Dyke, "a question not to be answered by heated appeals to partisan allegiance—a question not raised, thank God, by either of the honorable candidates for the presidency, but a burning question thrust upon the conscience of every American voter by the overt fulminations and covert whisperings of those who seek to defeat one oft he candidates because he is a Catholic.

"Freedom of conscience is the greatest thing at stake in this campaign. Hundreds of thousands of voters fail to realize it. Interested in other matters, they ignore this vital cause. Both ofthe presidential candidates in this election are men of integrity and ability. Our choce between them should be made on a conscientious conviction of their respective equipment for the difficult task."

J. L. WINKELMEYER FUNERAL

The funeral of Julius L. Winkelmeyer, who was brewmaster in the brewery of his father, Julius Winkelmeyer, until it was absorbed by a syndicate years ago, will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow from the residence, 4373 West Pine boulevard, to Bellefontain Cemetery.

Winkelmeyer, who was 69 years old, died of cancer Friday. He had never married, and is survived by a brother and two sisters. Another brother, Adolph Winkelmeyer, president of Union Biscuit Co., died Aug. 3.

WOMAN TAKES POISON AT BAR

Mrs. Hattie Zemblidge, 23 years old, of 3938 Cottage avenue, walked into a saloon at 3801 Easton avenue yesterday afternoon, bought a glass of root beer, emptied a three-ounce bottle of poison into it, and swallowed the mixture.

The proprietor called policemen, who administered milk and raw eggs as an antidote and then removed Mrs. Zemblidge to the City Hospital where she is in serious condition. She said her husband had quarreled wtih her.

CHICAGO-TO-MINNEAPOLIS AIR-RAIL SERVICE STARTED

Eight Hours Cut From Time Required to Make Journey.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—The East and Northwest were connected today by co-ordinated rail and air passenger service, when the Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc. began the operation of a definite schedule of passenger-carrying airplanes between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The service, which marks the inauguration in this country of scheduled air-rail travel is participated in by the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Northwest Airways, Inc., a subsidiary of the Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc.

Approximately eight hours has been cut from the time required to make the train journey between Chicago and the twin cities. The planes will connect at both terminals with trains to and from the east and west.

The planes to be used are of all-metal construction with enclosed cabins. Each will carry 12 passengers.

COUNTY REDISTRICTING INCREASES PRECINCTS

Number Changed From 121 to 140 but Boundaries of 100 Are to Be Changed.

St. Louis County is being redistricted in voting precincts by the County Election Board, and as a result many voters will find themselves in different precincts henceforth.

The number of precincts is being increased from 121 to 140, and this involves changing the boundaries of 100 of those existing and adding 19 additonal ones. On the basis of the last registration of voters, the average number per precinct under the new districting will be about 400, which, the Election Board thinks, approximates the ideal.

900 in Some Precincts.

Some of the heavily populated suburban precincts have had as many as 900 voters, which is far too many for proper handling when there is heavy voting. Some of these will be split into two units. The coming new registration for the next four years, which is to be held Sept. 25, 26 and 29, may swell the qualified electorate, thereby increasing the average number per precinct somewhat.

Chairman McElhinney of the Election Board (Rep.) wanted 160 precincts for greater ease of handling the ballots, but Secretary Hiller (Dem.) advocated 135. The County Court, or administrative body, which has the county budget to consider, urged that the number be kept as small as possible, since each day the polls are open it costs the county $52 per precinct for salaries of the local election officials, poll rent and fees to the Constables for transporting and setting up the booths.

Lack of Map Hampers Board.

Lack of a proper map showing deails of the county has hampered the Election Board in the redistricting. Title companies are preparing an appropriate plat for the board. The new arrangement has not been completed, although advertisements by the board in the latest issues of county newspapers list the 140 units by name and number, in some instances omitting the polling place.

Kirkwood annexed a large area to its south and west more than a year ago, and the redistricting divides Kirkwood into new precincts. That suburb will have six instead of five, and there will be only eignt others in all the rest of Bonhomme Township, including Valley Park.

Georgia Negroes Have Smith Club.

By the Associated Press.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Sept. 1.—The Valdosta Times said today that an "Al Smith for President League" was organized here last night at a rally of Negro residents of this city. Resolutions were adopted condemning the Republican attitude toward the Negro and commending Smith's views on prohibition and other issues.

KEARNEY BACKS SMITH AT 1 TO 2 IN MISSOURI

Betting Commissioner Posts Odds on Each Nominee in All of the States.

Thomas M. Kearney, St. Louis betting commissioner, has enlarged his presidential book of last week to include odds on every State. He points out that the odds do not reflect his opinion of the chances of the candidates but the trend of the betting, particularly the amount of the money being offered on the two candidates.

For the nation at large, Smith is quoted at 2 to 1—that is, a $1 bet on Smith will pay $2 if Smith wins. Hoover is 2 to 5—that is, a bet of $5 on Hoover will pay $2 if Hoover wins. The scale makes Hoover strongly the favorite. In Missouri, the quotations are nearly reversed, with Smith a strong favorite to carry the State. The Missouri quotation on Smith is 1-2, and on Hoover 3-2.

The quotations by States follow, the first figure in each case being the amount put up by bookmaker:

Conservative

There's something about Fall and Winter that turns men's taste toward more conservative patterns and colorings in clothing.

Maybe it comes from the feeling that vacations and play-time are over and serious business lies ahead. Anyway, for one of our leading Fall lines, we have had made up for us fifty patterns of "MELBOURNE WOOLENS."

In the main, they are rather sedate, but there is enough warm coloring here and there to keep them from the sombre—and a number of patterns are snappy enough for anybody.

Made of soft, fine strong Australian Wool, than which there is no better—and only $65 a suit.

"Indisposed"

Sometimes it's the "nerves." Other times, systemic. But whatever the cause of an aching head, there's an antidote. Bayer Aspirin stops such pain. Millions wouldn't use it if it didn't! And doctors wouldn't tell men and women to take it freely, if they didn't know it to be perfectly harmless. (Has no effect whatever on the heart.) Genuine Aspirin has Bayer on the box, and proven directions inside.

$200,000 SHORTAGE FOUND IN BROKERAGE FIRM ACCOUNTS

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—Shortage of at least $200,000, and possibly more in the accounts of the H. G. Lane Co., brokers, was announced here today by auditors who have worked for four days over the tangled mass of figures comprising the books of the organization.

The license of the firm was then suspended by Howard C. Ellis, assistant State Corporation Commissioner, who said the commission had been unable to locate any responsible head of the organization. Simultaneously he announced that branches of the firm in Oakland, Portland, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City and Chicago were closed today.

A search has been instituted for H. G. Lane, president of the organization. Frank Horal, former [illegible] and Carl Hendrickson, an employe, were cited on charges of grand theft preferred by a customer who said banks had refused to honor a check paid him by the brokerage house.

EGYPTIAN SAYS HE SWAM CHANNEL FOR HIS KING

Ishak Helmy Accomplishes Feat in 23 Hours, 40 Minutes, After Many Failures.

FOLKESTONE, Eng., Sept. 1.—Ishak Helmy, well-known to habitues of the English Channel for several years as the rotund Egyptian aspirant for swimming honors, today achieved his ambition by stroking through the water between Cape Gris Nez and the English cliffs in 23 hours and 40 minutes.

Helmy was buffeted by currents longer than any other successful Channel swimmer with the exception of the American Sullivan, who started the modern conquests of the turbulent strip several years ago. Waterlogged and almost exhausted, the Egyptian giant barely had the strength to wade ashore at Folkestone and reach for a bottle of champagne that friends gave him while the crowd on the beach cheered. Seawater penetrated his goggles and his eyes were bloodshot. Helmy was so sleepy when he finished that he had difficulty keeping awake long enough to reach his hotel.

Helmy offered no reason for performing the feat other than that he had done it as a tribute to King Fuad of Egypt. I haven't done it for money or reputation but for my king," he said. "My king talked to me several times about the Channel swim and I promised to accomplish it for him."

Helmy had made many unsuccessful attempts to conquer the Channel in the past few years.

DEFEATED REFORM CANDIDATES FILE COUNTY CONTESTS

Peterson and Sutter, Who Sought G. O. P. Nominations for Sheriff and Coroner, Charge Fraud.

Marshall B. Peterson and Dr. John H. Sutter, defeated candidates for Republican nomination for Sheriff and Coroner of St. Louis County, respectively, yesterday filed formal election contest suits in Circuit Court at Clayton, making specific charges of fraud in various precincts.

Both men were the candidates of the Taxpayers' League, which offered a reform slate in the primary of Aug. 7, and Peterson, a former Mayor of Webster Groves, is foreman of the present Federal grand jury and was foreman of the St. Louis County grand jury last year.

They charge that in virtually all of the 121 precincts of the county ballots were illegally registered and not counted, valid ballots were cast but not counted; valid ballots for Peterson and Dr. Sutter were counted for their opponents, Recorder of Deeds Arthur W. Schmid, the nominee for Sheriff, and Roland H. Bopp, son of the present Coroner; illegal ballots were cast for the winners, and voters were induced to vote for Schmid and Bopp by electioneering within the polling places, intimidation and other fraudulent conduct.

Specifically, the suits charge that 3500 disqualified voters were placed on the registration lists in various precincts; that in Hodiamont precinct, 14 persons were illegally registered from 6180 Etzel avenue; that in South Broadway precinct 40 persons, "not residents of Missouri," were fraudulently registered, and that in Longwood precinct, which includes Jefferson Barracks, 200 soldiers who had not resided in the State long enough to be entitled to vote, were fraudulently registered.

Peterson and Dr. Sutter also charge that returns from 28 precincts were held up until 1 a. m. after the election when a definite trend was indicated, after which the returns were altered to insure the election of Schmid and Bopp.

Each contestant contends he was nominated by a margin of 2000.

In the official count, however, Schmid beat Peterson by a vote of 12,122 to 10,866, and Bopp beat Dr. Sutter by a vote of 10,961 to 10,161.

MACEDONIAN REBEL LEADER REPORTED SLAIN IN BATTLE

Sofia Hears of Death of Todor Protogoheroy, Relative of Comitadji General.

By the Associated Press.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 1.—It was reliably reported today that Todor Protogoheroy, a relative of the famous Comitadji leader, Gen. Alex Protogoheroy, who was assassinated early in July, was himself killed in a fierce two-day battle between his adherents and partisans of the other Macedonian revolutionary leader, Pance Ivan Mikhailoff.

The fight is said to have occurred at the town of Zunderlik. It started Aug. 24 and lasted without interruption until Aug. 28. Both sides suffered heavily.

It is said that Mikhailoff is now regarded as dominant among the Macedonian revolutionaries, and it is reported that he will move his base of operations into Jugo-Slavia.

10 YEAR SENTENCE FOR YOUTH WHO DROVE CAR IN HOLDUP

Paul Luff, 17, Sent to Boonville for Part in West End Bank Robbery.

On his plea of guilty of participation in the $25,000 holdup at the West End Bank in University City July 11, Paul Luff, 17 years old, of Independence, Mo., yesterday was sentenced to 10 years in the State Penitentiary by Circuit Judge Mulloy at Clayton.

Because of the defendant's youth and previous good record, Judge Mulloy commuted the sentence to the Boonville Reformatory.

Luff acted as chauffeur and lookout for three men who robbed the bank and escaped in an automobile after exchanging shots with University City police. Virgil Davis, a relative of Luff and proprietor of a Kansas City filling station, has confessed being one of the robbers and is in jail at Clayton, awaiting trial. Two other men are sought.

Davis and Luff were arrested when suspicion was attracted to them because of their lavish spending after the bank robbery. Each bought an expensive automobile and Davis also bought an airplane.

Detective Shot by Holdup Men.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Walter Hoder, 31 years old, a city detective, was shot in the back of the head by one of three men he attempted to question when he believed they planned a holdup near the downtown business district, is in a serious condition today and 5000 policemen are hunting his assailants. Hoder saw the men peering into a restaurant and drawing his pistol, crossed the street to question them. As he walked to two of them, the third slipped behind him and shot him.

60 RACING PLANES TO STOP HERE THURSDAY AND FRIDAY

Will Refuel on Aerial Derby From New York to Los Angeles.

Next Thursday aand Friday will be interseting days for St. Louis aviation enthusiasts, marking the passage westward of 60 of the latest type airplanes in a race against time from New York City to the National Air Races at Los Angeles, Cal., for cash prizes totaling $40,000.

The planes, piloted by some of the leading aviators of the country, have been divided into two groups. The first group, powered with engines of 510 cubic inch displacement or less, will start from New York Wednesday and is scheduled to arrive at Lambert-St. Louis Field Thursday morning for refusing following an overnight stop at Terre Haute, Ind.

Friday the second group of planes, having greater engine displacement, will arrive. This group will start from New York Thursday. The planes will speed across a timing mark and will then land for 30 minutes before taking off for Kansas City, the next control point.

Phil Love, flying partner of Col. Lindbergh, will time the arrival of the ships here. Preston Sultan, World war flyer, has been appointed official referee for the local control point. Love and Sultan will be assisted by a committee composed of Stanley Clarke, chairman of the St. Louis Air Board; Major Albert Bond Lambert, Harold Bixby, Col. A. T. Perkins, Major C. R. Wassell, Major William B. Robertson, Director of Public Welfare Salisbury, Park Commissioner Pape and O. E. Scott, manager of Lambert Field.

LABOR DAY TOMORROW, NO PUBLIC CELEBRATION

Union Workers Prefer Shady Tree in Country to Demonstration in City.

Labor day will be celebrated here tomorrow without a parade or other organized demonstration, members of labor unions preferring to celebrate the day individually rather than collectively.

Interest in Labor day demonstrations began to lag about six years ago with the advent of hard roads and inexpensive automobiles. David Kreyling, veteran labor leader and former grand marshal of Labor day parades, explained that "the boys would rather drive out in the country and Park under a shady tree than tramp through the streets in the hot sun or be jostled at a picnic."

Last year a motorized parade, the first of its kind, was held here under auspices of co-operative labor business houses. An effort was made this year to have union members parade in their automobiles on Labor day, but the proposal was voted down at a meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Union on the theory that a display of motor cars by union workers would embarrass their wage committees when they sought increases in pay from employers. In the absence of any further suggestions on the manner of celebrating, the "shady tree idea" prevailed.

Members of East St. Louis labor unions will hold an automobile parade tomorrow afternoon. Business houses and homes along the line of march will be decorated with flags and bunting, the demonstration being sanctioned by city officials and the East St. Louis Central Trades and Labor Union.

An invitation to attend Labor day exercises at Tower Grove Park Christian Church, Kingshighway and Reber place, tonight was extended to union members by the Rev. B. L. Morris, pastor of the church, who is a member of the Typographical Union.

As is usual, banks will be closed tomorrow and there will be no mail delivery on city carrier or rural routes. One mail delivery will be made to hotels and newspaper offices east of Twelfth boulevard.

Gov. Baker, in proclaiming tomorrow a holiday in the State, called on all citizens to cease from their usual vocations and pay respect to the men and women engaged in labor.

42 NATIONS NOW HAVE ACCEPTED KELLOGG PACT

Haiti and Latvia Heard From Officially—Netherlands Government Commends Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Soviet Russia's note accepting the French Government's invitation to adhere to the general pact for the renunciation of war had not reached the Washington Government today officially, but the full text in press dispatches received the interested attention of State department officials. It was apparent that the American Government welcomed Russia's expression of intention to adhere.

The growing list of countries expressing their intention to adhere was increased to 42 today with official notification from Haiti and Latvia. Nicaragua sent congratulations through her foreign minister. The Netherlands sent a note saying that the Government on whose territory the peace conferences of 1899 and 1907 took place, and whose policy has always been directed toward the promotion of world peace, greeted the treaty as "a real progress of mankind" and had immediately taken the necessary measures prescribed by her constitution in order to be able to adhere.

ZOGU, ALBANIAN MOUNTAIN CHIEF, PROCLAIMED KING

Rides to Tirana Assembly Hall Amid Cheering Throngs, Takes Oath on Bible and Koran.

By the Associated Press.

TIRANA, Albania, Sept. 1.—Church chimes, frenzied popular acclaim, thunderous cannon fire and one tense moment of triumph today marked the final step in the rise of Ahmed Zogu from a mountain chieftain to King of his native Albania.

The National Assembly, without a dissenting voice, proclaimed him King of the Albanians. Deputies, Government officials and prominent civilians, who packed the tiny legislative hall of the smallest State in the Balkans, arose in a body and greeted the announcement with cries of "Long live our King!"

They left the hall and marched, 200 strong, to the palace, where President Zogu was waiting for them.

The salvo of 101 guns had scarcely signaled the elevation of a plebeian President to the dignity of kingship when the new ruler started his triumphal journey from the palace to the assembly hall. He rode through densely thronged streets while Albanian and Italian guards formed a barrier against the possibility of a hostile act.

He appeared profoundly moved and showed signs of nervousness as he mounted the parliamentary tribune to take the oath. Falteringly, he raised his right hand and swore to rule the country with wisdom and justice and to support the Constitution. He made no attempt to speak and confined his acknowledgment of the extraordinary ovation to a series of grave bows.

Representatives of the Mohammedan, Greek and Roman Catholic churches were present to signalize the unanimity with which the various religious groups in Albania regard the establishment of a monarchy.

An earlier dispatch from Belgrade said that the Central Committee of the Albanian Republican Organization had warned all European chancelleries that force would be used to prevent the enthronement of Zogu.)

The new sovereign took a double oath, one on the Bible and once on the Koran. He is a Mohammedan but had guaranteed the country complete freedom of worship.

The return trip to the palace brought a repetition of flag waving, frantic cheers and acclamations. The processions, followed by a disorganized mob of shouting citizens, passed the U. S. Legation. Officials saluted the Legation flag and cheered for Charles C. Hart, the U. S. Minister.

The city was filled with thousands of visitors in holiday spirit. The trek toward Tirana began early in the week and peasants arrived in an ever increasing stream by foot and donkey carts. Flags fly from all buildings and rare Persian rugs are draped from the windows of wealthy and middle class houses.

U. S. AND FRANCE REACH FINANCIAL UNDERSTANDING

Washington Will Not Demand Ratification of Mellon Treaty While Paris Pays.

(Copyright, 1928, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, Sept. 1.—An understanding has been effected between the American Treasury and the French Government according to which Washington will take for granted the eventual ratification of the Mellon-Berenger agreement and not claim the $70,000,000 due from the French Government in 1929 for American stocks.

France will pursue the policy initiated by M. Poincare last year and continue making payments in accordance with the Mellon-Berenger agreement as though it were ratified. Washington will ignore the fact that the French Parliament has never ratified the agreement and will continue so doing as long as France pays the annuities.

In the beginning this was a concession to the political difficulties of the Poincare coalition, which could not have gotten a majority for the agreement, but it will be an even greater concession by Washington if it permits the year 1929 to pass without ratification, because the principal incentive to France to settle the war debt situation was the $400,000,000 falling due next year.

This amount was lumped with the rest in the debt settlement, but technically Washington could demand payment in full if the settlement was not ratified by that time. The 1929 budget as drafted by Poincare will contain no provision for paying more than the annuity under the agreement, which has made the understanding apparent.

The three working forces to be consolidated at the De Baliviere sheds will total about 1000 men. It is stated that erection of a new office building this fall is under consideration.

SIMMONS "UNCOMPROMISING" IN OPPOSITION TO GOV. SMITH

North Carolina Senator Offers to Co-operate in Movement Against Nominee.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 1.—United States Senator Simmons, in a telegram today from his home in New Bern to Frank R. McNinch, one of the leaders of the anti-Smith forces in North Carolina, announced his indorsement of the anti-Smith movement and declared that he was "profoundly convinced that the election of Gov. Smith would be unfortunate alike to the party and country."

"Pursuant to our phone conversation," Simmons' telegram said, "I wish to assure you of my full sympathy with the movement to organize and consolidate anti-Smith sentiment.

"Shall be glad to co-operate in this behalf. My position is one of uncompromising opposition to Gov. Smith. It is clear to my mind that since his nomination he has repudiated the platform not in one but in several particulars, turned the party over to Tammany Hall and certain big interests hostile to Democratic politics and principles and that through his, its and their actions, affiliations and connections the major principles of the party have been either compromised, traded or bartered off for expediency sake, leaving but little of democracy except its name. To me the principles of the party mean more than its name. Under these circumstances I am profoundly convinced that the election of Gov. Smith would be unfortunate alike to the party and the country and I shall not, therefore, vote for him."

MONROE DOCTRINE LEFT TO STATES BY LEAGUE

Council in Reply to Costa Rica, Refuses to Make Interpretation.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept 1.—Latin American States must decide for themselves the real meaning of the American Monroe Doctrine.

Such, in the opinion of League circles, is the cardinal point contained in the reply which the League Council tonight cabled Costa Rica's Government in response to its expressed desire to have the council's interpretation before deciding the question of its return to League membership.

The reply was made public today after secret sessions lasting two days. During this time the matter was discussed, at time, it is known, more or less heatedly.

The reply is such that, according to the opinion heard in League circles, including the views of Latin-Americans, the League has succeeded in adhering to the last to its determination neither to wound United States sentiment nor to displease the Latin-American states.

The reply declines to interpret the Doctrine on the grounds that it concerns only states having accepted "among themselves" engagements of this kind. Then it emphasizes that the Covenant of the League as a whole confers upon all members equal obligations and equal rights. It is brought out that inclusion in the covenant of such engagements as the Monroe Doctrine entails does not give them sanction or validity they did not previously possess.

As interpreted here it is held that the reply indicates that under the council's explanation any Latin-American state which might desire to submit a difference to the League of Nations need not be impeded by reason of the Monroe Doctrine.

MASSACHUSETTS AUTO INSURANCE RATES HOLD

State Commissioner Resigns as He Is Expected to Announce Increase.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—Insurance Commissioner Wesley E. Monk resigned today instead of announcing new compulsory automobile insurance rates for 1929, as he was scheduled to do. As a result, the present rates continue in force for next year, according to Assistant Attorney-General Roger Clapp.

This was the last day for altering the old rates and Monk had intended to promulgate increases averaging 17 per cent. Through his dramatic resignation, Massachusetts automobile owners will save millions of dollars in the aggregate. On him the law placed the burden and responsibility of determining the rates. He had made his decision to increase them and had withstood the fire of thousands of citizens and officials from the Governor down.

From his home Monk issued a statement in which he declared that resignation was the only course left open to him. Declaring that the law gave him the power to increase the rates if he thought it necessary, he said that the opposition of the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Attorney-General created a situation "where an under-executive was compelled to fight his superior executive, and to use the Attorney-General, as provided by law, as his attorney—an official who was unwilling to defend him—when the fundamental procedure should have been the removal of the under-executive or the support of his action."

GRAIN TRADING LIGHT, SMALL GAINS SHOWN

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—With a modicum of pressure and some evening up to be accomplished before the double holiday, the grain markets achieved a small advance in quiet trading today. Trade abroad was dull and the chief influences here were local, with no one willing to venture out of the narrow path of trading.

Such bullish factors as were taken into account in the slight upturn included meager deliveries on the September contracts, scattered buying by shorts and by commission houses, a few unfavorable crop comments and somewhat better export prospects. Harvesting weather was favorable in Canada, but a private report from Winnipeg was less bearish than expected. From Australia came mixed reports and announcement of a visible supply of 5,200,000 bushels, compared with 12,750,000 bushels last year. Export demand was limited, but Portugal was reported to have bought 400,000 bushels of Manitobas and Plate wheats for September to April shipment. Sixty-nine cars were received here. Total September deliveries were 881,000 bushels. September wheat was gaining sharply on later months and closed at the top, wheat finishing ¼c to 1⅛c higher; September, $1.11⅜ to $1.11½; December, $1.26¼ to $1.26⅜; March, $1.21 to $1.21⅛, and May, $1.23½.

Some corn and barley was reported for export by the seaboard, along with 200,000 to 300,000 bushels of wheat, largely Manitoba. September corn was again the strongest and ended the relatively quiet session 20c above December, although cash still sold at a premium of several cents over the current month. No deliveries were made on the September contracts and the trade looked for little late in the month. Corn reacted slightly from the top, but closed firm, ⅛c to 1c up; September, 95c to 95⅛c; December, 75c to 75⅛c; March, 77¼c to 77⅜c, and May, 79½c to 79⅝c.

September oats were delivered in small quantities and with trade and pressure light oats closed unchanged to ¼c higher.

September lard dipped under heavy deliveries, but gained sharply at the close and finished 10c to 12c up, with bellies at a similar advance and ribs down 10c.

Cash wheat trade was light. Prices firmer with futures. Trading basis unchanged, firm. Local sales 7000 bu.; cancellations, 31,273 bu.; receipts estimated, 68 cars. Deliveries on September contracts, 881,000 bu.; no fresh export business uncovered.

Cash corn demand was moderate while prices were irregular, according to quality. Basis steady to 1c easier. No. 2 yellow sold today at 7-8c over; No. 3 yellow, 6-7c over; receipts, estimated, 115 cars; local sales, 33,000 bu.; country offerings to arrive light and mainly away from market; booked to arrive, 20,000 bu., includes 116,981 bu. No. 2 white, 153,603 bu. No. 2 mixed and 40,799 bu. No. 2 yellow.

Cash oats were steady; basis ¼c off to ¼c up; receipts estimate, 84 cars; shipping sales, 28,000 bu.; country offerings to arrice small; deliveies on September contracts, 70,000 bu.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Sept. 1.—Receipts of cattle the week just closed were heavier by a small margin than the supply received here the previous week. Steer prices with the exception of medium kinds and grassers regained most of the previous week's decline while further losses were suffered on the plainer kinds and Western range steers. Fed heifers and butcher yearlings advanced 25c and veal calves 50c, other classes steady. Steers attained a new high level for the current year when a consignment of yearlings sold at $16.75. Mature steers also reached a new high point for several months when a string of 1384 lb. averages scored $16.25. With the exception of a few offerings however the number of sales above $16.00 was small, bulk of deals made in a spread of $14.25 to $15.90. For plainer steers and grassy kinds the price range varied downward to the $11 and $12 columns. The supply of Western steers was considerably heavier than the previous week and bearishness of buyers lowered values mostly 50c on this class. A top of $13.65 was scored for Oklahoma with the low end of the price range down to $9. Bulk cleared at $10 to $12.40. An unusually small supply of fed heifers was received here this week, bulk of better kinds scoring $14 to $15 with top at $15.50 for two cars. The best price for mixed steers and heifers in car lot consignments was $15.25. Most of the grassy kinds cleared in the $10 and $11 rows while some of the commonest offerings varied downward to $7.50 or less.

Lower tendencies developed in cow stuff during the early part of the week but strength in later sessions overcame this weakness and final deals were fully steady with the previous week's close. Fewer cows eligible to $11 and better were among offerings, bulk of beef grades making $7.75 to $9.75. Cutter flesh cleared mostly from $6.50 to $7 and up to $7.50 while the spread for canners was mostly $5.75 to $6, ranging $5.50 to $6.25. Bulls sold on a firm basis all week with the exception of a temporary weakness displayed in Wednesday's session. Heavy beef bulls and light butcher animals ranged upward to $10 and $10.50 while bolognas sold mainly around $8.50 to $9 and common bulls varied from $6.50 to $7.50.

The supply of stocker and feeder steers was more generous than in some time and outgoing shipments showed a bigger total. The spread in price ranged from $7 to $12.50 with bulk clearing at $8 to $11.75. Cows were in active demand also, selling mostly around $7 to $7.50 while heifers varied from $8.50 to $10, a few just suiting in weight and quality ranging as high as $11. An advance of 50c was made by veal calves, those in good and choice flesh closing the week at $17.50 while first cuts went mostly from $14.50 to $15. Second cut calves and heavies showed a wider spread in price and practically no advance, continuing in sluggish demand. Sales varied from $8 to $13 and $13.50 mostly. Southern canner yearlings sold in a spread of $6.50 to $6.75 during the week, most deals around $6.60 to $6.75.

Advance in Hogs.

A series of advances in hog values the early part of the past week sent prices to the highest levels since November, 1926. However, lack of order and packer support later in the week and no relief from receipts erased part of the earlier gains and the market closed strong to 15c higher as compared with last Saturday's close. High top for the week was $13.10 and also the highest price in 21 months. Bulk of sales appeared at $12.60 to $13. Quality average fairly good with receipts heavier. Shippers were the principal operators throughout the week, big packers accounting for a very disappointing portion of the week's receipts. Butchers provided a fair outlet with speculators also taking a fair number. Pigs fairly good early in the week, but last days of the period were in a demoralized condition. Prices average about steady with a week ago. Packing sows experienced good shipping demand the fore part of the period, but this demand failed to last and values tumbled in late sessions. High top was $11.75 with most sales from $11.25 to $11.40. Stags $11 down, lightest kinds claiming best prices.

Receipts around the 11 market circuit were heavier than a week ago but the local quota was lighter. There was a series of advances, a $1 gain on best lambs during the week's trading being recorded. Culls advanced 50c over last week's close, while aged sheep under a negligible supply held to steady levels. Buyers were bearish and tried hard to keep prices down and this created slow trade at times. However, good clearances were effected each day. City butchers operated on a limited scale. High top for the week was $14.75 paid in the Friday period for choice Tennessees. Bulk of best lambs cashed at $13.75 to $14.50 with common kinds dipping down to $10. Culls sold at $9 to mostly $9.50. Quality averaged better than last week. Aged sold at $6.50 down every day of the week. Quotations: Slaughter stock, choice ewe and wether lambs, $14.50 to $14.75; fair to good lambs, $13 to $14; plain to fair, $10 to $13; cull and common, $9 to 10; skins, $6 to $8. Good to choice yearling wethers, $11 to $12; medium to good, $10 to $11; plain to medium, $9 to $10; cull and common, $7 to $9. Good to choice mutton ewes, $6 to $6.50; plain to good, $4 to $6; choppers and bucks, $3; canners, $1 to $2. Fair to good breeding ewes, yearling to 4 years, $7.50 to $11.50; plain to fair all weights, 3.50 to $7.50.

Horses and Mules.

Practically the entire run of horses and mules this week was from native territory, although a few cars were contributed by range states. Buying was conducted on a fairly active market at firm values, purchasers furnishing ready outlet for available supplies which were light. Receipts late this week included a number of cars of range horses and some mules scheduled for the sale here next Tuesday.

CHANGES NOT LARGE IN GRAIN MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Sept. 1.—Price changes were not large, but higher, at the closing session of week on local market. The pending holiday tended to hold market quiet.

In the cash grain market Saturday good No. 2 red wheat was fully steady. Mill orders were numerous and there were inquiries for seed qualities. Bright types of No. 2 red sold on orders at $1.48 to $1.49, largely $1.48; 36¼@37½c premium over Chicago September, but there was practically no demand for hard mixed or common qualities of No. 2 red, although offered as low as $1.45, nor for sprout-damaged or poor condition No. 3s or off-grades. Heavy garlicky wheat sold at 10c discount. Hard wheat was ½c to 1c up. Offerings were small, but the demand was not broad. Sales on track were made on a basis 2¾@3¼c over Chicago September price for No. 1 hard, 1½@2c over for No. 2 hard. No. 2 hard 13 per cent protein was quoted to arroive basis 19½c over Kansas City September price delivered here, 12½ per cent protein 1c less. Yellow corn was ½c to 1c higher. Mixed corn was firmer. White corn was unchanged to 1c down. There was a brisk demand from mills for yellow corn and shippers and elevators took the mixed and white. There was a scant offering of white oats, for which there was a ready demand. A few choice cars went to local trade, but a large part was employed in filling shipping orders. Demand for red and mixed oats was moderate.

There were deliveries on September contracts of 95,000 bu of red wheat and 25,000 bu hard wheat. No corn reported.

Wheat opened unchanged to fraction higher and ruled slightly above previous close in early trading. Liverpool closed unchanged on October and March and ⅛d lower on December. Winnipeg was up fractionally early. September corn was up a cent and December fractionally early. The action of corn and tone of Chicago wheat, credited to smaller deliveries than expected, exerted influence.

September wheat opened at $1.09⅝@1; December wheat, $1.15⅝; September corn, $1, and December corn 74⅝c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 168,000 bushels, compared with 357,000 a week ago and 134,400 a year ago, included 101 cars local and 19 through. Corn receipts, which were 57,400 bushels, compared with 137,200 a week ago and 37,800 a year ago, included 30 cars local and 11 through. Oats receipts, which were 58,000 bushels, compared with 58,000 a week ago and 58,000 a year ago, included 24 cars local and 5 through. Hay receipts were 27 cars local and 2 through.

Stocks in St. Louis Public Elevators amounted to 4,114,221 bu. of wheat, 56,256 bu. of corn and 297,765 bu. of oats. NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Market plans were upset with a vengeance this week, when, on the approach of the month-end and Labor day stocks rose in spectacular fashion to fresh peaks in history. In the financial district it was thought that the final week of August might easily bring a flurry of 10 or 12 per cent call money and a setback in prices. Instead, money did not rise above 7½ per cent and the marekt is witnessing its greatest bull mocement since May, when quotations in a final spurt before the June break touched new high levels for all time. Wall street's firm conviction that the approach of Sept. 1 would usher in the year's stiffest money rates to date were based on the known tightening effects of the usual month-end settlements and the withdrawal of currency for holiday uses. That the two events fell virtually together this year was accepted as a foregone conclusion, with the money market in its present sensitive condition, of a display in the market for funds likely to prove temporarily disturbing.

Some Sharp Gains From June.

"When it became apparent that money would remain in good supply at a rate around 7 per cent during this crucial week, market operators, investment trusts and the public all rushed in for stock. In the scramble they drove leading issues to new highs from 20 to 70 points above the June lows. This bold buying movement was accelerated in part by a wholly unexpected reduction in bankers' acceptances. This week's uprush in stocks after the June decline resembled, in some respects, the May rise, induced after the February decline, and when public buying of issues was resumed on a broad and vigorous scale.

Credit Fundamentals Unchanged.

"No proof of the public's re-entry into the market is afforded in the brokers' loans figures, but it was plain as the week wore on that buying in that quarter was heavier than at any time since last spring. Whatever may be the fundamentals of the credit position, and whatever may be the possibilities of more stringent reserve action, obviously neither the financial district nor the pulbic is worried. Within a few weeks market sentiment has been sharply reversed. Meanwhile, the fundamentals ofthe credit system remain precisely what they were a month ago, when most authorities took the view that tight money for the remainder of the year was definitely in prospect. Admittedly, firm money is the outstanding weapon of the bear party.

PRICES TURN IRREGULAR ON THE BOND MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Prices turned irregular under the opposing influences of a buoyant stock market and pre-holiday profit-taking in the bond market today. Trading was moderately active, total sales exceeding $4,000,000.

Rails generally provided supporting firmness for the market in the face of late recessions in the industrial group, their strength being based on the increased demand for railroad stock and encouraging earnings reports. However, a few industrials, particularly convertibles, showed fairly wide gains, although most issues slumped in the wave of realizing just before the close.

Barnsdall 6s were among the strong features of the industrial group, advancing more than 2 points to a new year's high at 106⅝ coincident with heavy buying of the stock. International Match 5s, Loews 6s with warrants, Pathe Exchange 7s with warrants, Shell Pipe line 5s and Youngstown Sheet & Tube 5s made smaller gains. Coppers sagged under profit-taking, with Anaconda and Andes Copper 7s closing fractionally lower. Utilities also sagged, Public Service of New Jersey 4½s closing a half-point down.

Illinois Central 4s, New York, Ontario & Western 4s, Texas & Pacific 5s B, and National Railways of Mexico 4s were prominent in the advance of the rails, each gaining a point or more. St. Paul 5s, Erie General Lien 4s, Louisville & Nashville 5s B, Oregon Short Line 4s and Frisco 4s were under pressure, although losses were small.

The foreign list, except for Republic of Chile issues, which closed unchanged, was rather inactive.

U. S. Government bonds were irregular, Liberty 1st 4¼s and Treasury 4¼s closing lower in the face of gains in other issues.

NEARLY HUNDRED STOCKS SELL AT RECORD PRICES

Wild Speculation for Advance Resumed on Exchange—Many of Week's Gains Run From 10 to 30 Points, Few Even Higher.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Resumption of wild speculation for the advance after a summer of relative inactivity on the New York Stock Exchange attracted major attention in this week's financial markets. Powerful pools, encouraged by the relatively large supply of funds available in what is ordinarily a period of credit stringency, started a series of bullish demonstrations which lifted nearly 100 individual issues to record high prices. Many of the week's gains ran from 10 to 30 points, a few even higher, with only a sprinkling of issues losing ground.

Trading, which dwindled to a daily average of between 1,000,000 and 2,000,000 shares during the summer, suddenly leaped to between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 shares. Ticker delays were frequent. Customers' rooms of the leading commission houses again were crowded, and orders poured over the brokerage wires from all sections of the country.

Amusement shares ploughed steadily forward despite denial of most of the many merger rumors in circulation. Oils were kept in check by reports of increased crude production and lower gasoline prices in some sections. Rails responded to the publication of an excellent series of July earnings statements, although some of the current traffic reports were disappointing.

Call Money 7½ Per Cent.

The widely predicted "squeeze" in call money failed to develop. Instead of the expected 10 per cent rate, the maximum charge was 7½ per cent. Time money and commercial paper rates held firm, but bankers' acceptance buying rates were lowered in response to the brisk demand for those bills.

Sterling hovered just above the "gold import" point. The Canadian dollar went to a high premium. Japanese yen, which turned weak on the threatening Chinese news a few weeks ago, made impressive recovery.

Cotton and wheat prices showed relatively little change on the week.

The advance lifted the average of 20 leading industrial shares, compiled by the Associated Press, to a new high record for all time.

Failure of an expected "money pinch" to develop was probably because of the heavy transfer of capital here from Canada for loans on call.

Small Loans Increase.

Despite a fortnight of rising prices, which reached seisational proportions in some of the highly speculative issues, brokers' loans increased only $34,000,000 in the week ended Wednesday. In the week before loans dropped nearly $23,000,000. Thus, in two weeks the net gain in loans was about $11,000,000.

Motors returned to the leadership of the market as the week neared close. General Motors scored a spectacular gain of more than 8 points on Friday, and Chrysler, Dodge Bros. preferred, and Hupp were lifted to new high ground. American Smelting sold at the best price in its history, above $250 a share, and Anaconda sold at the best price in more than ten years.

Oils Fail to Advance.

Oils failed to participate in the advance, probably because of a general desire of their sponsors to await the outcome of the conversations between leading English and American oil authorities now reported as taking place in Scotland. Food shares presented several points of strength.

WEEK'S METAL MARKET REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—While business in finished steel was reported to be largely against specifications, there was a good trade in structural steel, with a large tonnage pending for various projects throughout the country. The rails continued to inquire in a moderate manner for many qualities of steel, and steel pipes was in better demand for oil and gas lines. Prices were generally very steady.

Pig iron was firmer and the market continued active.

Sales of copper to domestic consumers were in somewhat better volume late in the week, and it is now estimated that a large part of their September requirements have been filled. Foreign buyers have shown less interest in the market. The amount of metal still available for delivery this month is said to be comparatively small, so that producers are in a rather strong position. The price remains unchanged at 14¾ cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut Valley.

The tin market was steadier toward the close of the week. Consumers were reported as moderate buyers of nearby positions. Statistics for August were awaited with interest.

Lead was advanced again by leading producers and the demand from consumers was active, while producers and consumers' stocks were reported as moderate.

Zinc was steady with business moderate, consumers apparently buying largely for requirements. Ore was again firm.

Antimony was slightly easier due to reports of lower offerings from the Far East. Spot demand was moderate.

Dry Goods Market Review.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The cloth market in gray and finished lines was closed down almost completely today. The week found broadening trade tendencies in almost all lines, but coarse and fine gray cloths, totals of which were smaller than the week before in anticipation of the cotton report which comes out at noon on Sept. 8. Burlaps were neglected and prices declined approximately 15 points. Small sales of cotton yarns came through each day. Raw silk was steady in Yokohama.

UPTURN MARKS SHORT SESSION ON THE CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The curb market experienced a strong upturn in today's short session, in which week-end liquidation was easily absorbed, and in which all groups participated.

Fox Theater "A" was again heavily bought. Columbia Graphophone was also bought eagerly, going up 3 points at one time to a new high at 82. Other high records for the year or longer were established by Camco, at 11, Cohn Hall and Marx at 38⅞, Crock Wheel at 95, and Grasselli Chemical at 64⅝ and Perfect Circle at 37½.

India Tire & Rubber went up 5 points at a new high at 67¾. Alpha Portland Cement, Bancitaly and Midland Steel made gains of 2 points and more.

Among the industrials American Cyanamid "B" Colgate Palmolive Peet, Norvadel Process, U. S. Gypsum, and United Milk, were down 1 to 3 points. Galesburgh Coulter Disc encountered profit taking.

Chain stores were again strong. Piggly-Wiggly advancing more than 2 points to a new high in heavy buying, while Peoples Drug, Sanitary Groceries and Schiff Co. extended their gains. Radio shares remained active, the accumulation of Canadian Marconi continuing at prices near the year's high. Mines were comparatively quiet, but steady.

Utilities showed group strength, American Light & Traction gaining 3 points, while Electric Bond and Share, Electric Investors and others made gains of around a point. United Gas Improvement, however, encountered pressure.

Oils steadied markedly. Gulf shot up 3 points, and Humble more than a point. Vacuum, however, eased.

COTTON MARKET PREPARES FOR GOVERNMENT REPORT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—In a general way the ruling of the cotton market here during the past week has reflected uncertainty as to the showing of the next Government crop report and the restricting influence on business of the three-day adjournment from the close of business Friday until next Tuesday morning. Some hedge selling has been reported, but in the opinion of local brokers it has been just about offset by trade buying on the declines, while business otherwise has been attributed largely to the reduction or closing out of speculative commitments.

"These operations have caused more or less irregularity in the price movement without establishing any particular trend in values or resulting in any material change for the week. After selling off to 18.51 on Monday December contracts advanced to 19.17 on Wednesday, but just about lost the improvement later in the week. Unfavorable features in weather and crop advices have had a sustaining influence but evidently failed to stimulate general interest in the face of the holidays just ahead and uncertainty as to the showing of the "end-August" crop reports. Nearly all the scattering reports reaching here from the South indicated that the crop was deteriorating.

Complaints from the eastern and central belts placed a good deal of emphasis on the spread and increasing damage of boll weevil. From the Southwest where the weather was relatively dry and hot, reports have indicated excessive shedding, while there have been scattering complaints of various sorts from nearly all parts of the South. The failure of these advices to create more buying interest or to make a greater apparent impression on sentiment has been attributed by some of the local traders to a feeling that the Government crop indication as of Aug. 1 had made plenty of allowance for deterioration during August. This view raised a question as to whether the reports of deterioration during the last three weeks had been more serious than usual at this season of the year, and at the end of the week there was probably as wide a difference between minimum and maximum crop views as of any time previously this season.

The first three of the private "end-August" crop indications to make their appearance ranged from 13,929,000 up to 15,518,000 bales and opinions as to the showing of the Government report were very conflicting.

Closing prices at final session were: January, 18.58; March, 18.58-61; May, 18.62-64; October, 18.78-80; December 18.58-62. Spot middling, 19.05 cents.

St. Louis Spot Cotton.

Spot cotton was unchanged in St. Louis today's quotations. Good ordinary 13.75c; low middling 16.50c; middling 18.50c; good middling $19.25c; middling fair, 19.75c.

FOREIGN FINANCIAL SITUATION REVIEWED

BY ARTHUR W. KIDDY.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The peace pact probably had as little to do with the cheerfulness of the markets in London as it had with these in Wall street, much as all peace movements carry with them the good will of Capel Court. The outstanding cardinal factors of the situation appear to be that available investment resources on both sides of the Atlantic exceed the trade demands or to express the same fact somewhat differently, the chances of capital appreciation in securities, rightly or wrongly, is regarded on both sides of the Atlantic as offering greater opportunities for the profitable employment of capital than any other operation. This, like all other movements, must reach its limits, but it is believed numerous considerations will likely prevent a high official rate in the United States and with the strong position of the Bank of England the growing belief in London is that England will get through the autumn on the 4½ per cent rate.

This is undoubtedly helping to stimulate all the markets. It has been a long time since the bank rate in England has been so stable, there having been only one change in nearly three years. Moreover, the redistribution of gold in various parts of the world is having a good effect and England's monetary position is brightened by the prospect of further gold arrivals during the next few weeks. There is as yet no undue concern about German purchases of gold despite her adverse trade balance and the size of the impending reparations payments. It is considered that her power to command gold is entirely limited to borrowing and that in that sense the control is in the hands of the lenders, like America and England, though probably the chief present lender of short time loans to Germany is France, thus completely reversing the position of two years ago when Germany was buying francs heavily.

England's trade outlook, including shipping, is slightly better, and a good feature is the greater freedom from industrial disputes that now prevails.

Statistics just published by the British Foreign and Colonial Corporation show that trade disputes last year were 303 in number, against 603 in 1925, 710 in 1924 and 1607 in 1920. Moreover, figures for the month of June this year showed the number of trade disputes almost negligible. The explanation is partly the impoverished condition of many labor unions after the big general strike, but also, as in the case of the railways, due to greater co-operation between the employers and employed.

The present outlook favors moderate activity of stocks during the autumn, with early resumption of new loan flotations. A curious contrast between the pre and post-war conditions exists in the sense that 15 years ago arbitrage dealings with the United States consisted mainly in purchases by England of American securities, purchases of English stocks by people in the United States being negligible.

Today Britishers are buying American industrial shares in considerable amount and have made big profits, and Americans also are apparently buying many English industrials and it is difficult to say which country so far has secured the biggest gains. The extent, however, of the international speculative operations makes international trade an insufficiently reliable guide to the position of foreign exchanges.

Industrial and Financial Briefs

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Commercial failures in the United States in August numbered nearly 1800, R. G. Dun & Co. reports, an increase of about 7 per cent over July and about 8 per cent over August of last year. Liabilities show an even more marked increase, rising to more than $55,000,000, and establishing a new maximum for the year. The total for July was less than $30,000,000 and for August last year, less than $40,000,000. March of this year was almost as high, with a total of $54,300,000. The high August figure has resulted primarily from several large insolvencies in the classification of "other commercial," which includes brokerage, insurance and similar enterprizes.

The general tone of business in the electrical equipment field is encouraging, with the sales trend slightly upward in the Eastern and Middle Western areas, electrical world reports, industrial plants are steady buyers and the call for motors is strong.

Business failures in the United States this week totaled 389, compared to 377 defaults last week and 344 this week a year ago, R. G. Dun & Co. reports. The week's total, however, is substantially under the 404 two weeks ago and the total for the latest month is 1723, a slight decrease from the corresponding period a year ago, when the total was 1756.

Montgomery Ward & Co.'s August sales totaled $17,007,642, against $13,825,103 in August 1927. For the first eight months, the total is $127,552,116, against $118,868,029 in the corresponding period of last year.

A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation, says in a letter to stockholders that indications are for an increase of 25 per cent in both sales and net earnings for the third quarter, over the third quarter last year. Results of the first three quarters, he says, will exceed the totals for the entire year of 1927.

The Honolulu Consolidated Oil Co. of San Francisco has declared an extra dividend of 25 cents in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents, both payable Sept. 15 to stock of record Sept. 5.

Total meltings of United States sugar refiners this year up to Aug. 25 were 6,686,970,741 barrels, a marked decline from the 7,687,574,819 barrels refined in the like period of last year.

The American Radiator Co. has placed orders for 31,000 tons of pig iron, covering requirements not supplied by its subsidiary, the Tonawanda Iron Corporation of Tonawanda, N. Y.

The American Railway Express Co. reports net income of $1,086,704, equal to $3.12 per common share, in the first half of 1928, a slight decrease from the first half of last year, when net income was $1,101,432, or $3.17 per share.

Percy R. Todd, president of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad, expresses apprehension that the blight of the Maine potato crop may be very extensive, as it has been in other sections where digging is more advanced. He expects August and September net earnings to show a decrease from those months of last year, but is confident that earnings will be double common dividend requirements for the year.

NIEDERLUECKES TELL WHY THEY VISITED GERK

Aldermen Say They Asked Chief to Detail Policeman to Protect Tailor Friend.

Aldermen William F. and August H. Niederluecke yesterday denied that they had interceded with Chief of Police Gerk in behalf of a man arrested for questioning about bombings and other violence directed against cleaners and dyers.

Gerk had related that the Niederlueckes, accompanied by a Mr. Schemme and E. C. Werner, president of the St. Louis Cleaners' and Dyers' Association, appeared at his office at Headquarters following the arrest last March of a man who said he was Benjamin Alberts, also known as Abrams, president of the Chicago Cleaners' and Dyers' Union, who had come here to unionize the local industry after being acquitted of a bomb plot charge in Chicago.

Gerk gave the two aldermen a hearing and they vouched for Werner, after which the aldermen stepped aside and Werner vouched for Alberts and protested against Alberts' arrest, Gerk said. Subsequently Alberts was released for lack of evidence.

In explanation of their visit to Gerk's office, the two Niederlueckes, who are cousins, said they went there to ask Gerk to detail a policeman to protect their friend, Herman Schemme, a tailor, who had found a bomb on the porch of his home. They said Gerk refused to grant the request on the ground there were no policemen available. The Niederlueckes denied knowing Alberts or interceding for him.

Werner, questioned at Headquarters Friday, but not arrested, denied interceding for Alberts or for two other union officers who were arrested at other times for questioning about violence.

Chief of Police Gerk, who announced Friday that his department has gathered enough evidence about bombings and extortionist activities to take the matter before a grand jury, says gang tactics are being employed to force workers and shop owners to join trade unions and associations. Gerk said he would confer with Circuit Attorney Sidener and seek indictments.

"Toots" Clarke, business agent of the Cleaners' and Dyers' Union, is sought as the man who shot a driver for the Washington Cleaning & Dyeing Co. last Wednesday. The wounded driver has identified a photograph of Clarke as his assailant. This was the second driver for that firm to be shot. The first driver originally said Clarke was his assailant, but later changed his story. The Washington company is a non-union shop. It formerly belonged to the St. Louis Cleaners' and Dyers' Association, an organization of wholesale shop owners, but withdrew some time ago.

ROBINSON IS READY FOR TOUR

Will Speak in Dallas Tomorrow on Labor.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 1.—Preparations were completed today by Senator Robinson for his political invasion of the South, which will start the first of the week with a speech in Dallas, Tex. He spent a busy day in his law office going over plans for the trip. The vice-presidential nominee will leave Little Rock tomorrow night.

Inasmuch as Monday is Labor day, a considerable part of his address will be devoted to a discussion of the Democratics party's attitude toward labor. He is considering addresses on two other subjects—the qualifications of Gov. Smith for the presidency and what the Senator describes as the "whispering campaign." It is regarded as probable that his speech on the Demicratic presidential nominee will be delivered Tuesday at Cisco, Tex.

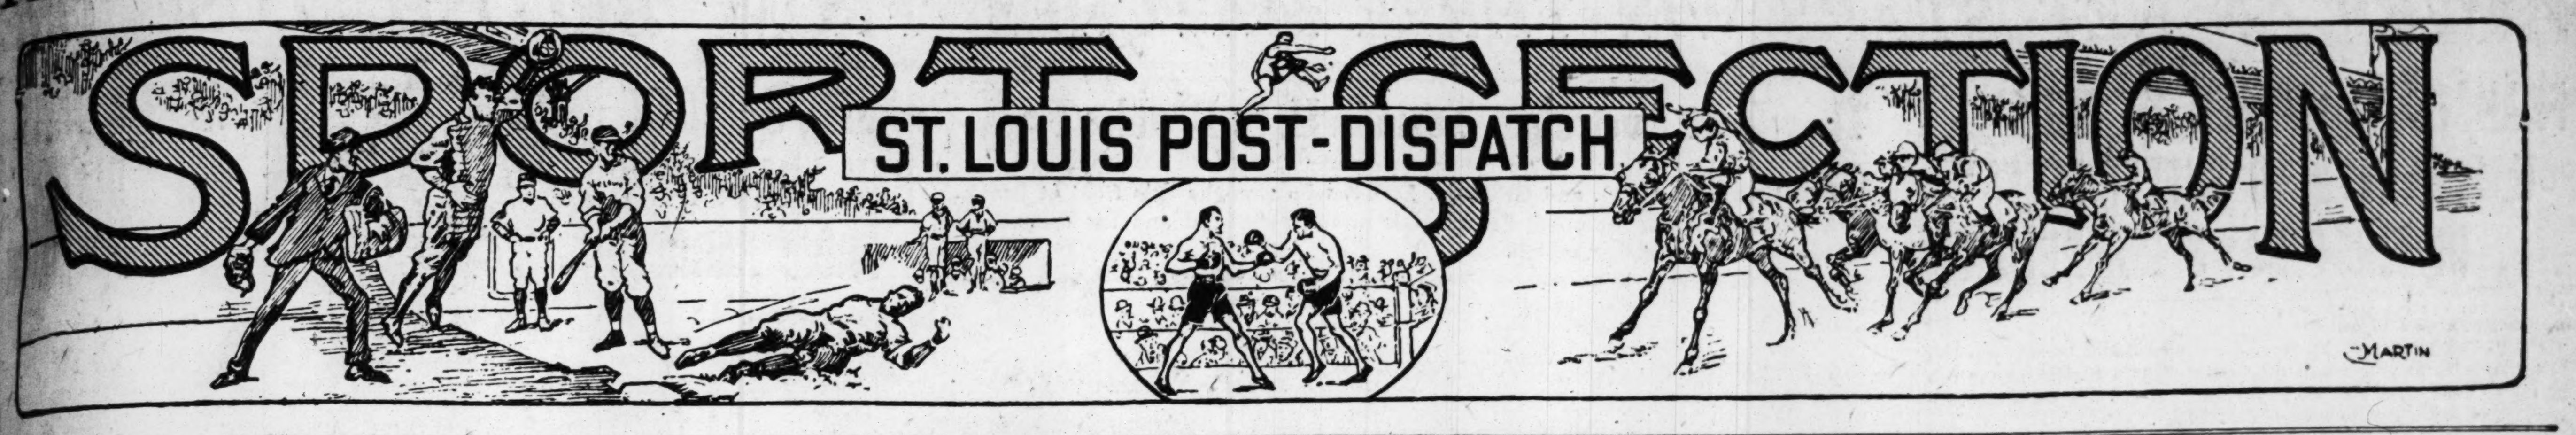
TIGERS SLUG BALL HARD AND DEFEAT THE BROWNS, 6 TO 4



PART TWO. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 2, 1928. PAGES 1—6S

CARDS CAPTURE FINAL, 4-1, AND TAKE PIRATE SERIES

THREE HOME RUNS PROVE TOO MUCH FOR OGDEN

By Herman Wecke

"Pinky" Hargrave, a red-headed ackstop, who some few years ago rew salary from owner Phil Ball of the Browns and then was sent o the International League in rade, only to be brought back to he major leagues by the Detroit club, proved the big gun in the igers' 6 to 4 victory over the Browns in the second of the series Sportsman's Park yesterday. He made the count on the series all ven at one each. This Hargrave erson took a particular liking to he offerings of Johnny Ogden and ch time a man was on base when e catcher decided it was time to ck one. It would not have been bad had Hargrave kept his raps the playing field, but he did not that. It was out of the playing ld or no count with this slugger.

Hargrave's First Homer.

First, he came up in the fourth hen the Tigers were trailing by ree runs. Gehringer was on first se. And young Hargrave parked e in the pavilion and the Browns ere but one run to the good. In e eighth, with the score tied and cManus on second, Hargrave pped to the plate again. Once re he laid the wood into the ball a drive into the right field s was again the result.

Thus, this ex-member of the St. is club, drove in four runs. He d assistance from another sorrel-. This person was none other an "Red" Wingo, center fielder. ingo came up in that hectic urth with Heilmann on first and e drove one on top of right field vilion. From which it can be n that all the Tiger runs were e to four-baggers.

Had Ogden been able to confine e enemy swats to drives inside e park he would have been re-rned the victor over Owen arroll, the right hander, who illed for George Moriarity. arroll, however, had more luck. e was able to keep all but one of e Browns' hits, a swat by Schang the fourth, inside the orchard d that was the difference.

Carroll Gets Better.

arroll was wobbly at the start. the first four rounds, the owns found him for six safeties, in the last five they were able make only one, a single by Mc-wan in the eighth. This Carroll, not so many years ago was a at Holy Cross, grew better as battle progressed. Ogden, on other hand, was at his best in first three rounds. In the last he was punched for 10 swats, uding the aforementioned cir-wallops, which brought about twelfth reverse of the campaign against 13 victories.

lue and Manush, two young who last season slaved for the ts and whose main idea in life since has been to show Mo-ty what a mistake he made, led in the first to start the ns on their way to a run. The sacker tallied when Schulte pped an ace in right.

o open the second Brannon ed a base hit off Carroll's e. Bettencourt singled and n Stone fumbled. Brannon ched third and Bettencourt sec-. Brannon scored while Geh-r was tossing out Schang. the men of Howley worked squeeze play, Ogden bunting going out, Neun unassisted. Bettencourt crossed the .

gden started throwing the run ball in the fourth. One out when he passed Geh-er. Then Hargrave parked one the pavilion and the local lead ndled to one run. Heilmann wed with a single and Wingo d a homer on top of the ion and the Browns' three-run was a one deficit. But not long for in the home portion the inning Wallie Schang ked one into the seats after had been retired. Despite the ge he did in the fourth, Har-e was not through for the aft-on. Probably he was still king of the booing he received n he kicked on a decision at plate in the first game of the . So with McManus on base result of a single in the eighth, grave swatted his second drive the right field pavilion and

Jockey E. Pool Rides 3 Winners; Wood Lore Takes Autumn Purse

By Dent McSkimming

Earl Pool took the occasion of the Fairmount race track opening to show a crowd of 12,000 just what can be done in the way of riding a race horse. He won the fourth, fifth and sixth races with Plumbago, Wood Lose and Dinner Dance, and each time it was quite obvious that Pool had a great deal to do with the success of his mount.

More suitable weather and track conditions could scarcely be had than those which helped to make yesterday's opening one of the most successful in the history of the track. The play at the mutuel windows was lively and the big crowd probably considered it a good day's sport, for the favorites were constantly coming home in front. All of Pool's winners were heavily played.

One notable exception to this succession of victories by the favorites was the defeat of Polygamia in sixth, wherein Short Price proved the best of a field of 12. The public was slow to put its faith in Short Price. For a time he was held at 20 to 1, but on the last reading on the probable odds his price dropped to 8 to 1 and he actually paid $14.16 for $2.

Probably the most thrilling race

If Cards Break Even, Cubs Must Play .739 to Win

If the Cardinals are able to win half of the 26 games remaining on their schedule, the other teams considered in the pennant contending class in the National League race would have to play far above their season's averages to date, to defeat the St. Louis entry.

Should the Cardinals win 18 and lose 13 of their remaining games they would wind up with a record of 91 victories and 62 defeats, a percentage of .595. It will be remembered that one Chicago-Cardinal game was rained off the books recently and according to ordinary procedure cannot be played this season, so if all the rest of the contests are played the Cardinals will have played 153 games when the season is over, the same number as the Cubs while the Giants, Pirates and Reds still are figured to play out the full schedule of 154 games.

So in order to beat the Cardinals' assumed percentage of .595 at the season's close, the Cubs would have to win 17 of their remaining 23 games, the Giants would have to win 23 of their remaining 32 games, the Pirates would have to win 21 and lose five while the Reds would have to win 22 and lose 5.

Figured on a basis of the Cardinals breaking even in their remaining games, the other clubs would have to play as follows to win:

Club.	W.	L.	Pct.
Cubs	17	6	.739
Giants	23	9	.719
Pirates	21	5	.808
Reds	22	5	.815

And it must be remembered that the Cardinals' normal average this year is considerably over the .500 mark, .600 or better, so if they continue at that pace, well—the line forms on the right.

Lott and Hennessey Defeat Australians In U. S. Title Final

By William R. King,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 1.—The future of American tennis took on a rosy hue here today when George M. Lott Jr., and John Hennessey, two of the nation's best younger players became the national doubles champions by overwhelming Gerald Patterson and Jack Hawkes, Australian Davis Cup players, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2, in just 42 minutes.

Their victory was even more impressive than that of yesterday, when they met Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon of France, then believed to be the greatest doubles team in the world, in the semi-final round of the forty-seventh national championship tournament and defeated them by the same scores.

Yesterday the young Americans gradually swept the Frenchmen right off the courts at the Longwood Cricket Club, but today their attack was so ferocious that Patterson and Hawkes were stunned by their first volley. The Australians were in retreat from the start of the title match to the final point and at no time did they even make an offensive gesture.

Lott and Hennessy planned to center on Patterson and that veteran immediately wilted under their merciless fire. Hawkes when he tried to rally to his partner's aid. also was beaten back.

Lott the Hero.

Lott, for the second cosecutive day, was the hero of the American victory. He made 15 earned points and made but 15 errors. Hennessy was not outclassed much, having nine earned points to his credit and only 16 miscues.

Patterson, usually steady, had a wretched day. He made 31 errors during the three sets and had his service broken four times out of five tries. Hawkes had 16 errors The Australians made only 15 earned points in the match.

Neither Hennessy nor Lott lost service and during the match set they won three of their four love games. Patterson and Hawkes had one love game in each of the three sets.

The Australians, who entered the final round today for the second time in three years, were confident that this was their year to win the title. In 1925 they were defeated in the championship round by "Big Bill" Tilden and Vincent Richards. Twice before that Patterson was a finalist, once teamed with the great Norman Brookes, probably the greatest tennis player Australia ever produced, and later with the colorful Pat O'Hara Wood, another countryman

Succeed Tilden and Hunter.

By their victory the Americans gained the doubles title which Tilden and Francis T. Hunter, last year's winners, were forced to let go under the ruling of the Executive Committee of the U. S. L. T. A., barring the player-writer for hs Wimbledon articles.

Tilden, who watched Lott and Hennessy ride rough-shod over the Australians from the press box, had no replies to questioners who wanted to know his reasons for keeping the youngsters out of the recent Davis cup play against France.

Helen Wills, who holds most of the world's tennis titles that are open to women players, captured her third national title in a week by winning the mixed doubles with Hawkes as her partner. They defeated Edith Cross of San Francisco and E. F. Moon, another Australian, in straight sets, 6—1, 6—3.

The mixed doubles title, won last year by Miss E. B. Bennet of England and Henri Cochet of France, was not defended this year.

J. D. E. Jones and Arnold Jones of Providence gained the national father and son doubles championship by easily defeating D. M. Hill and Malcolm Hill of Newton, 6—0, 6—1, in the final match of that tourney.

The national veterans' doubles championship was awarded to Irv-

Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 1.—Bill Sherdel held the Pirates to seven scattered hits this afternoon and the confident Cardinals, bunching seven of their eight safeties off Carmen Hill in three innings, captured the third and final game of the series, 4 to 1, thereby maintaining their first place advantage over all rivals.

It was their second victory in three games played here.

The Cardinals have a comfortable lead of 4½ games over the Chicago Cubs, who also won yesterday. The Giants defeated the Robins and remained 6½ games in the rear of the league leaders while the Pirates was the only team to lose ground. They are now 7½ games behind.

It was a masterful game that the little southpaw hurled for the league leaders and his seventeenth victory of the campaign. "Sparky" Adams started the first inning with a double and scored on a sacrifice bunt and a sacrifice fly and after that the Bold Buccaneers were helpless before the baffling cross-fire and the tantalizing slow ball of the crafty left-hander.

Only Four Real Hits Off Willie.

Grantham hit a double, picking on a slow ball in the second inning, but he tried for third and was thrown out. Adams doubled with two out in the third and Hargreaves singled after two men had been retired in the fifth. Those four blows were the only real hits off Sherdel.

The Waner brothers bunched two infield hits in the sixth inning. Lloyd beat out a grounder which Frisch knocked down on the shortsop side of second base and a big hearted official scorer donated a hit to Paul Waner when Frankie Frisch booted his easy grounder. Then in the eighth Holm missed connections with Lloyd Waner's grounder and it was called a single.

Hill started the game like a champion craftsman. He turned back three Cardinals in the first and again in the second. But in the third inning, Jimmy Wilson led off with a line single to right and Hill, trying to block Maranville's efforts to sacrifice, walked the Rabbit. Sherdel bunted in an effort to sacrifice and Hill's throw to third had Wilson by a step. But Jimmy, conceding nothing, slid desperately for the bag and Traynor dropped the throw.

This break filled the bases and Douthit, waiting out his string until the call was three balls and two strikes, hit between Traynor and Adams, and Wilson and Maranville raced home. Holm, Frisch and Bottomley then were retired to end the inning, but in the fourth the prospective champs added another run to their total. Harper doubled to left center with one out and Wilson lined a single between Hill's legs and Harper scored.

Harper Helps Score Another.

Hill escaped further damage then until the eighth, when Frisch dragged a half bunt toward first and beat it out. Bottomley's single to right sent Frisch to third and, after Hafey sent a short fly to Lloyd Waner, Harper singled to center, scoring Frisch.

Sherdel's control was perfect. He struck out three men and did not issue any passes. Several times he was in the hole to batters, but he always was able to find the plate in the pinch. In the second, for instance, he threw three straight balls to Bartell and then struck him out. Again in the ninth he was in the hole, three balls and one strike, with Traynor at bat, but he put over a second strike and then floated a slow ball over a corner for a called strike.

FLINT RHEM WILL OPEN AGAINST REDS

PITTSBURG, Sept. 1.—Flint Rhem probably will pitch against the Reds tomorrow in the first game of a series of three, which includes a double-header Monday, Labor day. Manager McKechnie also mentioned Fred Frankhouse as a possible starter.

Frankhouse pitched against the Reds last September in a game which the Reds won. That defeat, coupled with a victory scored by the Pirates the same day, clinched the 1927 pennant for Pittsburg.

The Cardinals are receiving hundreds of telegrams from fans. Among the prize messages is one from a division of postal clerks which said: "We are with you 99 per cent strong. The other one per cent is Fritz Miller, who is a dyed-in-the-wool Brown rooter."

A letter writer in Akron, O., has threatened to file suit against Grover Cleveland Alexander for $10,000,000 because he says Old Pete is using his "collar button ball," which the writer says he has registered in the Patent Office. He offers Pete rights to the delivery for five million.

About 15,000 persons attended the League leaders' final game of the year in Pittsburg.

If Holm had sacrificed with runners on first and second and none out in the third, the Cards would have scored an extra run, as Frisch's long fly to Comorosky would have been a sacrifice.

The call was three balls and two strikes when Douthit singled to drive in two runs and the same when Frisch flied out.

Grantham led off in the second with a double to right, but tried to stretch it and was out, Harper to Frisch to Holm.

Adams got his second double in the third inning, but two were out and Lloyd Waner flied to Douthit to end the inning.

AMERICAN NET STARS WIN THREE MATCHES FROM BRITISH, LOSE ONE

FRANCES T. HUNTER IS ONLY U. S. PLAYER TO SUFFER DEFEAT IN FIRST DAY'S COMPETITION

By the Associated Press.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 1.—United States tennis stars had rolled up a three-to-one lead over Great Britain tonight at the end of the first day's play in their international two-day team competition. The series will be completed Monday.

The United States captured the doubles and two of the three singles matches today. Francis T. Hunter, of New Rochelle, N. Y., No. 2 in the national ranking, alone suffering defeat.

Wilmer Allison, of Fort Worth, Texas, No. 11 in the national ranking, sprang something of an upset when he defeated the ranking No. 1 British player, Edward Higgs, in straight sets, 6—2, 6—1. John Van Ryn, of Orange, N. J., No. 6 nationally, won his match against H. W. Austin, of Cambridge, new sensation of British tennis, 6—0, 2—6, 6—3. In the doubles, the American youngsters, Johnny Doeg, of Santa Monica, Cal., and Wilbur Coen, of Kansas City, rallied after losing the first set to the British pair of Higgs and I. G. Collins, and won out, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3.

V. O. Gregory accounted for his team's only triumph when he defeated Hunter, 7—5, 6—4, in an encounter marked by numerous errors.

Van Ryn and Austin put up by far the best tennis of the day. Van Ryn waltzed through the first set but struck a snag in the second when Austin went into an early lead and evened the match. The young Englishman, who carried Rene Lacoste to five sets at Wimbledon, continued his streak by taking the first two games of the third and final set but Van Ryn turned on full speed and dropped only one game on his way to victory.

Doeg and Coen Surprise.

Doeg and Coen, who substituted for George Lott and John Hennessey while the latter pair was winning the National doubles title at Brookline, were no match for Higgs and Collins at the start. The Americans never had played together and their teamwork was a bit off. In the second set, however, they rallied in sensational fashion and won it at 6—2 with the aid of Doeg's powerful service and overhead smashes and Coen's lobs and general all-around steady play. In the final set the Americans forged ahead to a 4 to 2 lead which they increased to 5 to 2 on Coen's service. At this point, Higgs scored on his own service, sending the score to 5—3. On Doeg's service the Americans were down at Love Forty and it looked like another game would have to be played. But Doeg's powerful delivery accounted for a point, Coen scored a placement and Doeg served a near-ace that scored again and brought the count to deuce. Then on a placement by Coen and an error into the net by Higgs the match went to the Americans.

Monday's Matches.

Van Ryn meets Higgs Monday; Allison plays Austin, and Coen meets Collins in the singles; and Allison and Van Ryn pair in the doubles against Austin and Gregory.

WHITTLER TO BE ELIGIBLE FOR BEARS' ELEVEN

By Jerry Bernoudy

Candidates for the Washington U. football team are looking forward to the first practice session, which will be held Sept. 15 at Francis Field, under Dr. Al Sharpe, the new director of athletics.

Despite the loss of several regulars who have dropped out of school or have become ineligible, reserve strength and reinforcements from last season's freshmen squad are expected to produce a team fully as strong as last year's eleven.

As previously announced, Collins, captain-elect, Hartnett and Shimmers will not return to school. It is also certain now that Elwyn Comstock, first-string tackle, will not be available for the team because of scholastic troubles, which, although they may not keep him from returning to school, will prevent his participation in athletics. The status of Ted Whittler, regular fullback, which was said to have been uncertain, has become satisfactory by his successful work in summer school.

Three "uncertainties" still remain as a result of difficulties encountered in the summer school work. Ralph Kurz, football end and also captain-elect of the 1928-29 cage team, along with George Coover and Scott Hornsby, two shining lights from the freshmen squad, comprise this list. All of these boys are waiting for permission to take another examination, and thereby establish their good standing.

The list of veterans and promising sophomores who are expected to turn out for practice includes Lee Scheib, Carl Bickel, Cecil Drake, Paul Paris, Dick Rawdon, Clarence Ax, Sam Duncan, Jerry Hoffman, "Tiny" Glazer, Theis Lohrding, Russel Doerner, Clarence Butts and Robert Jarret.

Ray Keech Wins 100-Mile Race

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 1—Ray Keech, who attained a speed of 208 miles an hour at Florida last winter, today wrested the 100-mile dirt track championship from the youthful Russell Snowberger, a brother Philadelphian, before a crowd of 70,000 persons. His time was 1 hour, 19 minutes, 40.55 seconds.

Fore more than half of the distance, Snowberger, piloting Ira Vail's speedy Miller Special, appeared a sure victor but after a thrilling battle the veteran Keech cut in ahead of him and rapidly widened the gap. Snowberger was nearly half a mile behind when the race ended.

The huge crowd was treated to a thrill early in the race when three of the speeding machines crashed near the three-quarter pole. No one was seriously injured. The accident occurred when Charles Ganung of Katonah, blinded by dust at the end of the back stretch, crashed through the inside fence, rebounded and turned around twice.

ST. LOUISANS FAIL IN 20-MILE SWIM; LIDDLE IS VICTOR

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

QUINCY, Ill., Sept. 1.—Defeating his nearest opponent by nearly two minutes, the same record he made last year, B. N. Liddle of Davenport, Ia., won the third annual Canton to Quincy swimming contest today. Rome Boekenhoeff of Quincy was second. J. T. Hodges of Indianapolis was third. Donald Kenney of Galesburg, fourth; Andrew Weston of Chicago, fifth; Earl Adams of Toledo, sixth; Louis Goldberg of Des Moines, seventh; Joseph J. Marten of St. Louis won eighth place in the swim and E. C. Dunville of St. Louis nineteenth. Marten swam the 20 miles in four hours, three and a half minutes; Dunville in four hours and 30 minutes.

Vivian Welsch of Rockford, the first woman to finish, collapsed when she reached the shore at Quincy and was taken to a local hospital suffering from exhaustion. She was the tenth swimmer to arrive and her time was four hours seven and a half minutes. There were seven women entered and all finished.

Because of the high river stage and swift current the time made was excellent. Liddle made the distance in three hours and 50 minutes. The fastest previous time was three hours and 37 minutes, made by Lyle Hubbard of Toledo, O., in 1926. This record has not been equalled since.

Marten of St. Louis won the Quincy-to-Hannibal swim in 1925. He has been entered in contests here since that time but slowed down greatly this year.

Liddle, who won the 1927 championship and other winners received their awards at a dinner given tonight at the Y. M. C. A.

Army Polo Team Wins 10 to 4 From Point Judith

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 1.—Fort Riley's army polo team, riding hard but with aim and precions, broke the back of Point Judith's defense today and won the national 12-goal championship from the team which defeated them in the intercircuit finals a week ago.

The cavalry captains from Kansas won by a vast margin, 10 to 4, but not without two casualties of the rough play, both from the mallet of Gerald Dempsey, captain of the young Rhode Island team. Capt. Charles Burgess got a broken thumb out of it and had to retire. Capt. L. K. Truscott was hit by a ball on the right eye. Throwing up his arm to call for time, he slumped across his horse and later had to retire from play.

They Beat Australian Team in U. S. Doubles Final

Tilden's Technical Story Of U. S. Doubles Victory

By Wm. T. Tilden II.

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—George M. Lott Jr. of Chicago and John F. Hennessey of Indianapolis won the national doubles championship of the United States by overwhelming Gerald L. Patterson and B. Hawkes of Australia in the final round, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2, in three-quarters of an hour.

The U. S. team won the toss and George Lott started service. Patterson won the first point with a great lob between the Americans. Lott trailed, 15-30, on Hennessey's missed overhead, was 30-40 down on Hawkes' fine kill. A long lobbing rally by the Australian with both Americans smashing well was won when Hawkes lobbed out and then Lott volleyed out the game, 1-0. Hawkes opened for Australia. Errors by the Americans and a service ace by Hawkes made it 1-all in a love game. Fine volleying by the Americans made up for a missed overhead by Lott and they led, 2-1, as they took Hennessey's delivery. A great lob by Hennessey over Patterson and two errors by Patterson had him 0-40 down and Hawkes lost the game by volleying out, America leading 3-1.

Patterson's errors and Lott's fine volley and service ace made it 4-1 for the U. S. netted service returns off Hawke's twisting delivery followed by a magnificent rally won by Hawkes with a lucky net-cord gave Hawkes 40-15 and Patterson smashed for the game, making the count 4-1 for the United States.

Hennessey double faulted to start the seventh game and missed an easy kill-of a short lob to trail, 0—30. Another net-cord by Hawkes made it 15—40, but Hawkes lobbed out. Patterson drove out to end a long rally and it was deuce. Lott volleyed for vantage but smashed out for deuce. Lott volleyed for vantage but again smashed out for deuce. Lott again missed an easy kill for vantage and then smashed hard four times in a point before winning for deuce. Two errors gave the Americans the game lead, 5—2. Hawkes missed a volley and netted overhead to Patterson, 0—30. Patterson reached 40-all when Hawkes netted another volley to bring up set point. A lucky net-cord by Hennessey forced Hawkes into an out and it was the Americans set, 6—2.

Lott opened service in the second set. He smashed for a clean placement on the first point. Hawkes made a marvelous recovery to aid the Australians to reach 30-all, but Lott took the game, 1—0. Hawkes opened for Australia. Patterson's and Hawkes' fine smashing and volleying added a love game, one game all. The Americans' good smashing stood off the lobbing attack of the Australians and Hennessey took a love game, giving the United States a 2—1 lead.

Patterson's Arm Bothers Him.

Patterson hit an overhead on the fly into the stand to start the fourth game. His arm seemed to be bothering him. Hawkes' wretched volleying and smashing had Patterson 15—40, and he was again broken on his own netted volley, 3—1 to the United States. Fine work by Hennessey at the net aided Lott to win, 4—1. Miraculous volleying by all the men at the net featured Hawkes' service game, but his double fault aided in another break and the Americans led, 5—1, as Patterson missed the side line an inch on a great attempt at a passing shot. Hennessey won the set on his service, 6—1, as the Australians tossed it away on errors.

Patterson opened the service in the third set and for the first time showed signs of his regular speed. He took the game at love with great deliveries. Australian errors gave Lott his service to 1-all. Bad volleying errors by both Australians aided by a great recovery by Hennessey broke Hawkes and the U. S. team lead, 2-1.

Paterson's errors off the ground and Hennessey's excellent volleying carried the U. S. to 4-1. Patterson was in trouble due to a fine backhand drive by Lott and his own double fault and his two services aces went for nothing when Hawkes netted an easy volley for deuce, 4-1. Lott, with a magnificent smash to bolster up Patterson's errors of service, went to 6-1. A great recovery by Hennessey aided in bringing U. S. to 30-all when Hawkes gave them set point on a double fault, Patterson saved it with a clean volley. Lott and Hennessey were running all over the court making marvelous recoveries but the Australians pulled out the game 5-2, to U. S. Hennessey ran out the match aided by the errors of the Australians and the doubles championship stayed in the U. S.

Westerners Play Great Game.

The match was almost a repetition of the one of yesterday when Lott and Hennessey overwhelmed the French. The Western stars played phenomenal tennis. Their defense was air tight. They made no errors either in hitting the ball or in judgment. It was a magnificent performance. Hawkes and Paterson were wild and erratic but fighting all the time. They received a great ovation as they left the court. The newly crowned doubles champions of the United States, Lott and Hennessey, almost buried under the big challenge cups crowded with flowers, were photographed and cheered to the echo before they left the court.

Lott and Hennessey may well feel proud of their magnificent matches against both the French and Australian pairs. In every way these two boys reached new heights in their tennis careers.

WOMAN DRIVER'S BOAT UPSETS IN TROPHY RACE

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Sept. 1.—The lone foreign challenger to the British International (Harmsworth) Trophy for speed boats — the premier award for power boat racing — rested at the bottom of the Detroit river tonight, probably lost forever, her mechanic injured and her pilot, Marian Barbara Carstairs, plucky British sportswoman, grieving but unhurt following the initial heat of the race classic held here today.

Gar Wood, gray-haired veteran of the river courses, and holder of the Harmsworth trophy for the past five years, roared down the Detroit River's powerboat course in his latest phantom boat, Miss America VII, a boat the "peak" power of which never has been reached to win the heat and set a new Harmsworth record for a single heat of 68.411 statute miles per hour over a course of 30 nautical miles. To again secure possession of the trophy, Wood must race his boat one more heat, on Monday. His victory, barring an accident, seems certain.

Joe Harris of England, Miss Carstairs' valued mechanic, is in St. Mary's hospital suffering from two broken ribs and possible internal injuries following the spectacular upset of the British boat, while speeding up the course at a 60-mile clip. The Estelle II, a pigmy when compared to the other Harmsworth entries dived high into the air then nosed into the water when it struck a swell toward the end of the first lap. Pilot and mechanic were thrown from the boat, which sank immediately. Tugboats were trying to locate it in the river channel, but so far efforts have been unavailing.

The defeat threw the foreign challenger entirely out of the running. Gar Wood's second boat, the Miss America V, winner of the trophy in 1920 and in years thereafter, ran second in the first heat today. James Talbot's Miss Los Angeles was a poor third and last contestant.

Miss Carstairs, uninjured although suffering slightly from the shock of being thrown into the water, accepted the loss of her boat philosophically. It is her third boat to be sunk during a race, representing a loss in the past few years estimated at $125,000. She said she would try again.

Commander Harry Greening of Hamilton, Ont., driving the rainbow VI, won the first heat of the North American championship race when his only opponent, the Scorpion of New York, sank when driftwood wrenched off a propeller, piercing the hull.

Final heats in the two leading races, together with other powerboats events, will be run off Monday. A crowd estimated at 150,000 lined the river course to witness today's events.

HAGEN, 3 UNDER PAR, AGAIN WINS FROM FARRELL

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Stroking the difficult 6542-yard Ridgemoor course in 3 under par, Walter Hagen of New York, the British open champion, today defeated Johny Farrell, American open titleholder, 5 and 3, in their second 36-hole match for the "World's Golf Championship."

"The Haig's" victory made it two straight for him over Farrell, and he needs to win but one of the remaining three matches to clinch the mythical title.

On his victorious round today, Walter bagged four birdies and one eagle—the eagle coming on the 33d hole, a par five, where he used his spoon to push his ball six feet of the pin. Johnny got a birdie four on the same hole in a valiant fight to overtake him, but it meant nothing, and the match was over.

Hagen Three Under Par.

Hagen ended the 36 holes with a score of 71—70—141, or three under perfect figures. Farrell's score for the 36 was 75—74—149.

Farrell was not as accurate with his irons as Hagen, who several times laid his approach shots from a distance of 100 yards to within ten or three feet of the cup.

Johnny got five birdies, two of them coming on the 19th and 20th holes, but he spoiled these by going over par on eight other holes.

First Coliseum Fight Card Is Slated Sept. 25

The Fred W. Stockham Post of the American Legion will begin the indoor boxing season at the New Coliseum arena with a program of five professional bouts Tuesday night, Sept. 25, according to Matchmaker Jack Tippett, who stated last night that the legion organization has leased the arena for a total of 20 shows during the season.

The wrangle between State and city commissions over jurisdiction in the local boxing game prevented the Stockham Post from starting its promotional activities last season until the second week in February, after which seven shows were held.

Local and out-of-town fighters who compiled the most impressive records last season will be accorded the preference in early season engagements, according to Tippett, who outlined plans for a series of elimination events which he plans to conduct in an effort to select the outstanding local battler of each weight division.

Dave Knost and Frank Power, former amateur champions, who graduated to professional company last season, are among the fighters Tippett has under consideration for bouts on his first card. Joe Ghnouly, senior Western District bantam champion for the past three years, may also appear on the New Coliseum bill, according to Tippett, who has been advised Ghnouly is ready to enter the professional field.

Other prospective contestants are: Paul Steadman, local featherweight; Irish Kennedy, St. Paul welterweight; Lou Terry, local lightweight; Dwight Fryer, Little Rock, welterweight, and Walter "Red" Roland, local lightweight.

Wray's COLUMN

Gaining on Us.

ON Sept. 22 and 23 at Triple A courts, we will learn about tennis from Helen. The greatest woman tennis player of the day, now world's amateur champion beyond dispute, Miss Wills has arranged to play exhibitions here on the dates named.

One of the most interesting proposals in connection with the talented young woman's visit will be, it is expected, a match against a man player of high rank, possibly Wray Brown.

Miss Wills recently startled the world by defeating Fritz Mercur. The fact that Mercur, a few days before, had defeated both Bill Tilden and George Lott, makes her achievement little short of amazing.

Whether Mercur, as men players usually do under such circumstances, handicapped himself by playing a baseline game has not been developed. It seems highly improbable that the female of the tennis species can have gained enough physical and technical ground to close the gap on mere man.

When Bill Played Suzanne.

THE chances are that Fritz was more gallant than Bill Tilden was reported to have been when pitted against the famous Suzanne Lenglen. Bill wanted to show her just where to head in—and he ungallantly made a fine job of it. Suzanne couldn't outrank herself.

If Miss Wills plays a top rank male player, here, one rather hopes that he will extend himself in order that fans may get an adequate idea of just how good the first woman player's game really is.

Mrs. Mallory, when champion, played an exhibition set while here a number of years ago. Roland Hoerr opposed her and was beaten. But the chop stroke expert did not go all out to win at all. It's the courteous thing to do perhaps, but it is misleading, none the less.

Giants Not "Syndicating."

WHEN Rogers Hornsby and his Braves spanked the New York Giants twice in one day and all but put them out of the pennant running, the baseball atmosphere was cleared considerably.

For several years it has been the popular belief that the Braves were owned by the New York Giants. The shifting back and forth of star players lent color to this view. When the Giants sent Hornsby to the Braves the head-shaking became general. "Syndicate baseball" was the whispering campaign cry.

The resolute manner in which the Braves with no hope of going anywhere have fought the Giants seems destined to dispel all thought of connection between the two teams.

If there are straw owners representing the Giants on the Braves' board, the New Yorkers have certainly not been able to tamper with the movements of the players.

The Dusky Eliminator.

GEORGE GODFREY, ponderous and crude, promises to take a lot of elimination worries off the hands of Promoter Tex Rickard.

One by one he is picking off all the "logical candidates" for the post recently vacated by the retired aesthete, Gene Tunney.

Pierre Charles, the Belgian giant, lingered a couple of rounds with the dark menace and then passed out kicking, as the most recent example of Godfrey's service to the cause of heavyweight fight promotion.

Paulino Uzcudun previously had been set down by the gigantic black and the rest of the "hopes" will line up on the right and take turns in being knocked around or worse, with Jack Sharkey as he goes, well, heading the list.

The sad part, from Godfrey's viewpoint, is that his victories will not advance his own cause as a "logical contender." Tex Rickard is not partial to dark meat in serving up his ring tidbits.

Godfrey's success with the eliminations is not necessarily an indication of greatness. On the contrary, to those who have seen the big mauler in action it merely indicates the low class of the entire field of title candidates.

PORTNOY AND BASCOM WIN MUNY JUNIOR DOUBLES CHAMPIONSHIP

William Bascom and Joyce Portnoy won the Municipal Junior doubles crown yesterday by defeating Alfred Rothschild and Sidney Wyman, 8—6, 6—3, 6—3. In the first set Rothschild and Wyman led 5 to 4 and 40 to 15 on Portnoy's service, but were unable to win. Then Bascom and Portnoy led 6—5 in the same set and 40 to 0 on his service but also lost the game.

GRAY AND STONER TODAY'S PITCHERS

Sam Gray will pitch for the Browns in the final with the Tigers if his elbow, which has been giving him trouble, is O K, Manager Howley announced. Otherwise, it will be George Blaeholder. Lil Stoner is due for the enemy.

The Labor day double-header with the Cleveland Indians will start at 1:30 o'clock.

Chances are that the Browns will bring in few, if any, young players this fall. "We have half a dozen men at Tulsa, but that club is in the thick of the Western League fight and needs them, while Milwaukee will need Guy Sturdy as long as the Association season runs," said Bill Friel, when asked if any athletes would be recalled for delivery this fall.

McGowan Stars in Field.

This young man, McGowan, in right for the Browns, made two fine defensive plays in the first. He went far toward right center for Neun's drive and then he picked Hargrave's smash off the right-field concrete.

A crowd estimated at 8500 saw the battlers of Howley in action against the Jungaleers.

Wingo was retired on a fine play in the second. Blue grabbed his roller far behind first base and Ogden coming over at full speed, snagged the throw and touched the base ahead of the runner.

It was home-run inning in the fourth, when Hargrave, Wingo and Schang parked drives in, or on top of, the right-field pavilion. All were solid smashes.

So It Didn't Matter.

Heine Manush lost a swat in the fifth when Tavener went behind second for a brilliant stop of his grounder. The play at first was mighty close, but Umpire Barry ruled that Heine was out. Previously the Brownie leftfielder had made a single and double.

The rival twirlers were busy athletes covering first. In the opening six rounds Carroll had three putouts and Ogden two, indicating that both men know the value of going over to cover the bag on swats to the first-sacker.

Brannon had to leap for Neun's roller in the seventh and his throw just did retire the runner.

Schulte came in fast in the eighth to make a fine running catch of Wingo's short fly.

BOBBY JONES SAYS==

EXPERIENCE in competition is indispensable to the man who wants to win important events. Few youngsters ever break through to a big championship without first going through the mill of bitter defeats.

But to gain experience is one thing and to become fed up with competition is quite another. In the hope of hardening themselves against the nervous strain of a championship, many players set themselves to the performance of a schedule which simply burns them out.

Rarely, if ever, does the leading pro of the winter season become even an important factor in the open championship played in June. Tournament after tournament taken at high speed takes away the keen edge from the most perfect game, and no competitor is dangerous who is not keyed up to the minute and anxious to play golf.

Johnny Farrell must have had in mind this year the failures, in the spring, of the sensations of past winter seasons. After scoring brilliantly in Miami, Johnny played his way north through the rest of the circuit, and then announced that he would not go to England. He realized that he was overgolfed and needed a rest before undertaking another national championship.

Championship Taxes Energy

IT is hard to appreciate just what toll of nervous energy a championship can take, especially if you happen to be one who has a chance to win up to the last few holes. Farrell himself furnished a good example this year when he allowed himself to be persuaded to play in the Kansas City open on the day after finishing at Olympia Fields. After averaging two better than fours for 72 holes at Chicago, he found himself nine strokes behind the leader after two rounds at Kansas City. Almost anyone else would have been 19 strokes behind.

It is a wonderful thing to be keen to play. Star professionals, in constant demand for exhibition matches, get mortally sick of playing golf, just like other human beings, and it is a wonder to me that they are able to keep going at anything near an even pace.

A Tourney a Week.

WATTS GUNN recently attemped to win three tournaments in a space of a little over three weeks. He won the Southeastern P. G. A. open and the Southern amateur, but was beaten in the second round while defending his national intercollegiate title. Trying hard and playing well, Watts made an excellent bid, but three weeks is too long to keep going at high speed.

The man who wants to do well at every appearance must arrange for a little rest, a change of scenery in the meantime. Too much of the same thing, a continuous strain, will break down the game of the very best of them.

a result of his knee injury, suffered in Chicago, was benched and George Harper played right field.

No wonder Paul Waner is hitting so well. Any time he reaches base he is credited with a safety. In the sixth inning Frisch fumbled his easy grounder, but without hesitation Paul was given a single by the scorer.

Bottomley got a long single in the eighth inning. Frisch was on first and feared the ball would be caught, but the drive hit the concrete wall of the right field stand. Frisch barely reached third and Bottomley, held back by the danger of passing Frisch, had to stop at first.

Donie Bush used two pinch-hitters, Hillis, for Hill, struck out, and Wright, for Grantham, lined to Bottomley.

CARDS RECALL BACKSTOP FROM MINOR LEAGUE

Harold Funk, manager and catcher for the Waynesboro, Pa., team of the Blue Ridge League, has been recalled by the Cardinals, it was announced yesterday. He will join the club at once.

Funk, who is 27 years old, broke his leg early in the season and has only been back in the team's lineup about a month. He is a hard hitter but is said to be slow.

The Cardinal catching staff is handicapped at the present time by an injury to Earl Smith, leaving Wilson the only backstop on the club.

E. Pool Rides Three Winners at Fairmount

of the day and the one big upset was the eighth and last of the program. Sleepy Time, ridden by R. Richardson, came out of the center of a group at the head of the stretch to outlast Duckweed and win. He paid a refund of $74.70 for $2.

Thistle Coot First Victor.

The honor of finishing first in the first race on the first day of the meeting fell to Thistle Coot and his victory was no great surprise. The bettors seemed to have the field pretty well doped out, for Thistle Coot, Genie Crit and Jack Crain, all heavily played, finished first, second and third. Cheering offered some show of competition for half a mile but weakened when D. Smith moved up with Thistle Coot in the stretch.

My Dandy and Blue Blood were far too good for 10 others who chased the two leaders for six furlongs in the second race. The only thrill of the race was provided in the last 70 yards, when Lucky Drift, finally shaking loose from the others, made a belated drive. He was a long shot and had he gotten free of interference a bit sooner he might have knocked the whole race topsy turvy. My Dandy was the favorite.

Play Hour ran one of his typical races in the third event. He was off in front, resisted repeated challenges for three-quarters of a mile and then at the head of the stretch, with victory in sight, bolted to the outside fence. Lily Sue may have been good enough to win without the aid of accidents, but Play Hour's bolt removed all doubt. Thistle Boy was second and Street Liz third.

Plumbago Beats Coal Black.

Eight good sprinters made a thrilling thing of the fourth race, called the Tower Grove purse. Petit Pan's early speed forced them all to hustle and they were every one equal to the pace, except Naishapur, which was practically left at the post. He might have been a prominent factor had he gotten off well, for he came with great speed, passed three horses, finished fifth, beaten only a couple of yards for the third money. Plumbago, aided by Earl Pool's good ride, won the race by nosing out Coal Black. The two fought it out in thrilling fashion over the final 70 yards.

Pool Scores His Third Victory.

Pool scored his third straight victory astride Dinner Dance in the sixth, a dash at five and one-half furlongs. He had his work cut out for him this time. Gen. Grant almost stole the race by getting off on top, but by the time they reached the turn out of the back stretch Dinner Dance had caught the General. At the stretch turn four horses were running abreast, just half a length back of Dinner Dance, and Charlie Bergin was especially prominent. Dinner Dance just did last to beat Charlie Bergin, with Gen. Grant third. The winner paid $7.10 for $2.

No innovations were attempted. In fact, there was one instance of a return to the old order in abandoning of the stall gate, which was given a very thorough trial at the spring meeting. Starter Bill Snyder used the orthodox barrier in sending the horses away.

Col. Matt Winn, managing director of the Fairmount Jockey Club and the dominating influence in Middle West racing affairs, was present on the occasion of the opening of the meeting.

Among the jockeys were many who are strangers to St. Louis race fans. Earl Pool was back. He's getting heavy. He couldn't make the required 107 pounds for his mount in the fourth race. He tipped the scales at 108½ pounds, with tack.

YANKS DEFEAT SENATORS TO RETAIN MARGIN OF TWO GAMES

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The Yankees kept their slim lead over the Athletics by defeating Washington today in the second game of the series 8 to 3. An error, three walks and three singles in the third inning scored five runs for New York and several Washington rallies thereafter were quelled.

A ruling by Umpire Nallin in the sixth inning that Tate's single hit Jones on the leg aroused the crowd which booed him frequently and long. Three pop bottles and a few aged straw hats were thrown at him between innings.

Umpire Dineen banished Bucky Harris in the ninth when the Washington manager disputed a decision calling Duroche safe at second after the umpire first had ruled that he was out.

Pipgras, New York starting pitcher, was taken out in the seventh inning after two runs had been scored and Hoyt held the Senators in hand during the rest of the game.

Ruth failed to get a hit, but he provided the fielding feature when in the sixth inning he crashed into the wall in right field as he pulled down Judge's drive with his gloved hand. Bob Meusel had a perfect day at bat, getting four hits.

JACK ALEXANDER SETS NEW TRACK RECORD AT ARLINGTON PARK

GRACIOUS GIFT WINS FEATURE RACE IN DRIVE FROM RURIK

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—McConnell and Walker's good gelding, Jack Alexander, established a new track record for a mile and one-sixteenth of 1:46 1-5 in winning the fourth race over the inner course at Arlington Park today. The gelding showed great speed all the way to win handily from J. N. Camden's Hiram and R. C. Stable's Sankari.

Jack Alexander paid $12.12 for $2 to win and won by a length and a half.

H. G. Goelitz Jr.'s Gracious Gift, ridden by E. Warden, won the $2000 Evanston Handicap at six furlongs, the feature on the program. Rurik finished second and Inquisitor was third.

Rurik broke on top and set the pace to the home stretch turn, where Gracious Gift came from third place to win in a drive by half a length. His time was 1:11 1-5 and he paid $7.24 straight in the mutuels. This was Jockey Warden's second winning mount of the day.

MEADOWS TO ATTEMPT COMEBACK NEXT YEAR DREYFUSS ANNOUNCES

PITTSBURG, Sept. 1. — Lee Meadows, veterans bespectacled hurler of the Pirates, who was placed on the voluntary retired list last week will be back in a Pirate uniform next spring, Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburg club announced today.

"It is Meadows' intention to come back next spring," Dreyfuss said. "He believes he is far from done but did not wish to accept further salary this year when he could not give service in return. He believes his arm is making satisfactory progress toward complete recovery and is in better shape now than at any time since neuritis developed during the 1925 world series."

JACK HIGH IS VICTOR IN RICH HOPEFUL STAKES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Under a perfect ride by George Ellis, Jack High, chestnut son of John P. Grier and Priscilla, won the rich Hopeful Stakes for 2-year-olds, feature of Saratoga's closing card today, and earned $54,500 for his owner, George D. Widener. Twenty thousand fans saw the Widener colt, a 7 to 1 choice, beat the favorite, Blue Larkspur, by a length and a half, with Chestnut Oak, of the Oakridge Stable, third. The time for the six and a half furlongs was 1:18 2-5.

As the field of 16 of the finest 2-year-olds in the country got away, Chestnut Oak snapped into the lead with Jack High and the Loma Stable's Twink, in hot pursuit. In the stretch, Jack High drew away to win while Blue Larkspur rushed up at a furious pace to take the place. Despite his defeat, Blue Larkspur, winner of the Junior National Stallion Stakes and the Saratoga Special, lost little, if any prestige. He carried top weight of 130 pounds and after overcoming a lot of interference in the early part of the race was caught again in a jam at the furlong pole and had to be eased out.

The co-feature, the Saratoga Cup, $5000 and plate added for 3-year-olds and up, developed into a match race between Reigh Count and Display, owned by W. J. Salmon. They were the only starters, Black Maria being scratched, and Mrs. John D. Hertz's Kentucky Derby winner was the victor. Reigh Count was under restraint most of the way and withstood a determined bid from Display in the stretch. Reigh Count's time, 2:55 for a mile and three-quarters, set a new track record.

Ashford's manager, M. C. Marshall, also was fined $55 and suspended six months, according to Secretary Ben J. Harrison. Ashford was knocked out in the round, narrowly escaping serious injuries when Bray landed a punch on the injured ribs.

Quarterfinal games in the eliminations series to determine the municipal baseball championship will be held on public park diamonds this afternoon.

All of the games scheduled are between well-matched teams and the scores should be close. The Standards play the Pants Store at Fairground, the Yellow Cabs and Tower Camps meet in Carondelet Park, the Polish Falcons battle the Hoffmeisters at Sherman Park and in Forest Park the St. James and Stuarts meet.

There were no startling upsets in yesterday's play, the closest thing to a reversal of form being in the Tower Camp victory over the Ideals, in which the low score of 4-2 came as a surprise. Slack, on the mound for the winners, was in good form and gave only three hits. He was accorded fine support, Morgenthaler driving in two runs and McCready getting four hits out of five times at bat.

Ludwig drove in four runs and helped materially in the Hoffmeister victory over McQuay-Norris, 7 to 2.

Flanagan and McCaffery hit homers as the aPnts Store squad was swamping the Moglers, 15 to 2.

The Standards just did beat the Y. M. H. A. Whites, 4 to 3. The winning run was scored in the seventh on two singles and an infield error.

Stanze, relief pitcher for the Stuarts, allowed only one hit in the last six innings and the Stuarts beat St. Engelberts, 9 to 6.

Twelve errors featured the ragged game in which the Yellow Cabs beat Sentinel, 9 to 4.

ST. LOUIS BIKE RIDERS ENTER U. S. TITLE MEET

By Wm. M. Martin.

The national bicycle championships will be held at Kenosha, Wis., Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 8 and 9, under the auspices of the Amateur Bicycle League of America.

Riders from all states will compete consisting of seniors and juniors who have qualified for this national event by winning the championship of the State from which he entered.

Louis Droz won the Missouri senior championship at the Fairground Park, while O. Stevens of Kansas City won the junior championship. He will go to Kenosha direct from Kansas City. While Droz met Chester Nelsen, the St. Louis Olympic representative, will leave St. Louis Thursday morning by automobile for the same place.

All Olympic contestants automatically qualify for the national championship, St. Louis will have both Droz and Nelsen as representatives at Kenosha.

Nelsen returned from Amsterdam Friday evening. The Olympic road race was won by K. Hansen of Denmark, time 4.47, with two English representatives taking second and third place in 5:02 and 5:03.

The first 10 finished under five hours and 17 minutes. Nelsen reports the course had numerous places where short cuts could be taken and absence of checkers at these points caused several protests to be presented.

Nelsen finished about fortieth position in 5 hours and 40 minutes. He was first of the American team to finish.

O'Brien was second in five hours and 52 minutes. Spencer was third, five hours and 56 minutes.

Cobblestones and rough spots in the comparative level course caused many accidents and broken wheels.

BILL SWIFT, PITCHER, SOLD TO KANSAS CITY

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 1.—Sale of Bill Swift, young right-hander, to the Kansas City Blues was announced today by Al G. Eickert, president of the Springfield Western Association club. The price was not announced.

Among other fighters under consideration for special matches are: John Schwake, South Broadway heavyweight; Joe Ghnouly, Flori Olympian bantam and senior Western A. A. U. title holder; Tommy Wade, 138th Infantry bantam, and Joe Herbst Jr., the Flori Olympian flyweight who holds junior district championship honors. 1928 ROOKIES WOULD MAKE 2 STRONG CLUBS

By HERMAN WECKE.

While post-season games are not permitted, other than the world series, which this year will start Oct. 3, it nevertheles would be a baseball classic worth while if it were possible to have a set of games between all-star teams of youngsters in the major leagues. Each circuit has its share of young talent and two pretty good clubs could be put in the field.

There have been many outstanding rookies during the 1928 campaign and placed together on an all-star nine they would make up quite a ball club, one which would have strength at every position.

And St. Louis teams furnish material for these clubs. For instance, the Cardinals have Walter Roettger, out now because of an ankle injury, who before he went out was hitting .341, and Ernie Orsatti. As regards the Browns, there are Ralph Kress, Larry Bettencourt and Jack Ogden, who stand out at their respective positions. Three of the number, Roettger, Kress and Ogden, make the grade on the all-star recruit team, composed of newcomers in both circuits.

Nationals Look Stronger.

Man-for-man it is probable that the National League's rookie team would outclass the American in all but a few positions. The senior circuit, for instance, has Bissonette and Hurst, two of the outstanding young first basemen of baseball. Bissonette is hitting .322 and has 20 home runs, while Hurst has a swat mark of .289 and has pounded out 19 four-baggers for Barney Shotton's dumb, dull, dismal Phillies. This is the first season for both and they'll improve.

At third base is Whitney of the Phillies. He is one of the best looking youngsters of the campaign, and is bound to get better. He has been one of the sparks of the tail-end machine all season. Another Phillie player makes the grade in Walter Lerian, the big catcher. Fresh from the Albany club of the Eastern League, this recruit prospered so well that it was possible for Manager Shotton to trade Jimmie Wilson to the Cardinals. At least that was Shotton's explanation when he was asked how he came to permit Wilson to go to the Cardinals. The presence of Lerian enabled him to let go of Wilson, a real star, and incidentally obtain a young star for another position—Don Hurst.

Ruth Rates Kress on Top.

These men are the best of the newcomers in the National. But the American also has its share. There is for instance Ralph Kress, the Brownie shortstop, rated by none other than Babe Ruth as the best recruit of the campaign. Kress started at a wonderful batting clip, but recently has fallen under the .300 mark. But he has been a great aid to Dan Howley's young club all season.

Another youngster in the American and one who ranks among the stars of the first water is Ed Morris, the big right-hand pitcher with the Red Sox. Twirling for a tail-end club, this right hander, last season in the Southern Association, has won more than .600 per cent of his contests, to be one of the leaders in the league. This despite the fact he is laboring for a team which is under the .400 figure on the campaign. Jack Ogden of the Browns is another.

Picking the stars of the two circuits, it is possible to put on the field a club which is batting close to .300. The outstanding athletes to form an all-star youngster team would be as follows:

A .300 Team Average.

Bissonette, .322, or Hurst, .289, first base; Lind, .304, second; Kress, .285, shortstop; Whitney, .316, third base; Rottger, .341 left field; Morgan, .313, center field; Taitt, .298, right field; Lerian, .279, catch. Pitchers for the nine would be Morris, Ogden, Brandt and Fussell.

There's strength there and there would be good substitutes for the various positions, inasmuch as such men as Orwoll, one of the main cogs in the rise of the Athletics; Cohen of the Giants, Kenna, the Washington catcher, and various others have been left off the list.

Of course, there are other youngsters, who have made good besides those mentioned on the two teams, but those selected look like the best of the crop. For instance the Browns have Brannon at second base. The Yanks have Durocher; Chicago has Cissell and Clancy. And it is the same way in the National. Nevertheless, the two nines selected probably could make a pretty fair showing in any kind of company.

CABINET OFFICERS TO TAKE STUMP IN HOOVER CAMPAIGN

Mellon, Wilbur, Kellogg, New, Dwight Davis and J. J. Davis Tentatively Plan Radio Speeches.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Attending his first baseball game since receiving the Republican nomination for the presidency, Herbert Hoover sat through two and a half hours today at Griffith Stadium to see the New York Yankees defeat the Washington Senators and to hear the roar of the mob demanding the blood of an umpire.

Occasionally munching peanuts, Hoover applauded neither team, but watched Ruth closely while the slugger was at bat and smiled broadly when the big right fielder swung and missed a strike in the first inning. He made frequent comments on the play and the roaring of the crowd to Ntaional Committeeman Roraback from Connecticut, who accompanied him, along with Mrs. Hoover, their son, Allan, and James Francis Burke of Pittsburg, Pa.

He spent the morning in conferring with some of the men who will participate in his effort to win the East. During the forenoon, the nominee went over the Connecticut situation with J. Henry Roraback of Hartford, National Committeeman for that State, discussed the Massachusetts problem with Frederick M. Prince, Boston railroad man and banker, and received additional light upon the New York Up-State conditions from Congressman John Taber of Auburn. At the same time, it was disclosed that several members of the Cabinet were preparing to take the stump for Hoover and Curtis. Tentative plans were disclosed for radio addresses by Secretaries Mellon and Wilbur, with others contemplated by Secretaries Kellogg, Dwight F. Davis and James J Davis, and Postmaster-General New Vice President Dawes already has signified a willingness to aid in the campaign.

Hoover To Open Tour in East.

Hoover plans to make his first speech in the East, at Newark, N. J., about the middle of September. The exact date is yet to be fixed. Labor probably will be the central theme of the speech. Negotiations are in progress for a nationwide radio hookup.

Various other Government officials and political friends dropped in upon the general headquarters of the candidate before he closed his desk for the week-end, including Commissioners Sandberg and Myers, who laid before him the Shipping Board's views on merchant marine matters.

Committeeman Roraback urged the nominee to visit Connecticut during his trip into New England He brought the view that the wet element in Connecticut was not as strong as some people think, and declared that "Connecticut people are realizing that the prohibition promises of Gov. Smith are not very substantial."

"Before the end of the campaign," Roraback said, "they will come to a realization that he does not promise anything. One man cannot influence a sufficient number of states to alter the constitution."

Roraback said that the dominant issue of the campaign in his state would be the tariff.

"The people of Connecticut will not trade prosperity for a glass of beer," he said.

Friendly Prophecies.

Prince declined to disclose the nature of his conversation with Hoover, but ventured the prediction that Massachusetts would be found in the Republican column in November.

Taber, asserting that the rural districts of Up-State New York are dry, considered the farm problem the issue upon which would hinge the votes of that section of the State Hoovers declarations upon farm relief were satisfactorily received there, he said.

Senator Watson of Indiana, who called upon the candidate with Leslie M. Shaw, former Secretary of the Treasury, told the candidate that Indiana would be safely Republican this year.

"Nothing more than a political revolution can upset the overwhelming margin by which Indiana is Republican," the Senator said, "and there is nothing of that sort in sight."

Brookhart Says Hoover Is Certain to Carry Iowa.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Assurance that Herbert Hoover will carry the State of Iowa was given to the Republican National Committee by Senator Smith W. Brookhart in a statement issued today.

"If not a single Republican went to the polls in Iowa, Gov. Al Smith still would fail to carry the State and Mr. Hoover would receive a majority of votes," said the Senator. "The progressive Democrats without aid from the Republicans are strong enough in Iowa to defeat the Al Smith Democrats.

"The progressives are almost unanimous in their support of Mr. Hoover. As far as the farm question is concerned, Mr. Hoover has made his position clear. The farmers are beginning to understand him and with that understanding is coming friendship and admiration.

"Poison disseminated by the Smith Democrats in the hope of unsettling the farm mind has failed of its purpse."

Word also has been received by Republican headquarters from party leaders in Arkansas that the Hoover-Curtis ticket is gaining adherents in that State. Osro Cobb, secretary of the Arkansas State Republican Committee, wrote: "You will be pleased to know that sentiment is rapidly crystalizing in this State for Mr. Hoover. A great many local political students and observers are classifying Arkansas as doubtful." A. C. Russell, State chairman of the Arkansas Republican State Committee wrote stressing the need of "giving Arkansas close attention this year."

TO PRESENT PLEA FOR EVACUATION OF RHINELAND

Chancellor Mueller Goes to Geneva to Press Germany's Case Before League Assembly.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—Hermann Mueller, Chancellor of the German Reich, who will make strenuous efforts at Geneva to force a discussion by the League of Nations Assembly of evacuation of the Rhineland, departed for Geneva tonight. He will head the German delegation in the absence of Gustav Stresemann, the Foreign Minister.

Several department heads accompanied the Chancellor. The party will stop at Baden-Baden to consult with Stresemann, with whom there has been no opportunity for consultation since his conversations at Paris with Premier Poincare and Foreign Minister Briand of France.

At Geneva, Mueller will reiterate the German Government's familiar attitude that continued occupation of the Rhineland by the allies constitutes a permanent handicap on Germany's struggle to meet the economic and financial burdens imposed by the Dawes reparations plan. He will argue that the Dawes plan contemplated that Germany should be freed from impediments to a carrying out of the reparation.

The bearing of the Locarno treaty on continued occupation will also be stressed at Geneva.

Polish-Lithuanian Vilna Dispute Carried to Geneva.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 1.—The dispute between Poland and Lithuania over the control of Vilna may be fought out on the floor of the assembly. Waldemaras, Prime Minister of Lithuania, arrived here today to begin conferences with members of the council. His first meeting will probably be with the German delegation. He has let it be understood that he will make a public presentation of Lithuania's claim against Poland unless the question can be amicably arranged in private.

The council experienced some trouble at a private session when the delegates were unable to reach an agreement on the "optants" question involving the rights of expropriated Hungarians. Hungary has requested that this dispute with Rumania be put back on the agenda of the council. The representative of England, Germany and Italy supported this request, but the French member backed Rumania in opposing further consideration of the controversy. The Franco Rumanian stand is that the dispute can be handled best by direct negotiation between Hungary and Rumania.

MISSOURI PROHIBITIONISTS WITHDRAW IN FAVOR OF G. O. P.

Faris Announces There Will Be No Candidates. But Smith Will Be Opposed.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 1.—H. P. Faris of Clinton, Mo., prohibition party candidate for the presidency in 1924 and member of the party's National Committee this year, today announced that in Missouri this year the prohibition party would withdraw its candidates and unite with the Republicans to work for the defeat of Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

Faris was here today on his way home from Chicago, where the Executive Committee of his party met yesterday, and by a vote of four to three decided not to withdraw its candidates from the presidential race. Faris favored the withdrawal, but was outvoted.

He added that prohibition tickets would be kept in the field in all states not considered doubtful, as between the Republicans and Democrats.

The presidential election of 1928 will be the first one since 1872 in which the prohibition party has not had tickets in the field in all the states, Faris said.

Faris polled 1418 votes in Missouri in 1924 and in 1926 when he ran for the United States Senate polled 7540.

Gov. Smith Makes Correction.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Gov. Smith today issued the following formal statement: "My attention has been called to a stenographic error in a statement made by Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, and released from the executive mansion. The Senator, speaking of the iniquities of the Republican administration in Washington, made specific reference to 'Forbes and Miller.' Through a stenographic error it was written 'Forbes and Mellon.' Senator Walsh made no mention of Secretary Mellon in this connection and I join with the Senator in expressing regret because of the error."

TUNNEL COST $17,813,972

Moffat Outlay $11,000,000 More Than Counted on at First.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Sept. 1.—A financial statement by the Moffat tunnel commission, made public today, showed the cost of the 6-mile railroad bore under the continental divide to be $17,813,972.89. Before the project was started, it was estimated it would cost $6,720,000. Total bond issue receipts of the tunnel commission to July 7, 1928, were $18,487,383.22, and the total indebtedness was $15,470,000.

The commission is preparing to collect a special assessment to meet deficits as rental payments for the tunnel willl take care of only approximately $6,000,000 of the $15,470,000 in bonds outstanding.

H. S. FIRESTONE DENIES CLOSING LIBERIAN DOOR

Rubber Concessionnaire Charges Foreign Propaganda Is Back of Criticism.

AKRON, O., Sept. 1.—Harvey S. Firestone, president of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., in a statement today reviewing the Firestone rubber project in Liberia, said:

"There is no closed door in Liberia. The door is open now the same as it has been for over 75 years, but opposition to the development of the Firestone concession there, in the form of foreign propaganda, has raised the closed door issue and still seeks by persistent efforts to place obstacles in the way of legitimate American enterprise and play into the hands of foreign interests."

Firestone's statement followed publicity given to an article written by Prof. Raymond Buell, research director of the Foreign Policy Association, and specialist in African problems, who criticised Herbert Hoover. Republican candidate for the presidency, for his attitude while Secretary of Commerce toward the Firestone concession in Liberia, and impugned the motives of the Firestone company.

"There is really little need for me to make any comment on the situation," said Firestone, "as the statements of President King of Liberia, William R. Castler. Jr., Acting Secretary of State, and Dr. Thomas Jesse Jones, director of the Phelps-Stokes fund, and the American Advisory Committee on Education in Liberia, have completely exposed the charges of Prof. Buell, which closely resemble foreign propaganda, attempting to discredit our rubber development in Liberia. This consistent effort to prevent Americans from producing their own rubber free from foreign rubber monopoly simply serves to bring the necessity of doing so more forcibly to the minds of the American people.

"Linking the name of Herbert Hoover with our enterprise in Liberia is wholly without cause. While Mr. Hoover was one of the first to expose the ramifications of the British rubber monoply and recognize the necessity of America's producing her own rubber, he never has had any connection with our undertaking in Liberia. His views on foreign policy may not be exactly the views of many European nations, but it is my opinion that he is, without question, outstanding among statesmen as to his knowledge and experience of foreign relations."

The Firestone company first went into Liberia in 1923 to open negotiations for an immense rubber plantation project. Announcements of Firestone's intentions brought ridicule from British newspapers. After two and a half years of negotiations, the Firestone company obtained a lease on 1,000,000 acres of land. This lease was approved by the legislature of Liberia in 1926 and work started under the lease to prepare the land for the planting of rubber trees.

Arranged Liberian Loan.

Firestone also helped to arrange a loan for Liberia in 1927 in which the government obtained $5,000,000 at 7 per cent interest. The loan was necessary to fund the country's debt and recognize its finances.

In the short time the Firestone company has been in Liberia, it has given employment to 15,000 natives, employing them direct and paying them direct, Firestone said. There are 30,000 acres under cultivation. The trees will produce rubber in five years from planting

The Most Exhaustive Survey Ever Made of St. Louis

To get the whole truth about newspaper coverage in St. Louis—to obtain a complete, accurate and unbiased report on the newspaper reading habits of St. Louis people, was the purpose of the most exhaustive survey of its kind ever made of St. Louis.

More than half of all the homes in St. Louis were visited. Every class and division of St. Louis population was thoroughly covered. A total of 120,038 homes were called upon. Complete interviews were secured from 91,756 homes.

A Survey of Facts, Not Opinions

This survey is remarkable not only for its magnitude, but for the extraordinary steps taken to keep it rigidly accurate and free from bias. It is a survey of facts, not opinions—it was made to get information, not to prove something.

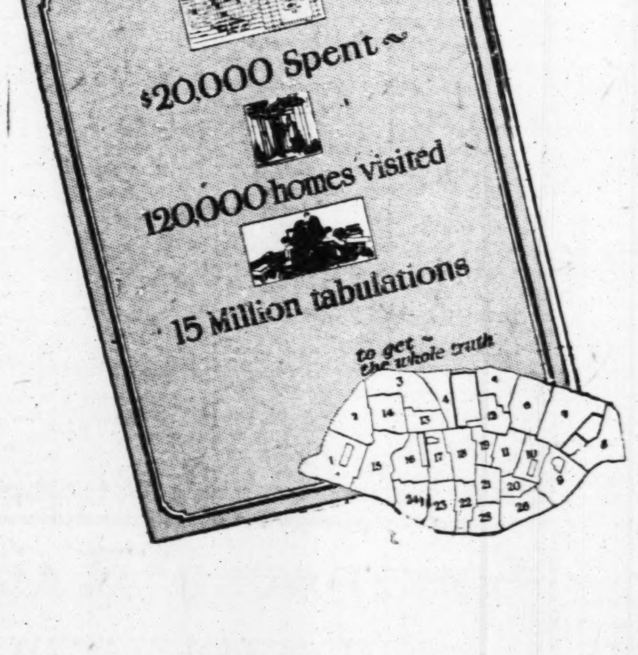
The complete results of this survey have been published in booklet form. A copy of it will be sent without cost to anyone interested in advertising in St. Louis. Address the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, St. Louis, Mo.



RESIDENTIAL telephone subscribers represent families of far greater purchasing power than those who attempt to get along without this almost necessary convenience. By many economists the telephone is considered a better index to standards of living than the automobile, because in the lower class districts there are fewer families having telephones than there are owning automobiles.

An exhaustive and unbiased survey reveals that the Post-Dispatch—Daily or Sunday—reaches far more St. Louis residential telephone subscribers than any other St. Louis newspaper.

WABC Becomes Key Station of Columbia Chain This Afternoon

New York Transmitter to Share Honors With WOR—Two Broadcasters Added to Network Which Now Includes 22 Links.

STATION WABC, New York, begins today to share with WOR, Newark, N. J., the work of key station for the Columbia chain. All Columbia network programs over KMOX this afternoon and evening are to come by wire to that station from WABC, which will also broadcast them over its wave length of 309 meters (970 kilocycles) and over its short wave transmitter, 2XE on 58.5 meters.

WABC will act as key station also for Tuesday and Thursday night Columbia System features.

WOR will be key station Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights.

As will be noticed, the Columbia chain is to be on the air Thursday nights hereafter, the features for that night being announced as a light opera hour; a new program, "Melodies and Memories," and jazz music by the Thirty-Minute Men.

The United Salon Orchestra is announced as a ew feature for Friday nights.

It is stated that a long term agreement has been entered into between WABC and the Columbia System. Some months ago J. Andrew White, president of the Columbia System, announced that a three-year contract had been made with the long lines department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. for wire lines to carry Columbia programs to member stations 16 hours a day each week whenever needed.

WABC is recognized in the East as one of the leading stations. It is owned by the Atlantic Broadcasting Corporation, of which Alfred H. Grebe, the radio manufacturer, is president. Its studios are in the Steinway building, New York City.

WABC succeeded WAHG, which was established in September, 1924. In December, 1926, the call letters of the station were changed to WABC, the Atlantic Broadcasting Corporation was organized to operate it, new studoos were built and a 5000-watt transmitter was erected at Richmond Hill, a suburb of New York City. Its short wave transmitter, 2XE, for some time has been putting on the air all of WABC's evening programs.

Expansion and rapid changes in methods of network broadcasting make it almost a necessity to have dual key station facilities for New York, White said.

A year ago, the Columbia chain started with 16 stations. It presently added three stations. Today two more, WHK, Cleveland, O., and WICC, Bridgeport, Conn., will join this network, giving it a total of 21 links, including WABC and WOR.

At the start, the Columbia System put 10 hours of broadcasting on the air. Beginning today, a total of 22 hours will be broadcast weekly.

The Columbia network, beginning today, includes the following stations:

WABC, 500 watts; 309 M; 970
WOR, New York, 5000 watts, 422 M; 710 Kc.

From a microphone on an imaginary stand in Union Square, New York City, an announcer will describe the parade. There will be plenty of stirring march music played by the Weymouth Post Band.

The Volga Quartet of Nicolas Afanassief, a Russian composer of the last century, is to be played over KSD at 5 o'clock this evening by a string quartet. Afanassief also wrote a quantity of chamber music, some operas, two oratorios, and a symphony, none of which has survived.

Westell Gordon, one of the most popular members of Major Bowes' "Family" and a composer of songs, is to be featured in tonight's Capitol Theater broadcast over KSD, from 5:30 to 7 o'clock. Gordon is to sing for the first time his newest composition, "The Highway of Dreams," for which Will J. Callahan wrote the words. Little is known of the composer's life except that he was a choir director in Rome, where he died in 1674.

Other numbers on McNamee's program are "My Ain' Folk;" "Some Rival Has Stolen My True Love Away," an old ballad from Surrey County, England; "Oft in the Stilly Night," a section of Tom Moore's poem; "Roadways," by John Masefield and John Dinsmore; "That Sweet Story of Old," by Mrs. Jemima Luke; and "Lee-

Du Pont Advocates 200-Foot Highways Across U. S.

Congress to Be Urged to Authorize Gigantic System of Roads, to Prevent Peacetime Congestion and for Possible Military Use.

CONSTRUCTION of a network of national highways into every compass direction of the United States, each of which would be 200 feet wide and concreted and without a single crossing to slow up traffic is to be given serious consideration by the next Congress. A bill proposing such a network of main roads was offered in the last Congress by Senator Coleman du Pont of Delaware, and has been indorsed by leading highway officials of the country.

The system would consist of a road running from the northernmost point of Maine to the southern tip of Florida; another road from the northwest corner of Washington to the most southerly point in California, and a third conecting the western and eastern roads along the southern border of the country.

A fourth highway would follow the forty-first parallel of latitude from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast, makng a direct cut across the country. Still another highway would leave this road at about 100 longitude and go northwest to connect with the west coast highway in Washington. The last road of the proposed network would leave the central highway at about the ninety-fifth longitude and procede southward to conect with the southern highway on the Texas coast.

Aside from the signifience of the network as a means of quick motor travel by tourists into any part of the nation, they would be used as military roads and be constructed under the complete supervision of the Government. Along the right-of-ways would be erected emergency landing fields for airplanes, equipped with radio and other electric facilities.

An unusual proposal is that the highways should not pass through towns with a population of more than 2500 persons. The object in this is seen as a means to step-up traffic rather than delay it by having the highways pass through the metropoli of the country.

In anticipation of the vast system, the bill provides for a Federal survey commission consisting of five members of the President's Cabinet and six persons appointed by the President. The commission would direct a survey and the purchase of a 500-foot right-of-way for the roads in the system and direct the construction of the highways.

After completion of the system, which would take many years and which would run into the billions of dollars, the commission is to be converted into a corporation to maintain the highways, lease sites along the right-of-way for gas stations, restaurants and other business and perform other activities in the control of these roads.

The roads themselves are planned for future speedy and heavy traffic. Four strips, each 50 feet wide, are contemplated. The two outside strips would be intended for trucks and other traffic going at 30 miles an hour or less, while the two center stips would be for fast traffic.

All cars must enter the road from the left and without crossing

New 700-Mile Highway Across "Backbone" of Cuba

Will be Accessible to American Tourists Via Famous "Overseas Route" From Key West, Fla.—Average Cost $106,456 Per Mile.

CUBA'S marvelous 700-mile coast-to-coast boulevard, the Cuban Central Highway, largest road contract ever awarded, will be completed and thrown open to American motorists in three years.

The road will extend along the "backbone" of Cuba, its principal termini being Havana and Santiago de Cuba on the East, though it is also being continued to the city of Pinar del Rio, 80 miles from the Western tip of the island, and has already reached Candelaria, in this direction. It will pass through the capitals of the six provinces.

It will cost $75,680,000, an average rate of $106,456 per mile ,and be without grade crossings and with no speed limits outside of settled communities. The road is the dream of years of President Gerardo Machado of Cuba, and Minister of Public Works Cespedes, and the Cuban people as a whole. It is expected to have a tremendous effect in modernizing the interior of the republic.

Upon its completion lateral roads will be constructed to the seaports and coast cities, giving road privileges to no less than 185 sugar centrals. An increased school building program will be undertaken then, as students will be more easily able to reach the schools. Policing of the island will also be greatly facilitated.

More than a million and one-quarter dollars of modern road machinery is now distributed over different parts of the route where construction is under way. Construction is going ahead night and day in many sectors. Between Bayamo and Holquin in the eastern part of the inland four gasoline shovels disappeared for three months as they ate their way through 60 miles of solid jungle. Thousands of natives come long distances to see the huge machines cutting their way through the hills. The great highway will traverse rugged mountain districts in Camaguey and Oriente provinces. At one point along the route more than 100,000 royal palms are to be seen from a turn in the hills. Some very beautiful hilly country is also encountered in Pinar del Rio province.

The road will be accessible to American motorists by a six-hour automobile ferry from Key West, Fla. Plans are already being made to operate ferry boats especially adapted to carry automobiles between Key West and Havana. Key West is the terminus of the Overseas Highway which has been open for six months and over which some 14,000 cars have been driven in that time. There is still a gap in the route which is to be bridged by the time the Cuban Central Highway is finished. There will then be a continuous route, 3464 miles long, between Calsis, Me., and Santiago, Cuba, with a six-hour ferry gap between Havana and Key West. This route will include Plymouth Rock, Mass., where the pilgrims settled in 1620, St. Augustine, Fla., where the Spanish settled in 1565, and Cuba, visited by Columbus.

The Cuban Highway will be the most modern and permanent type of road. It will be paved its entire length, 20.66 feet wide with 5.64-foot shoulders on either side, thus giving an overall road surface of more than 30 feet, over 110,000,000 square feet of surface. The grade will in no case exceed 5 per cent per mile, approximating a railroad grade. The work includes many embankments, fills and deep cuts. Many of the towns traversed are being sewered for the first time to protect the road from floods.

Larger 'Dividends' Paid by Highways

Some of the profits or "dividends" which come from investments in highways are outlined in a recent speech by Frank Page, chairman of the North Carolina Highway Commission.

North Carolina established a 5500-mile trunk highway system and authorized a $50,000,000 bond issue in 1921. Since then the system has been increased to 7500 miles and the bonded debt to $115,000,000. North Carolina now has the best highway system in the South and one of the best in the nation.

The financing, Page says, "is simply the old idea of the toll road, in more convenient form," the auto license and gas tax. This year, after paying interests, sinking fund and maintenance, there will be a balance of $8,000,000 for further improvement. The bonds will all be retired by 1952.

Susquehanna Trail Trip Excellent for Vacationist

Few Routes Have More Varied Historic Background Than This Concrete Road Between Niagara Falls and Washington.

THERE are few auto routes which have a more varied historic background than the Susquehanna trail, the concrete highway between Niagara Falls and Washington, D. C.

In the southern part of New York state, across the line from Pennsylvania, is the town of Painted Post, once the site of an Iroquois Indian village, where Col. Pickering held his conference with the Six Nations in 1791. From the state line to Trout Run the trail follows the route of the old Williamson road, cut through the virgin forest by the hardy pioneers more than a century ago.

From Trout Run to Williamsport in places the highway follows the old Sheshequin path, a favorite highway with the Indian before white men had ever set foot on the American continent. In Williamsport, on Cemetery street, may be found a monument marking the massacre of early settlers by the savages.

On the fourth day of July, 1776, a large number of hardy pioneers gathered under the branches of a spreading elm tree on Pine creek, near the Susquehanna trail, west of Williamsport, Pa., and adopted a Declaration of Independence, forever absolving themselves from all allegiance to the British crown.

It is unfortunate that, if this resolution was reduced to writing, the copy has been lost, but within the memory of those living the story of the action has been told by those who heard it from the lips of the participants. This resolution is known as the "Pine Creek Declaration of Independence," and it is a remarkable coincidence that it was adopted on the very day on which similar action was being taken by representatives of the colonies at Philadelphia. This historic elm is still standing.

The little cemetery at Halls contains the grave of Capt. John Brady, noted Indian fighter who was killed by the Indians on the banks of Wolf Run in 1779. Between Muncy and Milton, on Warrior Run, is the site of Fort Freeland, which fell before the drive of the British and Indians in 1779.

Sunbury is noted as being the site of the old Indian town of Shamokin, home of the great chief Shikellimy. Here visited the early explorers of the region, among whom was Conrad Weiser, the missionary interpreter.

At Harrisburg will be recalled the stirring days of the Civil War when the Confederate army was on its march into Pennsylvania. Just across the river can be seen the old earthworks of Fort Washington, hastily thrown up when Lee threatened at Gettysburg.

Such interesting places as the "Round Top," "Seminary Ridge," "Jeny Wade," are at Gettysburg, in the Cumberland valley about 30 miles south of Harrisburg. The words of the famous poem of Whittier, whose heroine was Barbara Freitchie—"Who touches a hair of that old gray head dies like a dog, march on!"—will be recalled in Frederick, Md.

York, on the other route to Washington, was the first settlement west of the Susquehanna River, and at one time, from Sept. 30, 1777, to June 28, 1778, it was the capital of the nation, the Continental Congress meeting in the old court house in Center square. A few miles further in Baltimore, will be found some of the finest monuments in the east. It was during the bombardment of old Fort McHenry, near Baltimore, that Francis Scott Key wrote the "Star-Spangled Banner." Close by is Annapolis, seat of the United States naval academy.

Washington has a wealth of sights of education and historical interest. The Lincoln memorial, Washington monument, Capitol buildings, White House, National museum and Smithsonian Institution and other public buildings of great interest and beauty always attract motorists from every state in the Union. On the heights across the Potomac lies Arlington National Cemetery and the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Nearby is Alexandria, with its beautiful Masonic memorial to Washington, and a few miles further down the peaceful Potomac may be found Mount Vernon, Washington's home and final resting place.

All of the interesting history of the trail is described in a travelog prepared and issued by the Williamsport Chamber of Commerce. A map, correct routes and descriptive data of the trail is included. Motorists will find it very helpful in planning a tour. They may obtain a copy by writing to the Chamber of Commerce, Desk 8-4, Williamsport, Pa.

NEW JERSEY HAS UNIFORM TRAFFIC LAW

Regulation, Governing All Municipalities, Effective Yesterday.

New Jersey's new traffic act, which went into effect yesterday, provides numerous innovations for the regulation of traffic of motor vehicles and pedestrians. The measure was passed by the Legislature recently, after three years of study by the State Traffic Commission.

Municipalities have three years to change traffic signals to conform with the new law. It abolishes traffic signals in the center of streets, whether automatic or controlled by the police. The signals are to be at the nearest points that convey the message of direction. Here are a few of the new traffic rules:

No jay walking.

Persons are not to throw from any motor car while in motion any goods, bundles or merchandise.

Coasting down hill with clutch out or gear in neutral is prohibited.

Pedestrians are prohibited from crossing a street against a stop signal and can use only the designated cross walk when the signal or officers give them the right of way.

At intersections where traffic is not controlled, pedestrians must cross at right angles, and, except when they use the cross walk, they must give the right of way to passing vehicles on the street.

At crossings where traffic is controlled, pedestrians have the right of way over all traffic.

It is unlawful for any person to solicit or stop motor vehicles in the road for the purpose of asking for rides.

Forty miles an hour in open country where traffic is not controlled, 10 miles an hour while passing a school, 15 on curves and on grades when the driver's view is obstructed within a distance of 100 feet, 20 in business districts when traffic is under control and [illegible] residential districts, 15 an hour in business districts where traffic is not controlled.

A three-color system of traffic lights is to be used. The colors are red, amber and green. The latter will be the signal to proceed. Amber will be used as a caution sign and for the exclusive use of pedestrians.

Drivers are prohibited from discharging passengers or occupants from their cars or taking them on except at curbs or on the side of the highways or roads. Persons are prohibited from alighting or jumping on motor vehicles while in motion.

Automobile trucks outside of business or residential districts are prohibited, when on the highways, from following each other at intervals of less than 100 feet.

either road. Ramps would be used. Cars might leave the outside roads from the right on the road level, but no cars should be allowed to enter on the road level.

This system would be entirely apart from the Federal aid system of State roads now being constructed. All the states would have to do would be to sell or lease the rights-of-way to the Government.

Tremendous increase of transcontinental traffic in the last few years lead the sponsors of this system to believe these roads will more than pay for themselves in a few years. They will follow the trend of population and will make good business spots from which considerable financial returns may be expected.

Lebens, Inc., Moves To New Location

Lebens, Inc., Hudson-Essex dealer, has obtained the building at Chippewa and Nebraska avenues formerly occupied by the People's Motor Bus Co., and will immediately occupy it. The building has a frontage of 175 feet on Chippewa street and a depth of 160 feet on Nebraska avenue.

Graham-Paige Turns In Small Space

A short turning radius, to facilitate turn around in narrow streets, parking in restricted spaces and maneuvering in difficult traffic, was the prime objective of engineers who designed the Graham-Paige line.

The 110-inch wheelbase Graham-Paige six can turn in a circle only 29 feet 2 inches in diameter. The 114-inch wheelbase model has a turning circle of 31 feet 4 inches and the 119-inch model 32 feet 10 inches.

The largest Graham-Paige six, with 129-inch wheelbase, has a turning circle of 35 feet 6 inches, while the Graham-Paige eight, with 135-inch wheelbase, can turn in only 42 feet.

Wins in Stutz Car

In a recent speedway race at Altoona, Pa., Louie Meyer was the victor in a Stutz Special. While the car is not the same type as the standard Stutz passenger car, it will be recalled that the racer was engineered and built in the Stutz factory. It was one of the cars that the late Frank Lockhart expected to drive in the 1928 racing campaign. Louie Meyer purchased it from the Lockhart estate just after the 500-mile race in Indianapolis, won by Meyer on Decoration day.

How the Air Cleaner on Your Car Functions and Duties It Performs Engine Breathes 10,000 Gallons of Ozone for Every Gallon of Gas Consumed and This Mechanism Purifies It So That It Is Purer Than That Which You Yourself Breathe.

Do you know that the air cleaner on an automobile removes the dust from the air, making it purer than that which you yourself breathe? An automobile engine, for instance, breathes 10,000 gallons of air for every gallon of gasoline consumed. Road dust pollutes this air, but the air cleaner purifies it so effectively that the engine receives clean air, thus eliminating excessive wear and minimizing carbon deposits. The diagrammatic view shown herewith illustrates how an air cleaner operates.

The suction stroke of the engine causes dust-laden air to enter the cleaner (Figure 1) between directing vanes which give it a rapid spirally rotating motion.

The centrifugal force developed (Figure 2) is several times greater than that necessary to throw the dust particles out of the air and against the inside walls of the cleaner.

The spiral traveling of the dust along the inside surface of the cleaner wall brings it to the rear circular end, as illustrated by Figure 3.

Clean air, indicated by the white arrows (Figure 5) rotating spirally in center portion, strikes the directing plate and screws itself out of the cleaner.

The straightened current of clean air (Figure 6) leaves the cleaner to enter the carburetor.

Thus the air cleaner works. If it were not for its use, dust would enter the engine, form on the cylinder walls and soon become thoroughly mixed with the lubricating oil.

Quite often the dust on a good road cannot be seen, but it is there just the same. Motor car wheels constantly grind off fine particles of road material which are dispersed through the air. These particles viewed under a microscope bear a striking resemblance to a valve grinding compound.

Analysis of almost any carbon deposit taken from the average engine not air cleaner equipped shows that it contains a considerable amount of hard foreign matter that must have been drawn in through the carburetor. This causes damage throughout the engine, lowering its performance, shortening its life and causing unnecessary repair costs.

Safety Council To Hold National Meet in New York

That traffic rules and regulations should be intelligently and fearlessly enforced is the belief of the National Safety Council, which deplores the present tendency in many communities to permit habitual offenders to continue menacing lives and limbs and property.

A special session will be devoted to "Traffic Law Enforcement" during the Seventeenth Annual Safety Congress, which will be held in five New York City hotels from Oct. 1 to 5, inclusive. William McAdoo, chief city magistrate of New York, will preside as chairman at this special session, which will be held on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 3, at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, following a morning meeting devoted to a discussion of motor vehicle legislation.

"Catching the Accident Criminal" is the topic to be discussed by Edwin J. Barry, director of public safety, Cleveland. Joseph T. Davis, president of the St. Louis safety council, will dwell on "Getting Public Support for Law Enforcement." E. B. Lefferts of the Automobile Club of Southern California, Los Angeles, is scheduled to speak on "A New Procedure in Traffic Law Enforcement." How Detroit cut down its automobile accident toll will be explained by a speaker from that city.

It is expected that 6000 men, women and children will attend the congress, which will be addressed by 325 speakers. There will be no charge for admission and both members and nonmembers of the council will be welcome at all sessions.

Nash Output Now 1000 Units Daily

KENOSHA, Wis., Sept. 2.—The Nash Motors Co. officials announced yesterday that quality production of the new "400" series cars in the Kenosha, Racine and Milwaukee plants has reached the record total of more than 1000 automobiles daily, the highest manufacturing mark recorded in the history of the company.

This record peak, which closed the month of August with a total production of more than 21,000 cars, and which attained a one-day peak of 1020 cars on Aug. 23, has been developed in little more than two months after the introduction of the new Nash series to meet the greatest sales demands ever experienced by Nash interests.

New Trend in Garage Construction Is Seen

Plans Being Developed to Install Them in Buildings and on Roofs in Effort to Solve Traffic Congestion Problems.

Leading American architects and building engineers are closely co-operating with leaders in the automotive industry in efforts to solve the traffic congestion problem by developing new and efficient methods to handle parking in the big cities.

Problems created by the rapid multiplication of the automobile, which already have exercised a dominant influence on architecture, will be responsible for even more radical changes in the construction of new office buildings and apartment houses and will bring about greater engineering feats of building than any now known, according to the testimony of America's most prominent architects.

Plans already developed to a practicable stage include the construction of underground garages, basements in office and apartment buildings, construction of ramps in roofs on office buildings to store cars, combined garages and office buildings, construction of ramps in office buildings so that cars may be driven up and parked on certain floors and in at least one instance, a fantastic scheme for an underground city under the heart of the business section of Kansas City has been proposed.

In each case, plans are predicated on the fact that fumes and dangerous gases coming out of the exhausts of thousands of automobiles can be carried away by fan ventilating systems similar to those used on a larger scale in the Holland, Liberty, Moffat and other tunnels.

Illustrative of the architectural trend is the fact that one nationally known engineer has patented a new type of office building, the principal feature of which will be ramps of only 3 per cent grade which will enable tenants to park automobiles immediately adjoining their offices. It is understood that one of the first buildings of this type will be constructed in Akron, O. The building will have a central ventilating and heating plant but air conditioning will be further aided by a series of supply and exhaust fans on each floor.

A special commission was appointed by Congress for the purpose of planning an underground garage in Washington. It will be a city block long and wide enough to house the automobiles of both the members of the Senate and the House.

Members of Congress experience the same difficulty that an ordinary citizen of Washington does in finding a place to park their automobiles and the idea of an underground garage was hit upon as a means of remedying the situation. It will be mechanically ventilated by a system separate from a new air conditioning plant which is to be installed to supply the assembly rooms of Congress with fresh air.

Chicago has taken the lead among American cities in developing new parking facilities in buildings for automobiles. Various new apartment buildings there include a garage on each floor for the convenience of tenants. The machines are taken up in elevators. Several office buildings have been constructed there in which automobiles are parked on the roof. These are taken up in elevators and on ramps but the height of these buildings so far has been limited to 10 floors and a larger area of ground space usually is required.

According to Joseph C. Huber Jr., prominent Toledo architect, department stores in many big cities are installing parking facilities in their basements for convenience of customers. Other stores are issuing tickets which give limited free parking in public garages near by.

Another development in this direction has been what is known as the automarket in which a housewife may now shop for everything from dry goods to groceries and meats without leaving the wheel of the family car. When the shopper reaches the automarket she drives through the right door of the store, circles around at her pleasure on special aisles lined on each side with counters of merchandise displayed on revolving shelves, buys what she wants and drives out through another door when she is through.

Vitiated air in the store is mechanically exhausted and a new supply brought in and washed or filtered before it is distributed to all parts of the building. The first of these stores is in operation in Louisville, Ky., while other cities are installing them.

Engineers are surveying the costs and practicability of tunneling under the downtown district of Kansas City in such a way that under possibly 50 per cent of the downtown area would be subterranean streets and open spaces for parking. Passenger elevators from office buildings and the like would link the ground level and this underground city for traffic.

Nebraska Has Rigid Tractor Testing Laws

Nebraska takes no chances with its tractors. Before a manufacturer can sell tractors in Nebraska, a state law requires him to submit a stock model to the department of agricultural enginering, University of Nebraska.

Copies of all advertising literature describing the model must be submitted with the machine. The engineers then put the tractor through a series of exhaustive tests to see that it is properly rated and that it is capable of performing all that the manufacturer claims for his machine.

These tests cover a period of a week or 10 days. The results are accurately calculated and carefully tabulated. In the reports of the engineers comment is made on the performance of the tractor during the test, and upon the company's advertising literature.

Unless the engineering department approves the performance of a tractor it can not be sold in Nebraska. The practice gives the farmer absolute protection against the acquisition of an inferior tractor and assures him of reliability in the machines on which he so greatly depends.

Nebraska is unique in respect to these tests. It is the only state requiring such a check on tractors. As a result the test reports are looked upon as authoritative, if not official, throughout the tractor world.

WILLIAMS NEW OLDS BRANCH MANAGER HERE

Succeeds R. L. Samuel Who Goes to Buffalo Office.

Simultaneous with the announcement the past week that R. L. Samuel, branch manager of the Olds Motor Works here for the past year, had been transferred to the company's Buffalo branch as manager there, announcement was made of the appointment of A. C. Williams as new branch manager. Williams has been assistant branch manager at Lansing.

A farewell dinner was tendered Samuel Tuesday evening of the past week at the Forest Park Hotel at which time Williams was presented to the dealer organization and the office staff of the local branch. Assistant Branch Manager Crane presided.

Crane opened the meeting with a short talk during which he told of the valuable service Samuel had performed in St. Louis in building up the local branch to be one of the largest in the Oldsmobile branch office system. Samuel responded by praising the co-operation given him by his dealer organization and office employes and said but for this support it would have been impossible for him to have made a success of his managership here.

Crane then introduced Williams. The new branch manager reiterated Crane's remarks on Samuel's successful managing of the branch here and asked that the dealer organization and the branch office staff give him the same co-operation accorded his predecessor.

As tokens of esteem, Samuel was presented with a traveling bag by his former employes and a set of golf sticks and bag by his former dealer organization.

Several dealers also spoke at the dinner.

Changes Made in Chevolet Staff

Changes in the factory wholesale staff of the Chevrolet Motor Car Co. here were announced the past week by O. E. Nonn, zone sales manager.

John Bauer, formerly Springfield, Ill., representative for the company, has been transferred to the city sales staff. E. N. Banks, formerly service manager of the Chevrolet plant at Denver, has been transferred to the St. Louis division, and H. W. Bygle, former accounting manager for the Denver branch, has been transferred to St. Louis.

Excursion Rates On Chicago Air Route Tomorrow

The first aerial excursion rates established here have been announced by the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, for its St. Louis-Chicago route over the Labor day holiday tomorrow.

In declaring a special holiday rate, the Robertson company has announced a $56 round-trip fare between here and Chicago, effective from Saturday to Tuesday. The regular fare is $40 one way. A proportionate reduction also has been made in the fare from Springfield and Peoria to St. Louis and Chicago.

The Robertson company inaugurated a regular passenger service between St. Louis and Chicago this month, using 12-passenger tri-motored Ford monoplanes. The northbound plane leaves Lambert-St. Louis Field at 9 a. m., arriving at the Municipal Field at Chicago at noon. Departure from Chicago is at 3 p. m., with arrival here three hours later. The service is daily except Sundays.

Aero Chamber to Open More Office

The Aeronautical Chamber Commerce has found it necess to radically change its method meet the phenomenal growth of air industry. At a meeting in New York City, last week, it decided to decentralize the orga zation. Instead of having one tral office in New York City, the past, the chamber will tain several in different cities the country, with vice president charge of each.

It hopes thus to be able to and maintain technical standa to enforce a rigid code of ethics advertising and to obtain co-ope tion in the further developme the industry.

Leaders in the industry p the remarkable record of last year as evidence of its stability. A year ago, they say, the industry had turnover of only a few million dollars, but this year it increa to more than $100,000,000.

PLANE USED BY MAGAZINE CHIEF ON TRIP

J. E. Williamson, Making 10,000-Mile Tour, Stops Here.

Using a Lockheed-Vega plane, belonging to Bernarr MacFadden, president of Macfadden Publications, Inc., James E. Williamson, sales promotion manager for the firm, Robert Haid, the company's New York district manager, and Pilot Errold Bahl, arrived in St. Louis Tuesday night of the past week on the last leg of a 10,000-mile air tour of principal cities of the Central West and Canada.

Interviewed upon landing here, Williamson said the substitution of air for rail travel is working so effectively for Macfadden Publications, Inc., that it will be surprising to him if other concerns having national branch offices which they must frequently contact, do not purchase airplanes for similar use. He also pointed out that deliveries can be greatly expedited by organizations owning their own equipment and having it ready for instant use.

The Macfadden ship when not in active use is hangared at Teterboro Airfield, New York City. Prior to being tuned-up for the present trip it carried Zoe Beckley, a special writer, to Mexico City following the route and completing the flight interrupted by Carranza's death. It is the same type of plane Art Goebel, Pacific Ocean flier, used recently in setting a new air speed record across the continent from Los Angeles to New York, except that it is equipped with a Wright Whirlwind engine, whereas Goebel's plane was powered by a Wasp engine.

Following a conference with his wholesale dealer organization here Thursday morning, Williamson and his party, accompanied by a reporter of this section, departed Lambert-St. Louis Field for Indianapolis, but because of a mishap—the only one encountered on the whole tour—did not arrive at its destination until Friday afternoon.

At the beginning of the trip it was proposed to make a landing at Parks Airport south of East St. Louis in order to allow the taking on of another passenger. When Pilot Bahl was attempting to put his ship on the ground it went into a tail skid and the fuselage was so seriously ripped that the trip to Indianapolis was postponed to allow repair of the damage.

Bahl, an experienced aviator, who is best known as the original instructor of Col. Chas. Lindbergh, said that the mishap was not due to the character of the new East Side landing field, which, while somewhat rough, is as large as Lambert-St. Louis field, but to the ineffective manner in which the tail of the plane was repaired after having been damaged in an eastern hangar some months ago.

Both Bahl and Williamson praised the aero activities into which St. Louis has entered and said that the city was living up to its reputation as an air-minded city, which Lindbergh had gained for it.

Warsaw to Chicago Flight Is Planned

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Three Polish army officers will attempt an air flight from Warsaw to Chicago within a fortnight, Alderman Stanley Adamkiewicz of Chicago, former president of the Polish Roman Catholic Union who arranged the flight, announced tonight. Those to make the attempted westward flight are Capt. Adam Kowalczyk, former German World War ace and representative of President Moscicki of Poland; Capt. Vladimir Kliscz, veteran of the Austrian air corps and Count Zahorski, former Russia army officer.

The flight will be made in the Polonia, twin motored Caproni plane and is backed by a group of Polish-Americans headed by the Chicago Alderman. The fliers expect to leave Europe at Lisbon, flying by the southern route across the Azores.

A $50,000 prize offered by the Illinois Aero Club awaits the flyers if they are successful in an non-stop flight from Europe to Chicago, but regardless of where the Polonia comes down on this continent, the tour of this country will begin at Chicago.

Among the cities tentatively listed on the itinerary are: Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Kansas City, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Baltimore Buffalo Philadelphia, Washington, New York and Boston.

Stearns Sales Made To Previous Owners

An analysis of the sales of the Stearns-Knight straight eight De Luxe models during the past eight months discloses that a majority of the sales were made to buyers who had previously owned one or more motor cars generally designated in the "quality" classification. These new Stearns-Knight buyers, the analysis showed, included owners of the finest custom cars of Europe as well as American automobiles that sell in the higher price ranges.

Ocean Flyer Signed

Col. James C. Fitzmaurice, Irish flyer, who crossed the Atlantic in the Bremen with Capt. Koehl and Baron von Huenefeld, has signed a contract to pilot a plane from German ports to a ship one day at sea, carrying mail and passengers who wish to save time.

At St. Louis Air Fields

THE Thirty-Fifth Division Air Service closed its annual two weeks' encampment yesterday afternoon at Lambert Field with a demonstration of military flying. Among the spectators was Gen. W. A. Raupp, commanding the Missouri National Guard troops. The program included formation flying stunting, several short races, an apron-string formation flown by Maj. C. R. Wassell, commander of the unit, with Lieuts. Phil Love and Julius Johannpeter tagging along, and a parachute jump by an enlisted man. The jumper had to be chosen by lot, as 40 of the 87 enlisted men in camp had put in requests to be the first to try the new 28-foot training 'chute recently issued. The 'chute, which was tested with a dummy last week, opened in less than two seconds under the manipulation of Sergt. Jimmy Tate, the unit's parachute expert.

Gen. Raupp arrived at camp Thursday from his home at Pierce City, in [illegible] of the [illegible] piloted by Capt. Russell Young. He expressed pleasure at the work accomplished at the encampment. Col. J. S. Herron, National Guard officer for the Seventh Corps area, [illegible] by Capts. George Palmer, Harry Young and Charles Phillips, regular army instructors, also praised the unit.

A feature of this year's camp, in addition to the usual training in infantry liaison, photographic missions and radio work, was aerial gunnery, [illegible] "woo" on an island [illegible] the Missouri River several miles below St. Charles serving at targets.

Airports on Highway 66.

The $2,000,000 bond issue for a Municipal Airport at Lambert-St. Louis Field has stimulated interest in aviation in cities along Highway No. 66 to Los Angeles, Cal., where airports are to be established in the proposed coast-to-coast train and plane service, according to Lon Scott, secretary of the United States Highway 66 Association.

In a letter to Harold Bixby, Scott says the association hopes to have 33 class A airports in operation along Highway 66 by next year. "Springfield, Mo., will have a hangar ready in 30 days; Carthage, Mo., is getting ready; Miami, Ok., is getting in line; Amarillo, Tex., will vote on an airport bond issue shortly; an airport is under construction at Tucumcari, N. M., and other cities are waiting for us to direct activities for them," Scott wrote.

Paymaster Is Popular.

One visitor to the air unit encampment who was shown every courtesy was Maj. Vern Wilson of Jefferson City, the paymaster. Incidentally six officers, Capt. William Wimer and First Lieut. Frank Dunn, Walter Barznell, Edwin Lauth, J. P. Sparks, and E. C. Schmidt, received heavier money than at last year's camp. They were recently promoted.

More Students Enrolled.

Parks Air Lines enrolled eight new flying students and seven more students in the mechanics' school last week. The flying school now has an enrollment of 215 aviation enthusiasts, while the mechanics school has 61 students. These are the largest schools of the sort in the Middle West.

Harmon Trophy Winner Calls.

Shirley Short, who was awarded the Harmon trophy for flying the transcontinental air mail 2400 hours on schedule without an accident, was a visitor at Lambert Field last week. Short, who is now pilot for the Chicago Daily News, spent an afternoon chatting with Phil Love and other friends.

Flag Stops for Planes.

Having established the first aerial excursion rates here over the Labor Day holiday on their St. Louis-Chicago passenger line, the Robertson Aircraft Corporation borrowed another leaf from the railroad book and made Peoria and Springfield flag stops. The fields at the two cities are none too good and, to avoid sticking in the mud needlessly, the big Ford monoplanes will stop at Springfield and Peoria only when it is known that passengers wish to leave or board the planes. In the latter instance a field attendant will signal the pilot by waving two white flags.

Catching the Air Express.

An advantage of air travel over rail transportation was demonstrated last Tuesday when three passengers, who missed the tri-motored Ford operated by the Robertson Aircraft Corp. on the St. Louis-Chicago run, were placed in a Ryan brougham, which set out in pursuit of the Ford. "Bud" Gurney, piloting the Ryan, overtook the larger and slower ship at Mason City, Ill. Gurney waggled his wings at Pilot Slonniger in the Ford and Slonniger made an emergency landing to take on the delayed passengers.

$50 Round-Trip to Chicago.

Indications are that the $50 round-trip holiday rate set by the Robertson Aircraft Corp. for the St. Louis-Chicago trip and return over Labor Day will prove popular. Tickets are good from Saturday until Tuesday. Friday there were 13 passengers to Chicago at the usual $40 one-way charge.

New Instructor Engaged.

Lieut. John Vale, recently of the Army ground school at Langley Field, is the new ground school instructor at the Von Hoffman Aircraft Co. ground school. The Von Hoffmann Co. has 20 students enrolled in its ground school, which has a ten weeks' course.

Visitors at Lambert Field.

"Red" Jackson, formerly instructor for the Von Hoffman Aircraft Co., stopped on his way to New York in a special Swallow, which he will fly in the New York-to-Los Angeles race.

Another visitor at Lambert Field Thursday was J. E. Schaeffer, salesmanager for the Stearman Aircraft Company of Wichita. Schaeffer accompanied by Dr. N. C. Sevin and Deed Levy, pilot, was on his way back to Wichita following a 10-day trip in a three-place Stearman Whirlwind ship to Dayton and Cleveland, O., Flint, Mich., and Chicago. He reported that the Stearman Co. is building special planes for Cliff Durant and Felix du Pont Jr.

Big Increase in Air Mail.

Because of the heavy volume of mail carried during the month of August, 7500 pounds, the Robertson Aircraft Corporation has sent its second Travel-air to Wichita to be converted into a cargo plane. The average monthly mail cargo prior to Aug. 1, when the postage rate was reduced 50 per cent, was 3000 pounds.

Schierberg Joins Robertson.

George B. Schierberg, formerly with the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., was elected treasurer of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, at a meeting of the board of directors Wednesday

STUDY OF EXHAUST GAS BEING MADE

True Effect of Carbon Monoxide to Be Determined.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—A joint committee on atmospheric pollution by automobile exhaust gases has been organized with Prof. Alexander Silverman of the University of Pittsburg, representing the American Chemical Society, as chairman.

"The committee," according to the announcement, "will from time to time furnish the public with authentic information concerning the subject of automobile exhaust gases. It will endeavor to furnish reliable knowledge concerning the danger or lack of danger resulting from such pollution.

"It will encourage research and investigation toward the reduction of the amount of carbon monoxide formed in automobile operation and attempt to eliminate this entirely if possible.

"The information at hand regarding the amount of carbon monoxide to which the public is exposed and the probable effect of such amounts leads the committee to believe that, in general, no alarming condition exists in the thoroughfares.

"However, in confined places, as some cab stands and enclosed driveways, the amount present at times is sufficient to cause marked discomfort and possibly illness after several hours of continued exposure. These places, as well as some commercial garages, where a health hazard really exists, are amenable to local ventilation or restricted motor operation to ameliorate the condition.

TO DEDICATE CARBONDALE AERO FIELD

New 100-Acre Airport Has a Half Mile Runway.

Dedication of a new 100-acre airport at Carbondale Ill., is to take place on Sept. 16, officials of the Carbondale Aero Club announced the past week. The field, which already has been marked, has a runway a half mile long and almost that wide.

An agreement has been reached with the Egyptian Transportation Co., at Marion, Ill., to send three airplanes to Carbondale for the formal opening of the field. Other planes from Lambert-St. Louis Field here and from Indianapolis are also scheduled to be on hand.

The landing field is just north of the Illinois Central Railway roundhouse. Workmen have been busy all summer grading and rolling the land to make it suitable for an airport. Hangers are to be erected soon, according to the Aero Club oficials.

WHAT COULD BE SMARTER

You want a car that's new. A car that's smart—dashing—youthful. A car that combines style leadership, brilliant performance and exceptional value. In short, a car like this new Oldsmobile—the Fine Car of Low Price. Fine-car styling is apparent in every line of its voguish new bodies by Fisher. Fine-car luxury is evidenced by rich upholsteries and appointments. Fine-car comfort is assured by deep-cushioned form-fitting seats and four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers.

And this new Oldsmobile provides performance in keeping with such style and luxury. Its great new 55 h. p. engine gives brilliant high-compression results without special fuel. You can slip in and out of traffic with almost no effort at all, and park in unbelievably small spaces, for it requires only a touch to steer at any speed.

But you cannot fully appreciate this car until you see it and drive it yourself. Then you'll know why we say "What could be smarter?"

TO DEDICATE NEW BRIDGE TOMORROW

35,000 People Expected at Cape Girardeau Ceremony.

An elaborate program has been arranged for the dedication of the new bridge over the Mississippi River at Cape Girardeau tomorrow. Thirty-five thousand visitors are expected for the dedicatory exercises which are to be held on the opening day of the American Legion State convention.

The speakers will include James A. Barks, Mayor of Cape Girardeau; Gov. Baker of Missouri, Gov. Small of Illinois and Senator Hawes of Missouri. Invitations have been extended to the editors of all papers and to the Mayors of 98 Southeast Missouri and Southern Illinois towns.

The elaborate program begins at 10:30 a. m. with a parade starting in downtown Cape Girardeau. The towns participating in the celebration will have representative floats. The "Queen's" float will bear the Bridge Queen, selected from among the queens chosen by each town represented. The unsuccessful candidates will be the Queen's attendants.

There will also be 12 bands in the parade and a number of American Legion drum and bugle corps from various posts in the State. The parade will proceed to the St. Vincent's College, where the dedicatory program will be held in a natural amphitheater on the campus slope which faces the bank of the Mississippi.

At 11:30 a. m. the bridge dedication ceremonies will start with C. L. Harrison, president of the Cape Girardeau Bridge Co., presiding. The formal opening and dedication will follow immediately afterwards, with Gov. Small, escorted by Albert M. Carter, the State commander of the American Legion of Illinois, and members of the Illinois Highway Commission, and Gov. Baker, escorted by Dan M. Nee, State legion commander of Missouri, members of his official staff, the State Highway Commission of Missouri and the "Queens" of Southeast Missouri and Southern Illinois taking a prominent part in the official opening.

Afterward the speech making will begin.

A feature of the celebration will be the presentation of a pageant and masque on the college campus. Five hundred characters will be portrayed in the production, which will depict the history of Southeast Missouri and Cape Girardeau. The first epoch will show the life of the Indian; the second the coming of Tecumseh, the great Indian chief; and, third, the coming of Sieur Pierre Jean Girardot, from which Cape Girardeau gets its name. Then appears the founder of Cape Girardeau, Louis Lorimier. The masque will be presented at the close of the pageant and will be followed by a luncheon for the "Queens" and distinguished guests.

The Cape Girardeau bridge shortens the route between the East and the Southwest, and opens up a new gateway to the Ozarks. The total length of the structure is 4744 feet, and the total cost is $1,600,000.

Stutz in Third Place in Class In Belfast Race

Cable advices received by F. E. Moskovics, president of the Stutz Motor Car Co., from Belfast, Ireland, say that the American-made car finished third in its class in the recent famous Belfast handicap race. Out of a field of 54 starters, the Stutz, driven by Richard Watney, of London, England, finished twelfth regardless of class designation.

The cablegram told that the Stutz had the misfortune of a wreck in the fifth lap and that the front axle and springs were bent. This injury to the car rendered steering very difficult but Watney made a splendid showing despite the accident. The time of the winning car was 64 miles per hour while the Stutz negotiated 62 miles per hour.

'Gold' Bridge Toll Fees In Maryland to be Lifted

Crossing Over Susquehanna River at Havre de Grace Netted Private Owners Over a Million Until State Purchased It.

TOURISTS visiting Maryland or points beyond requiring them to pass through Maryland are advised by the Baltimore Association of Commerce that on or about Sept. 15 toll will no longer be charged to cross the bridge over the Susquehanna River at Havre de Grace. The Maryland State Roads Commission, John N. Mackall, chairman, yesterday announced that the bridge will be made free about that date.

This old2 bridge, built originally by the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1866 at a cost of $3,000,000, was abandoned by the railroad when it completed a new structure (double-track) in 1908. It was offered gratis to Cecil and Hartford Counties and declined. The railroad company then gave it to five citizens who operated it as a toll bridge from 1910 to 1923, when it was purchased by the State for $585,000.

The State continued it as a toll bridge, the proceeds going toward the payment of bonds floated for its purchase. Two years ago, the traffic having grown tremendously, the state decided to double-deck the bridge. This work has been about completed at a cost of more than $400,000. By Sept. 15 it is expected that the toll receipts will have covered the entire cost of double-decking and the original purchase price.

During the 13 years of private ownership the structure was known as "the golden bridge" and is said to have netted its owners more than $1,000,000. The charge to cross was $1. Later it was cut to 60 cents for an automobile and driver, plus five cents for each additional passenger, which charge will be removed on Sept. 15.

Northbound traffic passes over the upper deck of the bridge, which is on the main highway between Philadelphia and Baltimore and Washington, while southbound traffic traverses the lower deck.

Spain Creates Fund to Aid Auto Firms

A special motor fund to assist its automobile industry has been determined on by the Spanish government, the American commercial attache at Madrid advises the department of commerce.

Regulations for the fund provide that it shall be constituted from following sources: (a) 5,000,000 pesetas subject to eventual reimbursement shall be advanced as an initial contribution by the state; (b) returns for material which the Official Commission of Motors and Automobiles may supply to the various bodies; (c) revenues including (1) an impost separate from and complementary to the duties on automobiles when, and if, the government decides to levy such impost, (2) 600,000 pesetas from the single license tax on automobiles received by the government in accordance with royal decree of April 29, 1927. (3) commission of 2 per cent which the Official Commission of Motors and Automobiles will receive both from buyers and sellers for its intervention in sales.

The methods in which the special motor fund may be employed are stated to be the following: (a) Advance of money for purchase of material by companies holding contracts or orders from the state for construction; and guaranty of interest which the government may decide to grant to factories to aid their development; (b) expenses and subventions which the government may decide upon for protecting the industry; investigation studies and reports which tend to the same result; and the expenses of personnel and material pertaining to the functioning of the Official Commission of Motors and Automobiles.

Arizona Places Ban on Billboard Along Highways

No commercial advertising hereafter shall be permitted on any Arizona highway, subject to the control of the State Highway Commission, this to include any directional signal or sign that imitates any official marker.

No sign of any sort may be placed on the highway without prior permit from the department. There may be erection of signs by civic bodies and municipalities under certain limitations of location, these to be not more than three feet in diameter and carrying official numbers.

No signs will be allowed at curves or dangerous points. It is noted that the regulations will have no effect upon billboard advertising on the ground that may be outside the road right of way, but will serve to displace a multitude of alleged directional and distance signs erected merely for business advertisement.

Record Run Aided Car's Popularity

The unusual public reception that, according to dealers, followed the introduction of the new Franklin Airman Limited line of air-cooled motor cars is attributed partly by H. H. Franklin, president of the Franklin Automobile Co., to the recent record-breaking round trip transcontinental run of a Franklin sedan from Los Aneles to New York City and return, in which Cannon Ball Baker clipped 10½ hours off the former record.

"This run was staged just prior to our announcement of the new Franklin Airman Limited," Franklin said, "because we desired to prove decisively that in the Franklin Airman Limited we were inaugurating a new idea in fast, luxurious and safe travel at sustained high speeds. We chose the transcontinental route because it offered every type of road, various climates from the cool of the mountain ranges to the burning heat of the desert sands in New Mexico and Arizona—in all, every condition that would be met by any motorist regardless of the country he may drive through."

NO DECLINE IN OUTPUT IS FORESEEN

Present Schedules Should Hold Steady During September.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 2.—With current operations giving assurance of a seasonally heavy production during August, manufacturers are turning their attention to September business, with indications at the present time giving no suggestion of any material decline in operations.

While many producers are currently operating at capacity, the average for the industry appears to be about 80 per cent capacity, an unusually high level of operations for this time of the year.

Advance commitments are heavy and point to present schedules holding steady during the first half of September, at least, and possibly for the entire month.

Manufacturers' orders for original equipment are heavy, and show no marked decreasing tendency. Expectations are that this class of business will hold up well for a considerable length of time, and the outlook is good.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT . . . BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

FORD OUTPUT HAS REACHED 5000 DAILY

New Dodge Senior Six With Improved Motor in Production.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 2.—Dodge Brothers will place a new series of Senior Six models on the market within a few days. Shipments to dealers in remote parts of the country have already been made. The factory is working overtime to get out the new line, which will have a wide assortment of body types of the latest American design. The new line will be equipped with a power plant built especially for it.

Production of the Ford Model A cars and trucks now exceeds 5000 daily. Ford plants in the United States are turning out better than 4000 units daily. Canadian plants about 500 a day and foreign factories account for 500 units daily. Employment at the local Ford plants is at its peak, 128,293 men being employed.

Indications that automobile manufacturers expect continued prosperity is seen in the fact that they are placing a large amount of business in the Youngstown and Pittsburg steel district. Large orders have been placed recently by Ford, General Motors and Chrysler.

Operations are expected to be started in the new $750,000 factory of the Durant Motor Co. at Lansing the latter part of October or early in November. W. C. Durant is expected at Lansing to inspect his properties at that time.

Parts and equipment sales for the first six months of 1928 show this period was the best in the industry's history. Replacement manufacturers made an average gain of 30 per cent in unit sales and the jobbers effected an average gain of 40 per cent in dollars as compared to the first six months of 1927.

CHEMISTS TO DISCUSS GAS AND RUBBER

American Chemical Society Annual Meet Begins Sept. 10.

Science's advance in rubber and gasoline will be discussed by reseach chemists from industries and universities in the United States Canada and Germany at the seventy-sixth meeting of the American Chemical Society, to be held at Swampscott, Mass., during the week begining Sept. 10.

Reports on rubber tests, and addresses on the development of motor fuels will feature the sessions. Many of the scientists who participated in the Institute of Chemistry at Northwestern University will attend.

A national symposium on "Combustion" will be held Sept. 11 and 12 under the joint auspices of the society's division of petroleum chemistry, of which J. Bennett Hill, chief chemist of the Atlantic Refining Co., Philadelphia, is chairman, and the gas and fuel chemistry division, headed by A. C Fieldner, chief chemist of the United States Bureau of Mines, Pittsburg. Prof. George Granger Brown of the department of chemical engineering, University of Michigan, will preside.

"Flames" will be the theme of a paper by Stephen P. Burke, director of research, Combustion Utilities Corporation, Long Island City, N. Y. Prof. Henry J. Masson of New York University will speak on "General Detonation Theory From a Consideration of the Behavior of Fuels in the Engine and Auto-Ignition Temperature."

Dr. Graham Edgar, director of research of Ethyl Gasoline Corp. laboratories at Yonkers, N. Y., and J. C. Pope of the same corporation will describe "the Mechanism of Combustion of Normal Octane." J. M. Campbell, W. G. Lovell and T. A. Boyd of General Motors Corp., Detroit, will report on "The Importance of Mixture Ratio in Rating Fuels for Knock."

In addition to the joint symposium, the division of petroleum chemistry will hold sessions Sept. 12 and 13. "The Cracking of Vegetable Oils and Fish Oils for Motor Fuels and Other Products" will be the subpect of a discussion by W. F. Faragher, J. C. Morrell and Gustav Egloff of Chicago.

Wilderness Areas Set Aside In Ranier Park

CERTAIN "wildnerness areas" in Mount Rainier National Park, in Washington, have been set aside by the Department of the Interior through the National Park service. These areas are to be kept in the condition to which nature developed them. They can be reached only on foot or on horseback and no roads will be built that will bring in the wagon or the automobile. No hotels will be permitted. Only the camp made by the individual vacationist will be allowed.

Japanese Law Aimed at "Neckers"

Japan looks to America for her automobiles—but not for laws regulating their safe operation. Nipponese Legislators prefer to make their own traffic rules.

One of the most peculiar of these regulations, according to B. F. Lydon, special representative for Studebaker Corporation in the Far East, is what is known as the "anti-necking lamp" law. This law requires that all cars be equipped with dome lamps, which must be lighted when the car is driven at night.

Americans would look askance at a touring car driven down the street in the evening with a dome light brightly shining—but it is no novelty in Tokio. While the "anti-necking lamp" law is aimed to safeguard passengers, since it is said to have been passed because an altercation between two passengers in an unlighted hire car resulted in the death of one, it no doubt performs what its nickname suggests.

EUROPE NOW MOTOR-MINDED SAYS WILLYS

Finds People Interested in Cars and Better Roads.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—"The presidential election, the peace plan fostered by Secretary Kellogg, and the American-built automobile are the three principal subjects of discussion in Europe now," John N. Willys, president of Willys-Overland, Inc., said the past week on his return from a six-months' tour of Europe.

England, Willys continued, has entered upon an elaborate good roads program and the English engineers are following the method of construction which has been adopted by engineers in this country. He said an excellent highway between London and Liverpool is now in use, and that the traffic over this new road greatly resembles that on the larger arteries in the United States.

An interesting feature of the automotive situation in England is the growing use of the motor car among the great mass of the people, in this respect the Englishman is following his American cousin, Willys said.

Speaking of his product Willys said that a new all-time record was established for Willys-Overland in the export field in July when 5556 Whippets and Willys-Knight sixes were shipped from the corporation's Toledo plant

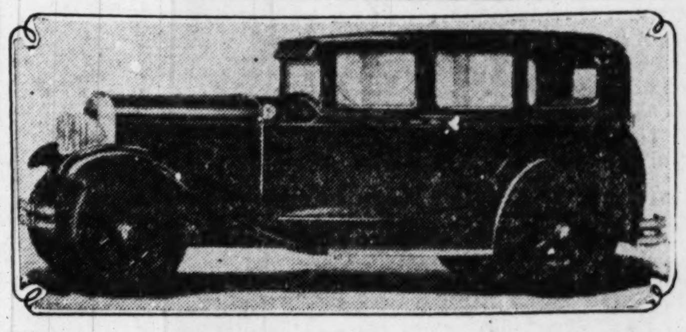
ANOTHER NEW CHANDLER CAR



THIS is the Series 65 Chandler five-passenger four-door sedan now on display here by the Midstates Motor Co., distributer of the line, which was announced several weeks ago.

Chandlers Undergo Many Factory Tests

In the testing laboratories, the motors of the latest Chandlers are subjected to a variety of tests to check up on power, economy and endurance under various load capacities. Dynamometers, tachometers, pyrometers, R. P. M. counters, flowmeters—all sorts of delicately calibrated and intricate apparatus are used to eliminate theory from the performance of a motor car.

In addition to its extensive laboratory research and experimental testing, a fleet of test models of the new cars were also maintained by the Chandler organization to check up on the actual road conditions a car would undergo in the hands of owners. These cars traveled thousands of miles every week with experienced drivers at the wheel in order to further prove the quality of the various units in the Chandler chassis.

AUTO CHAMBER PLANNING AN OLD CAR RACE

Autos Built Prior to 1900 Wanted Entered in Contest

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Pointing to the enormous gains in automobile engineering during the past 30 years, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce yesterday announced a contest for the owners of old automobiles, the winning machine to be on view in New York at the time of the New York Automobile Show in January. Arrangements are now being made for the prizes, which will be announced shortly.

Emphasis is laid on the fact that only cars built prior to 1900 are likely to have a chance to win because several are known to be in existence prior to that date. From time to time persons have written in to the Automobile Chamber claiming to have or to know of the oldest automobile in America. It is believed that this contest will serve to develop new historical facts on the initial stages of motor touring in America.

Those planning to compete should send a notification of their intention before Sept. 24, with a statement concerning the vehicle to be entered to the Educational Department, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, 366 Madison avenue, New York City.

The rules are as follows:

1. Any automobile, gas, steam or electric, may be entered.
2. Anyone may compete except officials and employes of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce or their immediate families.
3. Only automobiles built before 1900 will be considered eligible.
4. Notification of intention to compete should be filed before Sept. 24 with the Educational Department, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, 366 Madison avenue, New York City.

De Soto Factory Chief Visits Here

J. J. Palmer, secretary to C. W. Matheson, vice president and director of sales of De Soto Motor Corp. was the guest of Phil H. Brockman, president of the De Luxe Automobile Co. on Wednesday of the past week. While here he stated that the retail sales of De Soto cars had exceeded their most optimistic quotas.

Palmer also said that owing to the tremendous demand being made on the factory for shipments, additional facilities were under way for a larger production and they expected to build 100,000 De Soto models the first six months.

He was accompanied by Joseph A. Schleicht, local factory district representative, and he left on a late train to visit Memphis, Oklahoma and Texas.

German Motors Light.

More than one-third of the 350,000 cars in Germany, or about 125,000, are small cars of less than 16 horsepower. The tiniest of all is one nicknamed "The Rolling Soldier's Loaf." It is low and has blunt ends, so that it is impossible to distinguish the front from the rear. It has an engine with only one cylinder behind the driver, and the two passengers sit practically on the floor. The "car" costs $450.

Rural Motorist Uses Roads as Much as Urban

Question of Who Benefits Most by Good Highways Probed by Tennessee Investigation—Farmer and City-Dweller Profit Equally.

AS the country is forced to spend more time and more money on building and maintaining roads, the question arises: "Who benefits most by the roads? Is it the city man or the farmer?"

State highway departments in the United States are beginning to take steps to answer the question.

Tennessee is one among the states to investigate the matter. The first step in the process was to determine the number of rural and urban car owners. The method was simple. In a county having say, 4000 cars, every fortieth car was tabulated either as rural or urban cars per hundred. It was assumed that 100 cars taken in this way would give a fair indication of the distribution. Check tabulations show that the variation may be as high as 5 per cent.

When the ratio of vehicle ownership was determined, a check was made on the actual service given by the roads to both urban and rural car owners. The investigation showed the approximate relationship between rural vehicle use of the state system and rural ownership. Although there is divergence, the tendency seems to be toward an equal ratio between ownership and road use. That is to say, given 50 per cent rural ownership, there will be 50 per cent rural vehicles on the state highways.

A great deal depends on the type of road, its condition, and its place in the state highway system, but in general the results of the data gathered show that there is a distinct general relation between ownership and rural travel.

The North Dakota State Department of Highways is now engaged in making such a survey. When the survey is completed the department will be able to attack the financial aspect of the road problem with a clear idea of the fairest sources of revenue, and it will have at hand such information as will aid it in solving road problems more efficiently.

MANY JOIN AUTO DEALERS' ROAD SERVICE

Furnished to New Car Buyers—Sold for $7 to Present Owners

About 400 new names were added the past week to the roster of the Auto Dealers' Emergency Road Service through the various automobile dealers in St. Louis who are furnishing this service to all buyers of new cars. A considerable part of this number were service certificates sold to present owners of cars and to purchasers of used automobiles.

This emergency service was adopted by the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, to which virtually all automobile dealers in St. Louis belong, in order that owners of cars might be assured of positive, prompt and honest service when in trouble on the road. This service is furnished under bonded contract by the Nelson Motor Car Maintenance Co., which has been serving automobile dealers in an individual way for the past eight years.

Under the present plan the buyer of a new car or the owner of a car already in use is furnished a road service card which entitles him to any kind of service on the road to get his car started under its own power or to have his car towed to any place which he may designate. The service is to be rendered impartially as to destination of the car towed.

The service is inclusive of changing tires on the road from spare to wheel, furnishing gasoline, adjusting timing, ignition or gasoline line troubles or any other service which can be performed on the road. It also provides for towing of a disabled car to any point designated from within 10 miles of the city limits of St. Louis.

Up to this time 25 of the large dealers of St. Louis have contracted to use the service and furnish it to their buyers of new cars, or sell it at $7 the year to present owners.

Insurance interests of St. Louis have evinced marked interest in the emergency service believing that the registration system will largely cut down the number of cars stolen. This, if accomplished, they say would serve to reduce the insurance premium rates.

The service can be secured from any St. Louis automobile dealer or from the office of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, 3124 Locust st.

Firestone Trade-In

Following a series of special tire sales the Firestone Tire Co. dealers here now announce a "trade-in" sale which is declared to be an unusual opportunity to save money on Firestone gum-dipped tires and Oldfield tires.

The tire trade-in plan is unique in that instead of the motorist throwing away his used tires, he can now actually sell the unused miles to this progressive dealer, who will make an allowance on a new set of tires.

Low prices still prevail on Firestone, Oldfield, Courier and Airway tires.

600,000 Miles of Roads.

The surfaced highways of the United States at the end of this year will total more than 600,000 miles, based on expenditures of $1,338,025,776 for highway construction during 1928. The Federal aid system, comprising more than 185,000 miles of important interstate trunk lines, will be nearly half finished.

Falcon Test Cars Go 600,000 Miles

The outstanding performance record of eight Falcon-Knight test cars which have covered a collective total of approximately 600,000 miles in about 18 months is cited by officials of Falcon Motors Corp. as evidence that these Knight-engined sixes have been designed and built to withstand 10 years of service.

The eight Falcon-Knight sixes that have been driven over every different type of highway and territory of the country and are still in operation, each being subjected to inspection from time to time. Five of these cars have traveled over 75,000 miles, and in no case have they shown appreciable wear in either the engine or the chassis, according to service officials at the company's factory in Elyria, O.

Labor Unions' Head To Speak Over KSD

A special Labor day program is to be broadcast from New York over KSD from 3 to 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. There will be an address by President Green of the American Federation of Labor, and music.

Full Philco Hour Again on Sept. 16

The Philco period of light opera is to return to a full hour basis on Saturday, Sept. 16, it is announced.

Such operettas as "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Red Mill" and "Madame Sherry" are to be repeated during the fall-winter season.

Concealing Unsightly Wires.

Unsightly wires connecting to the radio set or cabinet may be placed out of sight by using a base socket of the plug-in type, a plug to fit the socket, and a short length of lamp cord. The antenna and ground wires are fastened to the base socket. The aerial and ground leads on the set are attached to the plug. When the set has to be moved, it is merely necessary to pull out the plug from the socket.

For the Notebook.

An old automobile storage battery is useless for application to radio. Batteries of this type are hopelessly noisy.

By reversing the speaker leads in the plug terminals, microphonic noises from audio amplifiers may sometimes be cured.

When better volume control is sought for the A-C receiver, try a variable high resistance between the antenna and ground binding posts.

An emergency antenna can be made by simply placing a desk-type telephone on a pie tin or pan to which is fastened the antenna lead from the set.

String, Woodwind Ensemble Will Be Feature Over WIL

As is told elsewhere in this section, the services of the Kingshighway Presbyterian Church will be broadcast today over WIL, 258 meters, as WMAY is being discontinued.

WIL has established a staff string and woodwind ensemble which is to accompany singers and give concerts, while its members will play solos. Members are: Lina May Anton, violin; Louise Evers, 'cello; Orin Fett, saxophone, clarinet and violin, and Jessie Hyatt, piano.

WIL'S grand opera period from 2:15 to 2:45 this afternoon will be devoted mostly to duets by Agnes Vogler, soprano, and Jack Coleman, staff tenor. They are to sing the balcony scene from 'Romeo and Juliet," the death scene from "Traviata" and "My Mother, Behold me," from "Carmen."

Adding "C" Battery to Old Receiver

The "C" battery is always connected in the grid return lead. One end of this lead connects to the "A" minus circuit, so "A" minus is used for "C" plus. Find the grid return—the lead running from the secondary of each transformer to the filament circuit—and cut it. The end nearest the transformer is connected to a new terminal, and this terminal is made "C" minus. The other end of the cut wire is not used and may be taped or left as is. One "C" minus terminal will do for both leads from the transformers.

Atwater Kent Hour Will Be Continued on High Plane

Company Officers Tell St. Louisans That Metropolitan Opera Artists and Concert Stars Will Be on Fall-Winter Programs.

The Atwater Kent hour will be broadcast this fall and winter on the same high plane that has caused it to be recognized as a national Sunday night institution. The policy of broadcasting by Metropolitan Opera artists and others of equal reputation in the concert field will be continued. Requests to A. Atwater Kent, made by relatively few persons, that these broadcast programs be lowered to a more "popular" level, will not be heeded. For every survey of ilsteners' preferences that has been made has disclosed that fully 85 per cent of the owners of radio sets want just what the Atwater Kent hour is giving them on the air.

These statements were made in St. Louis Monday by P. A. Ware, merchandising manager for the Atwater Kent Manufacturing Co., and H. T. Stockholm, Southwestern manager for the company.

They also agreed on the definite proposition that—whatever receiver a radio dealer has to sell the one absolutely vital thing that he has to sell is what there is of entertainment, recreation and education on the air.

"If you, as a dealer, are not familiar with what is being broadcast; if you do not sell everyon with whom you come in contact the wonderful broadcast programs—you are out of luck and are going to be out of luck." Ware told a gathering of dealers.

"Programs are the biggest factor in selling radio sets," Stockholm said. "Why, there are 5,000,000 persons in this country who cannot read or write, but everyone of them is a prospect for a receiver.

The Atwater Kent Co. is planning to add stations to the chain that is broadcasting the Atwater Kent hour, Ware said.

How dependent sales of radio sets are on broadcasting, Stockholm remarked, was illustrated by the situation in El Paso, Tex. When there several weeks ago he found that there was virtually no sale of radio merchandise in El Paso in the summer. There is no broadcasting in or close to El Paso, listeners having to tune in stations at least 800 miles distant. In warm weather, of course, this means that reception is almost impossible or is jumbled with static. So, as nobody in El Paso can depend on good reception in summer, El Paso people pass up radio until cooler weather."

New POWER New BEAUTY in General Motors' Lowest Priced Six

-a Successful Six now winning Even Greater Success

Providing even finer performance, revealing even smarter style, and built in a great new plant under manufacturing processes unsurpassed for precision and accuracy . . . today's Pontiac Six represents a value the like of which has not been known since the beginning of Pontiac history.

To the sound basic design which has made Pontiac Six internationally famous for stamina and long life—to those important advancements, such as the cross-flow radiator and the G-M-R cylinder head . . . Oakland has added improvements leading to even greater power and to higher top speeds in Pontiac performance. To the inherent style and beauty of Fisher bodies—to the effective symmetry of sweeping fenders and high, straight hoods—Oakland has added the freshness of new Duco colors and the modish air of smaller, smarter wheels and oversize tires.

This lowest priced six of General Motors has won its sensational success by always reflecting General Motors' ability to build a better car for the money. Now it offers new power and beauty. See it and drive it today.

WMAY to Broadcast Services Over WIL Today on 258 Meters

Kingshighway Presbyterian Church Likely to Make Permanent Arrangement, Retaining Only Use of Its Call Letters—KFQA Loses License.

This morning's service of the Kingshighway Presbyterian Church beginning at 11 o'clock, is to be broadcast over WIL, 258 meters (1160 kilocycles). It is expected that this arrangement will be made permanent, as the church is taking its own transmitter, WMAY, off the air, in accordance with the desire of the Federal Radio Commission to reduce interference. The fact that WMAY's license was renewed will not change the decision to close the transmitter.

KFQA, station of the Principia, s likely to make a similar arrangement with some St. Louis station, as the Radio Commission has refused to renew its license.

The elimination of WMAY and KFQA is not significant, so far as reducing interference is concerned, as these stations have been using only an hour each a week and sharing time on that basis with KWK. It has a sentimental significance, of course, in that it removes two stations old enough to be aged as transmitters go. Though even this may not happen, as the stations may arrange to use their old call letters when broadcasting over other stations. In that case, the change will amount merely to changing the wave lengths of WMAY and KFQA.

Tentative plans are said to provide for the Kingshighway Presbyterian Church using WIL three times a week—Sunday mornings and evenings and Wednesday nights.

With WMAY and KFQA eliminated, the St. Louis broadcasting set-up is as follows: KSD-KFUO, 550 meters; WEW, 356 meters; KMOX, 300 meters; WIL, 258 meters; KWK, 234 meters; KFWF (reduced in power from 250 to 100 watts, effective yesterday), 214 meters.

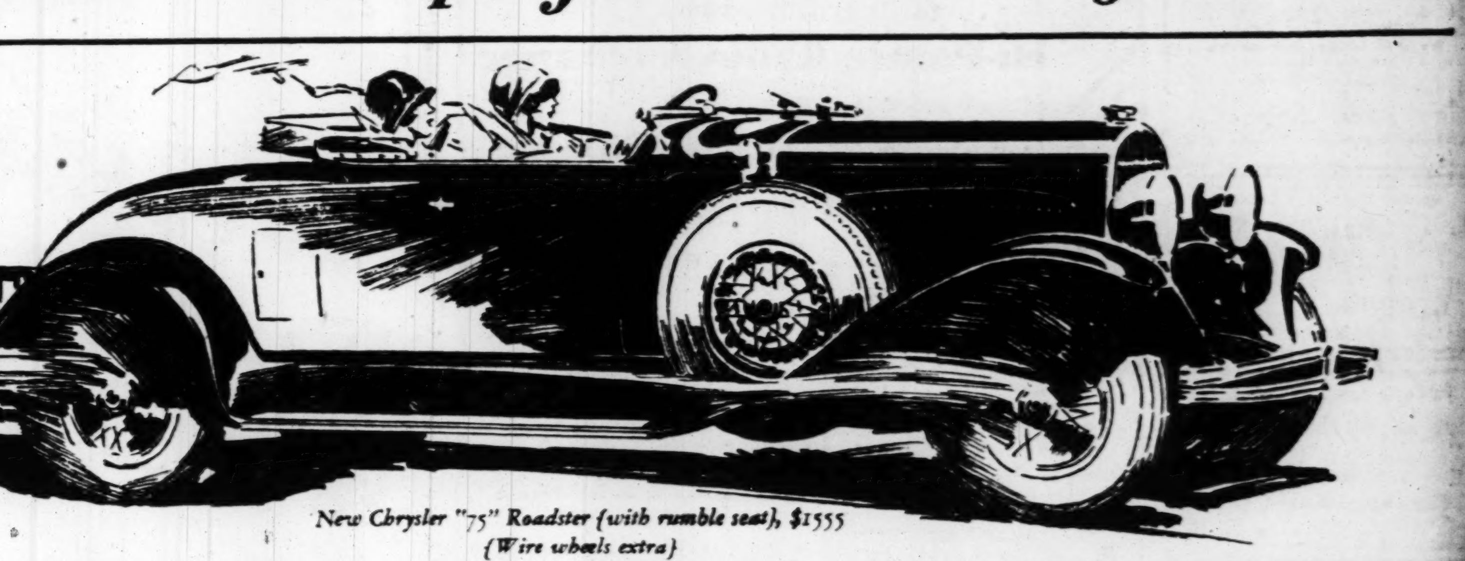
New "75" and "65"—a glorious escape from obsolete fashions



New Chrysler "75" Roadster (with rumble seat), $1555
(Wire wheels extra)

AFTER nearly four years of imitation and emulation Chrysler now brings to the price groups of the new "75" and "65" a lavishness of beauty which was never there before.

The style of yesterday, still living in many new cars, is rendered obsolete because it is succeeded today by Chrysler cars so completely new in design that they establish new measures of beauty and style.

New slender-profile chromium-plated radiator, arched-window silhouette, the grace and sweep of its "air-wing" fenders, the luxury of fitting and appointment single these new Chryslers instantly as the new style that re-styles all motor cars.

Surely the mere evidence of the eye—because performance is assuredly the very name of Chrysler—proves at once that both the new "75" and the "65" have been lifted up to an intrinsic value which hundreds of dollars—yes, even a thousand—more than their selling price could not have secured before.

New Chrysler "75" Prices—Royal Sedan, $1535; 2-passenger Coupe (with rumble seat), $1535; Roadster (with rumble seat), $1555; Town Sedan, $1655. (6-ply full-balloon tires.)

New Chrysler "65" Prices—Business Coupe, $1040; Roadster (with rumble seat), $1065; 2-door Sedan, $1065; Touring Car, $1075; 4-door Sedan, $1145; Coupe (with rumble seat), $1145.

RADIO SHOW PROGRAM TO BE BROADCAST

St. Louis Stations to Put Principal Entertainment Features on Air.

The fourth annual Southwest National Radio Exposition to be held Sept. 17-22 in the Coliseum, promises to be the largest and most comprehensive display of radios, furniture and equipment yet held in the Middle West. Entertainment at the exposition is expected to surpass that at any previous Southwest radio show.

Stations in St. Louis will broadcast features of the exposition, and the Entertainment Committee and the show manager, William B. Mackle, are planning novelties.

The St. Louis district audition for contestants in the second Atwater Kent Foundation competition will be held at the show on Sept. 17 and 18. This audition will present those selected from singers taking part in an elimination audition at the Congress Hotel on Sept. 6 under direction of Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum, State chairman. The two winners of the final audition will represent St. Louis in the Missouri State audition in October.

A committee composed of Julian E. Sampson, chairman; Walter H. Dyer, A. C. Brandt, S. B. Singer, Roy W. Haege, George W. Van Sickle Jr., W. A. Ward, N. E. Hill, Fred A. Wiebe, E. A. Reutner, R. A. Kissel and Franklin McDermott reports that all the leading radio manufacturers will be represented in the show.

The exposition is held under the auspices of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association, and radio dealers from all the Southwest and territory contiguous to St. Louis are expected to attend.

Officers of the association are: Julian E. Sampson, president; Walter H. Dyer, first vice president; A. C. Brandt, second vice president; George W. Van Sickle Jr., third vice president; S. P. Singer, secretary; and W. A. Ward, treasurer.

Radio Trade Notes

Some 500 Atwater Kent dealers from Missouri and Southern Illinois attended a convention Monday at Hotel Chase at which the Brown & Hall Supply Co., distributer, was host. Merchandising and advertising plans to sell 1,000,000 Atwater Kent sets during the year were discussed by P. A. Ware, merchandising manager for the Atwater Kent Manufacturing Co.; H. T. Stockholm, Southwestern manager, and Norman S. Lewis, vice-president of the Chapelow Advertising Co.

In the course of his talk, Ware told the dealers that 7000 persons were working today in the Atwater Kent plant and were turning out more than 4000 sets a day. There is no warehouse in the factory, he said; in fact, every set made is shipped out immediately and the plant is far behind orders.

Lewis, among other things, spoke of the regard in which the Atwater Kent Radio hour has come to be held by mililons of listeners. "The attitude of other companies sponsoring programs," he said, "is illustrated by the typical comment, 'I wish we were putting on the Atwater Kent Hour.' That hour is the standard by which all radio programs are judged."

An important sales factor this year, Stockholm said, is that there are no sales of accessories involved. A customer plugs his set into a light socket. There is nothing extra to buy.

There are 27,000,000 families in this country, the dealers were told. About 8,000,000 have radio sets, but 7,000,000 of them have no AC receivers. About 17,000,000 houses are wired for electricity. It was estimated that 16,000,000 families were prospects for AC sets and that 10,000,000 were prospects for battery-operated receivers. Incidentally, it was pointed out that 400,000 houses were built in 1927 and that at least 90 per cent of them should have radio sets.

In 1926, a survey showed that the preferences of women ran as follows: first, automobile; second, running water; third, telephone and fourth, radio. In 1927, a similar survey disclosed a change, first choice still being the automobile, but second choice being a radio set.

The 1928-29 Atwater Kent models were presented and discussed for the dealers by A. N. Doty, of the Atwater Kent Co. C. W. Humphries showed the new line of Pooley cabinets for Atwater Kent sets. The Red Lion cabinets were shown and explained by George Coleman, of the Red Lion Furniture Co.

A time payment and financing plan for Atwater Kent dealers was explained by J. T. Bristol, of the Bankers Commercial Security Co.

The dealers were welcomed to the convention by Norman S. Brown, president of the Brown & Hall Supply Co. Then a luncheon was served. Fred A. Wiebe, vice-president of the Brown & Hall Co., acted as chairman for the afternoon session.

A banquet for the dealers and their wives was given at the Hotel Chase in the evening by the Brown & Hall Supply Co. There were no speeches, entertainment being furnished by Station KWK.

The wives of visiting dealers were guests of the Brown & Hall Co. throughout the day at the Osage Country Club.

James C. Gordon, Inc., has been appointed exclusive distributer of the new Kennedy receivers. The new Kennedy line includes 6-tube and 8-tube AC sets, the latter having four R. F. stages.

New Shamrock receivers are being shown by the distributer, A. E. Schmidt & Co. These sets have 227 AC tubes in the R. F., detector and first audio stages, and 171A power tubes in push pull in the final audio stage. The sets are fully shielded, have single dial tuning control, and are completely light socket-operated.

The Shamrocks come in table and chassis models, so that individual preferenec in consoles may be gratified. The table models are in six color combinations, including black and gold, walnut and ivory.

Standard transformer audio is used in these new Shamrocks instead of resistance coupled amplification as in former models. The result is great volume when wanted and the realism of reproduction that push pull arrangement of power tubes gives.

A display of the new phonographs and Radiola-phonograph combinations of the Victor Talking Machine Co. was shown to some 150 dealers Friday at the Coronado Hotel. The most sumptuous model exhibited was a combination in massive antique furniture, of the new Radiola 64 superheterodyne receiver and a most complete automatic electrola phonograph, which handles 15 10 or 12-inch records. Both receiver and electrola use the same super power speaker.

This was the first time that this particular de luxe combination was shown in St Louis. In fact, it was exhibited here before it was seen in Chicago.

An automatic electrola and an automatic phonograph, both handling 15 records at a time, also were shown in striking furniture.

Another combination was a Radiola 18, a 105-type power speaker and an electrola feature for playing records. Still another combine the Radiola 18 with a 100A speaker set in an all-metal horn, and an electric pickup. A 711 model had a Radiola 18, a 100A speaker and an orthophonic sound box and metal tone chamber for records.

Walter Hires, St. Louis representative of the Victor company, prfesided at the afternoon business meeting and a dinner at 6 o'clock. Howard Krupp of the Victor company explained in detail the company's advertising plans. G. J. Daley presented the new models for the Victor company. N. H. Norvell discussed sales promotion methods for dealers and general plans of the Victor company. A. C. Tamburino, district service manager, and A. W. Deas Jr. of the Victor company also spoke.

Following the banquet, the dealers were guests of the Koerber-Brenner Co., Victor distributer, at a theater party.

Another illustration of the trend toward the super power tube, to obtain great volume when desirable and full-toned reproduction, is an AC receiver which has been added to the Bosch line.

This is similar to the standard model 28, except that it has a 210 tube in the last audio stage and the powerful unit to drive it, instead of a push pull audio stage using the smaller power tubes.

It is a console model and has a "super dynamic" Bosch speaker which has been designed to take the full output from the power tube. The set is elaborately shielded, as are all the Bosch models.

A new 7-tube Stewart-Warner AC receiver is being shown in St. Louis. There will also be a de luxe 7-tube set. A Stewart-Warner dynamic speaker, said to be of great power and definition of bass notes, is expected here for exhibition in about two weeks.

The 7-tube models, called the 801A-Series B, have push pull audio, giving the volume to work any speaker at capacity when desired. The 7-tube sets come in both table and console models.

The 6-tube Stewart-Warner stays in the line as the Model 801A. Built-on speakers are a feature of these sets.

Dan Hyland, who heads the Stewart-Warner branch in St. Louis, said that the new sets were interesting examples of the reproduction effects possible to get with push pull audio.

The great increase over last summer in warm weather radio sales has extended to the South, according to F. L. Ray, in charge for the Crosley Radio Corporation of the territory covering Missouri, Southern Illinois, Arkansas, Kentucky and Mississippi. The last six weeks, Ray said, ha sseen an almost phenomenal summer business, especially in the Memphis and Little Rock districts. It has now been definitely proved, he declared, that plenty of good broadcasting and real sales push will sell radio the year through.

The new Balkite receivers were exhibited and explained by Balkite officers at a dinner Thursday night at which Herman Hollander, head of the Electric Lamp Supply Co., distributer, was host. There were some 75 present at the dinner. Loren E. Wood, factory representative for Balkite, presided and introduced the speakers.

K. E. Rollefson, research engineer at the Balkite plant, explained the circuit used in the new sets and why it was selected. He told why the receivers had made records for selectivity and distance getting ability and why the audio system used resulted in such excellent reproduction

H. J. Doughty, director of sales for Balkite, discussed the Balkite policy and told how the company making the new receivers had been in business for 25 years and had become one of the best known in the radio industry.

H. R. Van Guenten, vice president of the John Dunham agency of Chicago, which is in charge of all advertising of the new sets, told what the company proposed to do in that respect.

Incidentally, the Balkite hour from the Chicago opera is to be resumed this fall and winter.

Doughty, Van Guenten and Rollefsen arranged to return to Chicago in the Ford all-metal plane that left the city at 9 a. m. Friday.

A speaker of great power and realism is a combination of Utah AC dynamic cone and large horn that is being shown in St. Louis. The dynamic cone works into a horn of nonvibratory material 49 inches long, the bell being 31 inches in diameter.

Big Chicago Station Ordered Eliminated

WLIB, WTAS and WGN, KFKX, WEBH and KYW, all located in or near Chicago. WGWB and WISN of Milwaukee were ordered consolidated.

Ruling on WQJ.

"There is no reason or justification for maintaining a separate license for a concern which is not engaged in the use or operation of the station," the commission said, in dealing with WQJ, which is licensed to the Calumet Broadcasting Co, but controlled and operated by the Chicago Daily News in conjunction with its own station, WMAQ.

To give a separate license to WQJ means that the fourth zone, and the State of Iillinois within that zone, is being charged with a station license under the quotas of the State and zone permitted under the Davis amendment. It is not equitable that there should be two licenses when only one service is being rendered."

Consolidations Ordered.

Other consolidations effected by the station owners or imposed by the commission are the following: WJBL and WBAO, at Decatur, Ill. WJBL was reduced in power from 250 to 100 watts from 6 p. m. to 6 a. m. to eliminate interfernece by that station in regions beyond the service area which it is reasonably entitled to serve.

WKBB and WCLS, Joliet, Ill., were reduced from 150 to 100 watts and consolidate.

KBS and WLBO, Galesburg, Ill., were merged.

KGBY, KGCH, KGDW, KGBZ, KGES and KGEO, located in various small towns in Nebraska, were merged. In this case the consolidation has already been made, and the key station, KGBZ, at York, authorized to continue to operate them all.

A period of 30 days was granted to WLIB and WTAS to arrange their consolidation with WGN, the Chicago Tribune station.

Thirty days also was allowed to complete the merger of KFKX, WEBH and KYW, Chicago.

The commission denied a license to WMBB-WOK, owned by the American Band and Mortgage Co.

"If there is to be equality of broadcasting service, both as to transmission and reception throughout the five zones of the United States, or even as between the states of the fourth zone, Chicago's quota must be radically cut down," the commission said.

Worth Remembering.

Cheap battery eliminators, either "A" or "B" or a combination of both, are not worth owning. When buying an eliminator to supplant the batteries, be sure to get one with a rectifier that will handle more tubes than are in the set.

Show Season Starts Sept. 10

Shubert to Be First of Legitimate Theaters to Open With Production of "The Desert Song," But Although Many Attractions Are Coming to That House and the American, Only Three Dates Have Been Actually Set So Far.

WITH the Municipal Opera over for the summer and the big stage in Forest Park in the hands of the Freiburg Players from Baden, Germany, who are presenting the "Passion Play"—a review of last night's opening performance will be found in the news section of today's Post-Dispatch—interest now centers in the coming season at the legitimate theaters. As a matter of fact very little is known, so far, of the theatrical fare which will be served up this fall and winter. The American Theater has a long list of attractions but an opening date has yet to be announced. Out at the Shubert-Rialto many plays and musical shows are in the offing but only three have actually been set in. On Sept. 10 the Shubert will get going with "The Desert Song" which will stay one week. The next piece to be scheduled at the Grand boulevard house is "A Night in Spain," on Sept. 23, to be followed by "Excess Baggage," which comes on Sept. 30. Further than that there are, at the moment, no positive bookings.

For years producers have been discussing the waning of "the road," and prophesying a day when only six or eight cities outside New York would see legitimate plays with Broadway casts. The direst forecasts were revived when a group of producers announced that they had acquired rights to a sound picture process and would use it to send their plays to screens throughout the country simultaneously with their production in the flesh on Broadway.

OPINION is far from unanimous, however, that the road is destined to fare any worse than it has in recent years. The plan for sound pictures of contemporary plays remains to be perfected, both as to filming and distribution and as to remuneration of stage actors who will automatically become screen players and in so doing will cut themselves off from employment on the road. The Actors Equity Association is concerned with the problem because a precedent will be set in the duties of the actor.

Meanwhile road companies are being assembled for many plays successful in New York. Several producers profess belief that sound picture competition will weed out only the weaker impresarios; and no diminution is noted in the number of stock companies.

What one producer regards as a profitable road circuit is revealed by bookings made for David Belasco's current play, "The Bachelor Father." The New York cast will go this autumn to Washington, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Newark and Boston, with enough added engagements to bring to 20 or 25 the number of cities which will see it. But it will not be taken West or South of Chicago, St. Louis and Baltimore.

AND a dozen or more cities from Philadelphia to St. Louis will witness a notable production of Macbeth this season before New York gets a look at it.

George Tyler, the veteran producer responsible in recent seasons for the revival of "Trelawney of the Wells," "Diplomacy" and "She Stoops to Conquer," is sponsoring the offering of Shakspeare's tragedy. Gordon Craig is designing the sets and helping to stage it, and Lyn Harding and Margaret Anglin are to have the major roles.

"I am producing for America," Tyler explains. "It is not necessary to have a New York run before taking Macbeth to other cities of the country, and I shan't stake the success of it on whether New York likes it."

And so, although New York will see the play sometime during the season, it will open at Philadelphia October 29 and go thence to Washington, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Louisville, Indianapolis and Columbus. It may be that Kansas City and Minneapolis or St. Paul will view it ahead of New York.

The revival promises to be a significant one if only for the share Gordon Craig will have in its production. Craig, son of the late Ellen Terry and a stranger to the United States since he played in Chicago as a boy in 1885, in a company headed by his mother and Irving, is a revolutionist who has made his influence felt widely in the theater in the past generation, although he has never participated in a production for the English-speaking stage.

A MAN of difficult temperament, Craig took his genius to Moscow, Vienna and other continental capitals when he failed to get the sort of hearing he sought in his native England.

His principle that scenery should be felt and not seen, and that it is a failure if it intrudes itself into a play, has been reflected in the United States in the imported work of Max Reinhardt and some of his contemporaries. Craig holds, too, that music in the theater must be a part of the background, indistinguishable by itself. And so, although music will be used in Macbeth, there will be no orchestra in front of the curtain. Lighting will play a great part in the staging.

The Shakspearean play is to be done, Tyler says, "pretty much as it would be understood and appreciated by a present day American audience."

Craig is now in Genoa. With him is Douglas Ross, Scottish director who produced Macbeth at Yale recently and who is to collaborate with Craig in the pending project. Ross will come on soon with the first plans for the production. Then the cast will be selected; 60 persons are to be carried on the road and 100 are to be used in the production. Craig himself will come to the United States after rehearsals start, in time to supervise the incorporation of his own ideas after the preliminary tasks have been disposed of.

Choral Clubs to Start Work Soon

A meeting of the two boards of the Apollo-Morning Choral clubs will be arranged shortly for the completion of the winter's program. September will be devoted to completing the active membership lists that all may be in readiness for the first rehearsal of the joint clubs in October.

Young men and women desirous of joining the singing forces of the two clubs are asked to communicate with Elizabeth Cueny, at 4254 Olive street, or phone LIndell 3770. Charles Galloway, conductor for 20 years of the two clubs when operating separately, continues in that capacity

Day By Day IN New York

By O. O. McINTYRE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.

THIS morning I heard a gentleman moan that with the passing of the public drinking places, good fellowship had vanished in America. Rubbish! I know something of the cheap camaraderie of the saloon. There was nothing to it. More likely than not it wound up with a bust in the jaw. Few ever formed a lasting friendship in a saloon. Murder was their specialty.

There is little doubt Gene Tunney's recent victory enhanced his popularity among fight fans. A popularity, incidentally, that does not interest him. Long considered a powder puff fighter by the pugilistic cognoscenti, he slashed his iron jawed and cement headed adversary to ribbons. But it helped to sound the inevitable death knell of professional prize fighting. Potential killers like Dempsey might step in and do the same thing and receive the accolade, but to see the bookish, esthetic and philosophic Tunney resort to this fiendish blood spilling sickened many at the ringside—many who have sworn they will never witness another championship battle.

But professional prize fighting is being killed chiefly by its promoters. The Tunney-Heeney scrap had plenty of color to incite the customers, but they didn't come. The sliding $3 to $40—and mostly $40—scale met its Waterloo. Tex Rickard found himself holding a nice empty bag and if there were tears over his loss they were shed by him alone. Rickard had grown arrogant in his attitude toward the public, and so there came a time when he needed that public badly, but it was, ho, ho, looking the other way. He blamed the radio for the flop. It was not that.

Another championship is a long way off. Many things may happen. Tunney has retired. He is astute and sound in his reasonings. He sees the hand-writing on the wall. It is a calling far beneath him and there are any number of worthy institutions that will welcome him—not for his physical brawn, but his intelligence and poise.

It came to me suddenly the other day that I never see hod carriers in New York any more. They were the drudges of building operations climbing ladders with their loads of brick and mortar—usually Irish huskies who smoked their pipes upside down.

Inquiry revealed there are no more hod carriers. They are now tenderers. Modern building has made it possible to bring the material they used to carry up to various floors on temporary elevators and the tenderer merely carried it to the workmen.

And the tenderer makes $9 a day and comes to his work in an automobile.

Behind the Screens

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 1.

"YOU should be in the movies" is a remark familiar to any person strikingly handsome or strikingly ugly. Any spectacle out of the ordinary inspires the same reaction. Owners of two-headed cows and talking cats invariably have Hollywood timetables in their pockets.

"You should be in the movies," they say to the cow—and they really think that the cow should.

Hollywood is the Mecca for things unusual and unique, be it fish, fowl, flesh, cabbages or sealing wax. This trait leads to much that is humorous, according to Charles Sewell, head of the property department of the big Paramount studios, who has been in the employ of Messrs. Zukor and Lasky for many years.

Two sisters, natives of a little town in Northern California, came to Hollywood two years ago to win fame and fortune as actresses. Instead, after a year and a half of trying, they found a stray cat in an alley, trained it for the cameras and now it makes them $25 each day it works in the films, and it works often.

It was used in a recent Esther Ralston starring picture. At first they had no intention of their cat becoming an actor. It was not until some friend said: "You should put it in the movies" that the hunch came to them.

An Australian mine owner made note of the Australian honey bear, or wombat, while he was in the Antipodes.

"By George! They would be good in the movies!" he said to himself, and when he returned to the United States he brought three of the little gray animals with him. He tried to interest Sewell in buying them for use in pictures, and finally sold one, but not to the studio. Clara Bow happened to see it one day and bought it for a pet. She keeps it in her back yard in Beverly Hills.

The Brothers Spoffard are well known in the picture colony. First of all, they were ranchers, plowing and reaping in the hills. One day one of them captured a buzzard. Then penned it, trained it in a trick or two and named it "Archie." Some caller gave the usual advice after seeing Archie do his tricks. "He should be in the movies."

The Brothers Spoffard quit ranching then and there. They now have a trained bear, six trained dogs, a leopard, a lion and a flock of trained mice, along with Archie, father of the brood. They make a very good living, indeed.

Recently, while the William Wellman company was on location at Jacumba Hot Springs filming "Beggars of Life," a native of that Mexico border town wandered up to watch the proceedings. The next day he came back with a wild cat, which he offered to sell to Wallace Beery or anyone else who would buy. The cat was the most unusual thing he could think of, and he had acquired motion picture ambitions that he desired to satisfy.

Some new faces and a decidedly different mode of presenting a screen story are found in the newly completed film version of Frances Noyes Hart's magazine serial, "The Bellamy Trial."

One is watching some news reels, including the usual shot of the West Point cadets parading for somebody or other, the usual baby show, and the usual fleet maneuvers on the high seas; and then a boastful title crows: "Cameraman First on Scene of Sensational Murder." One watches a curious throng milling about the cottage in which Mrs. Mimi Bellamy was found slain. The usual spectators stumble in front of the camera and, when yelled at by the cameraman, look around and into the lens in the customary surprised sort of way.

Then the prosecuting attorney is seen making his way through the crowd into the courthouse where Mrs. Bellamy's husband (Kenneth Thomson) and his alleged accomplice (Leatrice Joy) are tried for murder. The prosecuting attorney poses awkwardly for the news reel men (one still sees everything through the lens of a news reel camera) and the presiding judge (William Tooker) is surprised into a brief glance of embarrassment toward the camera. Gradually one is lured into the midst of the trial and learns everything about the murder, through the pictured testimony of witnesses, except who killed Mrs. Bellamy. The mystery finally is solved in the last sequence, which is the only one that is presented in conventional "movie" style. And then, after the whole story has been told, come the main title and the customary screen credits revealing who made the picture and who played in it.

Eddie Nugent, who portrays the youthful reporter destined to become interested in Betty Bronson while both are covering the trial, is one of the new faces brought to the screen in this picture. He was an assistant director a few months ago. George Barraud, playing the husband of Leatrice Joy, also will be new to the fans. He attracted the attention of film executives while appearing in Hollywood in the stage play "Interference."

Never Too Hot for Movies

Cinema Palaces Actually Reach the Peak of Their Business in the Summer Time and St. Louis Ranks High as One of the Best Warm Weather Amusement Centers of the Entire Country.

IT USED to be, not so many years ago, that summer was a dead season in the theaters here. So far as the legitimate houses are concerned it still is, but with the Municipal Opera playing to thousands of persons every night during most of June, July and August and the picture houses doing their best business of the year in hot weather, St. Louis is one of the leading summer amusement spots of the country. The statement that the cinema palaces reach the top of their patronage during the "off" season is a fact which will surprise a good many people. But it is a fact, nevertheless, in the larger, first-run houses.

The elaborate cooling systems installed in these temples of celluloid dramas are responsible for the persistent and consistent gathering of the cash customers. If the actors in the new-fangled talking movies could hear, as well as speak, they would probably imagine that the applause is for themselves when really it is meant for the refrigeration engineers.

Be that as it may, no less than a quarter of a million dollars is being spent on a refrigeration plant for famous voices of the films. The engineers who are building it as part of the new Fox 40-acre sound studio out in Hollywood prefer to describe it as an "air-conditioning plant." It will not only keep the air in the sound stages frigid when the heroine is supposed to be speaking in icy tones; it will warm the air, too, as required, or make it alternately hot and cold.

THE four sound-proof stages which this plant will serve are windowless, to keep out disturbing noises, so the only air the players can breathe after the padded doors are closed must be pumped in by machinery. Usually it will be comfortably cool air, with just the right amount of humidity to keep the heroine's make-up and disposition in good shape. But the plant will be equipped to create any season of the year in any one of the four sound-proof stages at a moment's notice. It could be winter on Stage 1, for instance, summer on Stage 2, spring on Stage 3 and on Stage 4 a synthetic September.

To the hard-working movie actors this new system of furnishing climate to go with the story will seem almost too good to be true. Weary players have been wearing fur overcoats in winter scenes being filmed in bake-oven stages. Under the new system winter air will be pumped into winter-time scenes, and hot gusts of July into bathing-suit sequences.

ORDINARILY it is safe enough to quote the old familiar axioms in Hollywood, but just now it is not good diplomacy to say to any producer: "Talk is cheap." For some people it may be cheap, but United Artists is spending $250,000 on sound-proof stages in which to put talk into pictures; Warner Brothers spent $2,000,000 changing a large picture plant from silent to talking equipment, and are not through yet. The new talking picture stages for Fox are being built at a cost of $1,000,000; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is building stages of the same expensive steel and concrete type, and all but a few of the other producers are investing heavily in talk for their films. And all this just in time to spoil what began to look like an era of economy in the movies.

No one as yet has dared to suggest that John Barrymore will yodel in his first sound picture. It is a fact, however, that he will be a mountaineer in the Swiss Alps in the Ernst Lubitsch picture, which will be his initial sound-film venture of United Artists.

NEW mechanical developments, rather than new faces, are the center of cinema interest here now, and every ear is attuned to the fragments of information occasionally oozing out of the closely guarded experimental laboratories of the screen. In the inner sound-sanctum of Paramount, for instance, tests have been made with sound and color in combination, and a closeup of Nancy Carroll conversing from the screen in natural tones and colors is said to be particularly interesting.

AT TIFFANY-STAHL the three dimensional process developed by H. M. Hoffman is said to be so far along that picture-goers will see it before the end of the year. Hoffman still keeps his tests locked in the laboratory, however, and confines his conversations on the subject to the statement that no special projector or other special equipment in the theater is involved in his method of giving real life depth to the screen.

MEANWHILE, in an Eastern laboratory, Pathe is exploring a unique department of the talking picture field. By using a powerful magnifying glass in combination with a very sensitive microphone, the sounds and sights of a battle between ants have been brought to the screen, and picture-goers will be able to hear as well as see the clash of insects in mortal combat. Later developments will include microscopic sound-pictures of the lives of the microbes, and the ultimate in microscopic sound-photography doubtless will have been reached when a movie audience hears and sees a close-up of the typhoid fever germ saying "oh!"

Another development which at any other time would attract no special attention is the recent affiliation of Paramount with one of the largest radio broadcast stations in the West. Although studio officials say the acquisition of KNX as a radio mouthpiece was merely to give Paramount's "corporate voice" a chance to be heard on the air as often as desired, the opinion persists in some quarters that recent developments in television accelerated the deal. Even though many years elapse before it is practicable to broadcast motion pictures, it will be of considerable advantage to a studio to be able to broadcast portraits of its stars and new players to the army of television experimenters who in the not far distant future may be as numerous as the early crystal set pioneers used to be.

Recital by Miss Stemmler.

A piano recital will be given by Miss Clara Stemmler of 1911 Longfellow boulevard next Thursday night at the Liederkranz Hall, Grand boulevard and Flad avenue. Behind the Screens film characterization depends, of course, on the sort of character to be portrayed. Which makes it interesting to note how various stars solve for themselves the problem of how a screen celebrity should look in off-screen moments, when the order of the day is simply "Be Yourself."

Lew Cody apparently feels most at ease when his ankles are set off with white spats. Seldom is he seen without them. Brilliant ties are also characteristic of his off-screen personality. Lon Chaney, on the other hand, affects a costume that helps him to melt into any ordinary crowd and remain unnoticed. Horn-rimmed glasses, a cap pulled down over his eyes and an ultraquiet business suit make him look like any one of 10,000 other pedestrians.

Emil Jannings, too, wears a cap and resembles a baseball umpire out for a walk. When he drives an automobile, however, he likes to sit behind the wheel of an imported car that simply has to be noticed.

Adolphe Menjou off screen casts himself in the role of a friend to animals. Seldom is he seen at leisure without a dog keeping him company. William Haines can be identified at a distance by his collegiate fedora. Clara Bow always wears something very red or orange. Lately she has been accentuating the blaze of her red hair by wearing a collegiate skull cap that lets most of the bobbed tresses run wild in the wind.

Fans doubtless have noticed that Evelyn Brent seldom shows her hair on the screen. Off screen, too, she affects hats that completely cover her hair. Greta Garbo's favorite street costume is a mannish overcoat with turned up collar and a rakish felt pulled down over her eyes. Karl Dane is partial to red suspenders and an unbottoned coat that frequently flaps open, giving the suspenders a chance to take a bow. And John Gilbert practically never plays his off screen role without a blue shirt with soft collar attached. He also likes pearl gray fedoras.

An American Indian ingenue is something the movie-makers have wanted for a long time, but apparently the right girl did not come along until Dorothy Janis, a Texan of Cherokee descent, came to California from Fort Worth to visit friends. One of the friends worked in a studio wardrobe department, where costume designers rack their brains for new ways of making movie heroines look slender on the screen. So when Dorothy called to see her friend her 94 pounds of loveliness was noticed at once. Her height, 4 feet 10, is also ideal for the screen. Her first assignment under her contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is a part opposite Tim McCoy.

Men who guard banks against robbery have a comparatively simple task. They and everyone else know it is the money the bank doesn't want carried out indiscriminately by strangers. If they had to keep eagle eyes on all the blotters and pens and inkwells, and had to guard against letting customers disturb the position of a waste basket, they could sympathize with the fellows who guard movie sets.

Few visitors in a studio realize that on a set where a company has stopped shooting for the day, but has not finished with a scene, the removal of a few flowers from a vase or the opening of a book that was closed might be suddenly and ludicrously apparent when the finished scene is projected.

On the First National lot alone there are 65 men whose duty it is to see that "live" sets are not tampered with. They know that the visitor who picks up the broken fragments of a lamp which should be lying on the floor when the fight between the hero and the villain is resumed next morning might as well pick up a bundle of $10 bills. But one can't shoot a visitor. Nor can one club a janitor who absent-mindedly sweeps the atmosphere off a set.

Another echo of the excitement over talking pictures is the launching of a new magazine, "Sound Waves," devoted to celluloid sound developments. The publisher, Cedric E. Hart, formerly representative for various opera stars, plans to feature semi-technical articles and, at the present stage of controversy between producers, outstanding opinions on the future of sound.

NOVEL ON LIFE OF DICKENS

He Is Shown as Self-Centered and Fond of Adulation.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—The life of Charles Dickens has been woven into a biographical novel by C. E. Bechhofer-Roberts, English author, under the unenlightening title of "This Side Idolatry."

With sympathetic detail is pictured the novelist's rise from a depressing boyhood to brilliant genius, but he is shown, too, as a man fond of adulation, delighting to call himsef "the Sparkler" and "the Inimitable," surrounding himself with admirers of his own choosing and so self-centered that he reared a barrier between himself and his wife which separated them at last after she had borne him nine children.

Second Thoughts ON First Nights

By ALISON SMITH.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.

NEVER were the perils of dramatic criticism brought home more strongly than when "Gang War" opened at the Morosco last week. "Gang War" is Willard Mack's latest melodrama, set in that happy hunting ground of the melodramatist, the war area of the Chicago bootleggers. We often wonder what these struggling playwrights did for material in the day when there weren't any bootleggers anywhere, for in these times, every third program you open is labeled, Act 1, Scene 1. A Back Room in Joe's Cafe."

Certainly, the resourceful Mr. Mack isn't one to let such opportunities escape him. And when Mr. Mack writes a melodrama, he gets it all in. As a result, "Gang War" is the most incessant, loudest medley of machine-gun-play, rifle shooting, bomb raids and poison gas attacks that ever exploded practically in the lap of this quaking spectator.

It begins quietly enough (as it now seems) with only five shots fired at a bootlegger on his way from church. After that it begins to get noisy. The action—which concerns the feuds of rival gangs and the seduction of a village ingenue—has a running accompaniment of gun play which, at the end of the second curtain, has laid low a fair percentage of the cast.

With all these limp and bleeding bodies backstage, you would think they might call it an evening. But Mr. Mack's idea, it seems, was action. So the third act brings a bootlegger's air raid in which bombs are dropped from the skies, blowing Joe's cafe to bits and filling the theater with gas fumes which almost added a choking front row of first nighters to the fatality list.

As one who spent most of her time through this scene trying to crawl under a seat, we haven't an altogether clear idea of the events immediately after the tragedy. But when the smoke does clear away the surviving gangsters are at it again. They are plotting another raid, this time with a mine explosion. And when Mr. Mack writes a melodrama about that (as he probably will), we resolved (as we crept out of the theater, sputtering from fumes and shaking pieces of scenery out of our hair) that we'd review it from the safest and last seat in the topmost balcony.

IT was one of life's ironies (frequently found on Broadway) that caught "The Big Pond" to nestle sweetly down to "Gang War" the following evening. For the former is one of the gentlest and prettiest mannered plays imaginable and never in all our gun-shy lives have we sat through anything more nerve wracking than its noisy neighbor. And it so happened that reverberations from Mr. Mack's melodrama did echo through the Morosco next door into the more tender love passages of the new play. But the occasional shocks only added to the blessed assurance that there you were, safe in the Bijou listening to a quiet story about a nice American girl and her funny father and the so quaint Frenchman who, in spite of being forgotten, was as nice as possible himself. In fact, everybody in the play was as nice as A. E. Thomas and George Middleton could make them. Which, all things considered, is very nice indeed.

It is a sentimental, innocuous and mildly humorous comedy, modeled after those pleasant serials which romp through the motor ads of the Saturday Evening Posts. Like so many of these standardized romances, it deals with international marriages and has something to say about the relation of romance to geography. The American girl falls in love with a Frenchman in Venice, but when he is transported to her own home town in Ohio, he turns into as robust and efficient a go-getter as ever shouted 'Allo" into an American telephone—and love's young dream is ended. She decides that if she must choose between moonlit canals and the business office, she might as well choose a product from her own country, so she marries her childhood sweetheart instead.

KENNETH MACKENNA, gone suddenly Gallic, had the advantage of an authentic accent and easy mimicry, but there were times when he overstressed the part with the shrugs and "Alors" and had wavings of the comic-strip Frenchman. Lucile Nikolas was sweetly decorative in the role of the American girl, and Doris Rankin played a society reporter pest with faithfully irritating realism. The most festive moments of the evening, however, came with the entrances of Harlan Briggs, who as an American father, presented the incredible aspect of a miniature Balieff, mysteriously strayed from Moscow to Vernon, O.

As a contribution to international amenities, this mild little piece isn't going to shake the world. But as an innocent bit of theatrical fluff, it is prettilly mannered and light-hearted enough to

World's Best Pictures Shown at Loew's State

CHANGE, change, change, that is the law of progress! What's fixed is dead and the movies move!

WITHIN THE heart of every man and woman in the motion picture industry is the passionate wish to make a photoplay that will fire the imagination of nations. Can anything cheap, tawdry, flashy or dirty do this? Of course not. We know our feet are in the mud, but our eyes are on the stars.

LOEW'S STATE THEATER, HAVING THE choice of the world's best pictures, has, during the past year, shown pictures of such rare beauty and strength that a high standard has been established for this theater.

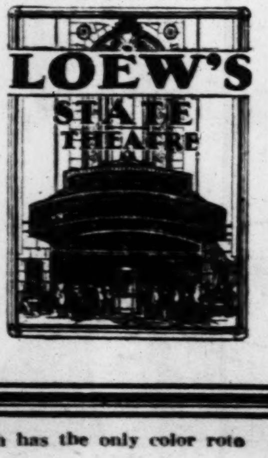
AMONG THESE PICTURES WAS "THE BIG Parade," "Ben Hur," "What Price Glory," "The Student Prince," "Love" and many others of the same super grade. This is the standard we are working from and propose to keep on working from. And to elevate this standard to even higher levels we installed—

NATURALTONE AUDIBLE PICTURES which assure LOEW'S STATE the finest quality in Speaking and Sound productions. Our Synchronized musical accompaniment to "White Shadows" and John Barrymore in "Tempest" has never been equaled; the dialogue between Clark & McCullough in "The Interview" was perfection itself in diction and tonal timbre.

LOEW'S STATE WAS NOT SATISFIED with merely "talking pictures."

YOU DID IT—YOU—THE FANS, THE KEEN ones who are always demanding better things. Criticism, appreciation, salvos of applause and then suggestion: "the divine discontent," that is what inspired LOEW'S STATE to provide you with the ultimate in entertainment.

IT IS OUR CONTENTION THAT—The Picture's the Thing and St. Louis has always conceded that LOEW'S STATE has them. The feature picture occupies the major portion of the program in a movie theater. It should therefore be given the most consideration.



LOEW'S STATE THEATRE

PLEASE REMEMBER—That this theater was built for YOUR entertainment and the broad path to success is to give you THE BEST THE WORLD AFFORDS AT THE PRICE YOU CAN AFFORD TO PAY.

The Sunday Post-Dispatch has the only color roto magazine in St. Louis.

FRENCH ENVOY SAYS U. S. IS ENTERING ON GREAT PROSPERITY

Claudel Tells Paris Interviewer Also That America Has Finest Architecture in World.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—The United States today, compared with 35 years ago, is a new country, Paul Claudel, French Ambassador to the United States, told an interviewer of a French newspaper.

"The United States possesses the finest architecture in the world," he said. "Their skyscrapers, which in days gone by may have appeared ugly, have been perfected in line and structure. The building in tiers gives an aspect of magnificence.

"America is entering on a period of great prosperity. There is in that country more comfort, more dignity than elsewhere. The standard of living is superior to what it is in Europe. Workers earn a great deal of money and live well. In France we work all our lives and at last are able to possess our own house. In America they begin by having their house and paying for it afterward by working. The method is far more logical."

MERAMEC STATE PARK DEDICATION PROGRAM

Exhibitions, Basket Dinner and Speeches Are Listed—Motorcade From St. Louis.

Attendance at the dedication of the new Meramec State Park at Sullivan Mo., Saturday promises to provide St. Louis families with a well-rounded day's outing.

First there is the motorcade. Those who drive are to gather at Kingshighway and Lindell boulevards at 8:30 o'clock in the morning. The line of automobiles will make the trip direct to the park on Highway No. 66 under supervision of Robert E. Lee, secretary of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association. Special traffic police will be stationed along the way, and for convenience of the motorists the Automobile Club will have a service car patroling the route.

Shortly after the arrival of the motorcade around 10 o'clock the day's program will start. Natives of Franklin County have selected the occasion for their homecoming, under sponsorship of their civic organizations. After this visitors will be entertained by an exhibition of Boy Scout activities, and by aquatic events by members of the Meramec River patrol of the St. Louis chapter of the Red Cross, with Pat Byrnes in charge.

From 12:30 to 1:30 o'clock attention will be directed to basket dinners—with at least one of which each family is to supply itself. The new park contains many places suitable for picnic plots.

Speeches by public officials will occupy the afternoon. Gov. Baker will make the main address.

The afternoon program will commence at 2:30 o'clock with a talk by Keith McCanse, State Fish and Game Commissioner, after which Walter B. Weisenburger, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, will introduce the other speakers. The list includes, besides Gov. Baker, United States Senator Harry B. Hawes, Mayor Miller, Eugene B. Ruth Jr., president of the St. Louis County Chamber of Commerce, and Lon Sanders.

Flag-raising exercises conducted by Troop 18 of the St. Louis Boy Scouts, assisted by the Scout Bugle Corps, will close the dedication ceremony.

The park dedication committee of the Chamber of Commerce, headed by R. Fullerton Place, has asked Ben Weidle, president of the School Board, to have teachers in all the public schools announce the dedication and to urge children to get their parents to take them.

An Account of the Use of Thedford's Black-Draught by Mr. and Mrs. John Jones, 321 W. Arkansas Ave., Durant, Okla.

Mr. Jones Says: "WHEN I lived in Illinois, as a very young man, I used to take Black-Draught. I believe I can safely say that I have taken it for 50 years, off and on. Black-Draught and quinine were then all the medicines I took. In all these years, I have used Black-Draught when I would get bilious. When I do get bilious, I have dizzy spells and my stomach gets all out of fix, and I just get sick all over. I found that, if I would begin taking Black-Draught in time, I could ward off these sick spells, and for years this is what I have done. I have kept my system cleansed with Black-Draught, just a few doses, now and then."

Mrs. Jones Says: "I HAVE been a user of Black-Draught for about 43 years, and find it just as good now as when I began its use. When I was young, I used to have severe headaches, and would have to go to bed. I found that by taking Black-Draught, I would soon get easy, and if I would take Black-Draught as soon as I began feeling bad, it would keep off the sick headaches. Now I take Black-Draught for a bad taste in my mouth, biliousness, and the dull, heavy feeling after meals. It surely does help this."

PHYSICAL TRAINING IN EUROPE THOROUGH

A. E. Kindervater Returns After Visit to Four Countries.

Widespread and organized interest in physical training and athletics in Europe was observed by Alvin E. Kindervater, superintendent of physical education in the public schools, who has just returned to St. Louis after a visit to England, Germany, Switzerland and Holland. With a group of physical educators, he saw the Olympic games in Amsterdam.

The spectacle of thousands of athletes performing on a large field was common in Germany and Switzerland, he said. In Switzerland he witnessed a competition in which 22,311 men and 811 teams were entered for the three-day events.

In English schools, he saw graded physical training very much like that in America.

"Most of the work," he related, "was made competitive between teams, with student leadership. The work was formal, except for a game at close of a lesson. What impressed us was the systematic arrangement of the lessons and the quick changes from one to another. The English educators strongly favor a methodical and thorough training for an all-around physical development of their pupils before admitting them to specialized activities for maximum achievement.

"The most impressive feature of the opening of the Olympic games was the taking of the Olympic oath by the athletes of 44 nations. This oath demands good sportsmanship, and in the exciting events that followed sportsmanship was put to a severe test. The participants met the test and the feeling of good will at the games was general."

Young Wife Eats Only Soup 5 Months

"I lived on soup 5 months because of stomach trouble. I tried Adlerika and now I can eat most anything." —Mrs. A. J. Connor.

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, saline, etc., (known as Adlerika), has a most surprising DOUBLE action. First, it acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel (most medicines act on lower bowel only) and removes foul matter that often poisoned the system for months. Second, Adlerika clears all GAS and sourness from stomach and bowels, bringing INSTANT relief from stomach trouble. And in addition, Adlerika removes metabolic poisons which cause neuritis, rheumatism, etc.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, writes: "Adlerika, in addition to its intestinal cleansing, checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and bacilli."

Dr. J. Weaver: "In my 50 years' practice, I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."

J. E. Puckett: "After using Adlerika, I feel better than for 20 years. Awful impurities were eliminated."

It will astonish you the great amounts of poisonous matter Adlerika brings out—matter you would never believe was in your system. In chronic constipation, gas bloating, sour stomach and sick headache, just ONE spoonful Adlerika brings wonderful relief. At leading druggists. Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Stores and other druggists.

Veiled Prophet's Ball Will Be Held At Coliseum, Oct. 3

ELABORATE preparations are in progress to welcome His Majesty, the Veiled Prophet, upon the fiftieth, the golden anniversary of his advent to St. Louis. The Veiled Prophet's ball, which will formally open the fall social season, will be held Wednesday evening, Oct. 3, at the Coliseum.

In October, 1878, His Mysterious Majesty first honored St. Louis by his presence, and since then has paid his annual visit with the exception of two years, when the celebration was dispensed with during the world war. The young woman upon whose brow the crown of Love and Beauty will be placed this year will be the thirty-third in the royal line, the first Veiled Prophet Queen having been crowned in 1894.

The commands summoning the four special maids to the Veiled Prophet Queen and the maids of honor to the Court of the Veiled Prophet have not been issued, but it is a safe conjecture that they will include this season's debutantes. While the list of debutantes for the coming season is not as long as that of last season, it will include many attractive young women for whom interesting and not unpretentious parties are being arranged. The ball, which will take place the evening following the parade, will open at a fairly early hour.

The bridesmaids were Miss Pamela Cunningham of Litchfield, Conn.; Miss Martha Green of Mexico, a sister of the bride, and Miss Miriam Arnold of Mexico. The bride's attendants wore dresses of taffeta and tulle, with long, tight bodices of orchid taffeta and bouffant skirts of tulle, shading from orchid to wood violet. Their hats, of orchid horsehair, were trimmed with velvet bands of violet and clusters of violets on brims. They carried arm bouquets of garden flowers in pastel shades.

Stalen, Washington, D. C.; J. Edward Carter, Fulton, and the bride's brothers, Allen P. Green Jr. and Robert S. Green, both of Mexico.

The Mexico church was decorated with large clusters of gladiolias in shades of pink and lavender, attached to the ends of the pews with bows of white ribbon, to form an aisle to the altar. The altar was banked with Madonna lilies and delphinium. About 450 guests attended the wedding.

Immediately after the ceremony a garden reception was held for 350 guests at the home of the bride's parents, in the suburbs of Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood depart immediately for New York and will sail on the Mauretania on Sept. 5, for an extended trip in Europe.

VEILED PROPHET HERE OCT. 2-3 FOR 50TH ANNIVERSARY

It Will Be Only His 49th Visit, However, as He Did Not Call in 1917 or 1918.

GOLDEN BALL TO MARK CELEBRATION

Will Be a Reproduction of "Fete d'or" Which Louis XIV of France Gave for Dauphin.

The fiftieth anniversary of the first coming of his mysterious majesty, the Veiled Prophet, to St. Louis, will be observed during the first week of October, with the time-honored street pageant on the evening of Tuesday, Oct. 2, and the Veiled Prophet's ball on the following evening, Oct. 3.

Although details of the celebration have not been completed, the committee announces that a special effort will be made to make the golden anniversary of the Prophet's coming a distinctive and colorful spectacle.

An exact reproduction of the famous "Fete d'or," or Golden Ball, which King Louis XIV of France gave in honor of the Dauphin, will characterize the ball, it is announced. Thousands of yards of cloth of gold have been ordered to be used in the decoration of the Coliseum, where the ball, as usual, will be held.

Although the first Veiled Prophet celebration was held in St. Louis in 1878, this year's will not be the fiftieth celebration, inasmuch as the ceremonies were canceled in the war years of 1917 and 1918. This year will actually see the forty-ninth visit of the Prophet.

On the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary, members of the committee have recalled that when the first parade was held, coal-oil torches were used to light the two-mile route, Eads Bridge was new, the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra was not organized, and there were, of course, no automobiles, no telephones and no skyscrapers. The only public conveyances were horse and mule drawn street cars and cabs, or hacks. The residence district extended to Sarah street, and Fourth street was the center of the retail shopping district.

The Veiled Prophe carnival was begun as a part of the St. Louis Fair. A newspaper account of the first parade mentioned the "fashionable residence section west of Jefferson avenue, between Market street and Cass avenue." The first Veiled Prophet ball was held in the Merchants' Exchange in 1878, and it was not until 1894 that the custom of choosing a Veiled Prophet Queen and a Court of Honor was perfected.

Golden Anniversary Ceremony for One Couple Will Be Witnessed by Another, Present at Original.

When Mr. and Mrs. Michael Huber of 5260 Gilmore avenue celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on the morning of Sept. 12 at Nativity Church, the ceremony will be witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Huber, who saw the original ceremony here 50 years ago, just three years after their own marriage. The two Hubers are brothers and their wives are sisters.

Eight children, f who three live outside St. Louis, will attend the ceremony with their families. Ten grandchildren will act as flower girls and pages and 10 as maids of honor and ushers. In the afternoon and evening the Hubers will hold a reception for friends and relatives at their home.

Michael Huber came here in 1874 from Oestringen, Germany. When his brother Jacob began to call on Stephanie Hoffman, whose family had lived near the Hubers in Oestringen, he renewed acquaintance with Bertha Hoffman, whom he had known in Germany as a little girl. In 1875 Jacob married Stephanie, and three years later Michael married Bertha.

Michael Huber, who is now 77, three years older than his wife, retired in 1920 from direction of a cigar manufacturing business which he established here 51 years ago.

W. T. HILL, ONCE WORTH MILLIONS, LEFT $127,513

WIDOW WILL GET ENTIRE PROPERTY

Amount Grain Plunger Left Not Sufficient to Cover Other Bequests in Will.

Unfortunate investments by William T. Hill, spectacular grain plunger, who died July 7, are shown in an inventory of his estate filed at Clayton yesterday.

The fortunes of "Billy" Hill, who was rumored to have made and lost millions, had fallen so sharply in the last several years that friends, at the time of his death, estimated his estate would not exceed $300,000. The inventory shows even greater shrinkage, placing a value of $127,513.65 on the estate, and listing stocks, bonds and notes of a face value of $401,534.37, but now considered as of doubtful value and probably worthless.

Assets of the estate are inventoried as follows: Cash, $42,000; notes, $15,460; membership in Merchants' Exchange, $3; stocks, $68,900, including $58,900 in stock of Hill's grain firm, the J. H. Teasdale Commission Co.

The "probably worthless" items include: Oil stocks, $12,500; lead, zinc and iron stocks, $75,000; stock of the McNiece-Hill Motor Co., a defunct automobile sales agency, $150,000; stock of the Add-Index Co., an office appliance concern, $37,850, not counting 920 shares of no par value; stock of the Kant-Break Spark Plug Co., $22,000; notes of defunct grain dealers and former members of the Merchants' Exchange, $66,864, ranging in amounts from $27,979 to $150.

In his will, filed last month, Hill made bequests totaling $450,000 to relatives and friends, including one of $240,000 to his widow. Apparently realinz the instability of the fortunes of a market plunger, he provided that his widow was to be paid first and the others were to be paid in the order in which they were named in the will. Inasmuch as the property is not sufficient to cover the bequests, Mrs. Hill will receive the entire estate.

ISLAND OF 2000 ACRES IN MISSOURI SOLD FOR $33,000

Bought by W. E. Thomas of Kansas City, Who Will Extend Farming Operations.

An island consisting of 2000 acres of land in the Missouri River, near Boonville, was sold last week by F. C. Brickey of St. Louis and Houston Harte of San Angelo, Tex., to W. E. Thomas of Kansas City. The purchase price was $33,000.

Brickey said Government-built dikes near the island have reduced the danger of inundation to a minimum and will ultimately result in the island being joined with the mainland. Six hundred acres of the island are under cultivation, principally in corn, which is expected to yield 70 bushels to the acre this year. Brickey and Harte purchased the island in 1919 and agreed to sell it to the State during Gov. Hyde's administration as a site for the Boonville reformatory, but the deal fell through. Thomas expects to move to Boonville and will extend the farming operations on the island.

Brickey is connected with the John Nickerson Investment Co.

They were married June 24, 1911, at Rock Island, Ill., and separated July 4, last, the petition states. The suit requests that the court allow Mrs. Boxerman an "adequate sum" for the maintenance of herself and the children, whose ages range from 6 to 16 years.

The Political Form Sheet—Five Border and Six Eastern Wet States the Great Battlegrounds

Smith Needs 152 Electoral Votes in Addition to Those of Normally Democratic South

With 12 States Counted Sure And Two More Likely, Hoover Would Lack 75 of a Majority

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.

THERE is no more fascinating game at this season than that of juggling the figures of the Electoral College table in an effort to forecast the result of the presidential election. Every politician is playing it. Every politician with a partisan slant in either direction can take the forecasts of the respective headquarters, apply them to the electoral votes of the several States and prove beyond the shadow of a doubt that his man will win.

Every citizen can play the same game for himself. All that he needs in order to play it to his satisfaction or to his complete bewilderment is a pencil, a sheet of paper, a copy of the electoral table and his own conception of the weight that should be attached to a number of factors as yet unweighable. The game is more than usually fascinating and intricate this year because there are so many of these imponderables; even after the election has been decided, it is not likely that any completely satisfactory assessment can be made of their importance in determining the result.

But the game is not interesting merely; it is profitable, too, if only because it enables the voter to keep a check on the claims of the campaign managers.

How to Check Up Claims of Partisans.

The intention in this article is not to prophesy, but only to set out certain rudimentary facts by which the hopes, claims and predictions of the managers may be tested. These facts, to be sure, fall a long way short of being a guide to correct guessing. They must always be read in the light of the new and incalculable elements in this campaign. They do furnish, however, a part of the raw material that must go into any intelligent prophecy.

There are 531 votes in the Electoral College. To be elected, a candidate must receive 266.

In 1924 there was a possibility that La Follette would receive a sufficient number of votes to keep either of the leading candidates from getting a majority, in which case the election would have been thrown into the House of Representatives. This possibility, which gave rise to a fear that a tie-up in the House would result circuitously in the elevation of Charles W. Bryan to the White House, undoubtedly swung some normally Democratic voters to the Republican ticket.

This year the choice is plainly between Herbert Hoover and Alfred E. Smith.

In 1924 Calvin Coolidge received 382 electoral votes, John W. Davis 136 and Senator La Follette the 13 from Wisconsin. Davis carried only the 10 states of the Solid South, plus Oklahoma and Tennessee. Coolidge received 15,725,016 popular votes, Davis 8,386,503, La Follette 4,822,856 and the other candidates 157,013

Coolidge's plurality over Davis was more than 7,000,000. He had an excess over Davis and La Follette combined of more than 2,000,000.

Republicans Normally Outnumber Democrats.

These figures show the Democratic party so greatly in the minority, with respect both to electoral and popular votes, that any observer with no other guide would have to conclude that Republican success again was inevitable. Nor would the correctness of this conclusion be open to question if the campaign this year were being waged along the traditional lines. Normally, there are more Republican votes than Democratic votes. The Democrats can hope to win only when there is a split in the Republican party, as in 1912, or under other extraordinary conditions, as in 1916.

Democratic hopes this year are based on the extraordinary conditions created by new issues, new personalities and new methods.

Specifically, they are based on the calculation that Gov. Smith on the wet-and-dry issue will carry normally Republican areas without receiving a fatal setback in normally Democratic areas; that he will cut into Republican strength in the farming sections; that his personality and record will appeal to more independent voters than will the personality and record of the Republican candidate.

The hopes of the Democratic managers derive nourishment, too, from the fact that the party this year, with some apparent success, has sought to install itself, jointly with the Republican, in the good graces of the large business interests, and from the further pregnant and related fact that the party this year will have a campaign fund approaching if not equaling the Republican fund.

Prohibition and Religion Factors in Campaign.

On the other side, we have the claim that Smith's wetness is a heavy liability; that the Middle Western farm states will line up as usual for the G. O. P.; that the personality of the Republican candidate is calculated to appeal to more voters than that of the Democratic candidate.

The Republicans, in other words, agree that the campaign is extraordinary, but contend that the unusual conditions are of a nature to make Republican success more certain.

In addition to the elements of uncertainty that have been outlined, there is also the question of what effect Gov. Smith's membership in the Catholic Church will have upon the voting. Herbert Hoover in his acceptance speech sounded a note of tolerance. No one can question his sincerity on that score. But neither can anyone doubt that opposition to Gov. Smith on account of his religion will be fanned by professional campaign workers to the fullest possible extent. The most casual observation will show that the men—and the women, too—who do the spade work in politics are deterred by no high-minded considerations, but use the methods that are the most likely to get results.

What Bigotry Can Amount to at Polls.

Assuming, for the sake of the argument, that religious bigotry—bigotry of a force sufficient to break down normal party allegiance—is as likely to be found in the individual Catholic as in the individual Protestant, the fact cannot be ignored, in any weighing of party prospects, that the religious issue works to the disadvantage of the Democratic candidate; this for the two reasons that there are more Protestants than Catholics, and that most of the Catholic voters are already Democrats.

The religious question will play a part in the election, but how large a part can only be guessed. In the case of some voters with whom it is the determining issue, it is concealed behind some other reason for making a choice. The effect of no other issue in the campaign is so incalculable.

According to the value which you attach to this and the other unknown quantities, you can argue, with a show of reason in either case, that Gov. Smith will sweep the country, or that he will be the worst beaten presidential candidate in history, or that the two contestants will battle down the stretch to a hair-line finish.

All Calculations Start With the Solid South.

All calculations of the strategists start with the Solid South—the 10 States that have always cast Democratic electoral votes. They are: Alabama, 10 votes; Arkansas, 9; Florida, 6; Georgia, 14; Louisiana, 10; Mississippi, 10; North Carolina, 9; Texas, 20, and Virginia, 12. Total, 114.

For the first time, the claim is seriously made by some of the Republican leaders that the Solid South will be broken. The revolt of Tom Love in Texas, the refusal of Senator Simmons to line up for the national ticket in North Carolina, the outspoken opposition of a section of the Protestant clergy — these things are pointed to as some of the concrete bits of evidence that Herbert Hoover will breach the Democratic stronghold.

Undoubtedly, he has a better chance to do so than any previous Republican candidate. He is aided in the South not only by the dry Protestant opposition to Smith, but by his own popularity in certain sections, due to his flood relief work, and by the rapid industrialization of various quarters, notably in North Carolina and Alabama. If it were not for the issue in the South that overshadows all others—the race issue—it is unquestionable that Hoover would get some portion of its electoral votes.

G. O. P. Hopeful of Winning North Carolina.

On the face of the 1924 election figures, Hoover's best chances to do this are in North Carolina, where the Republican vote was 39 per cent of the total; Florida and Virginia, in each of which it was 32 per cent; Arkansas, where it was 29 per cent, and Alabama, where it was 27 per cent. Texas, where the Republican vote was only 19 per cent of the total, is another State in which the more optimistic of the Hoover workers profess to see a chance of success.

In the view of most observers, based both upon the 1924 results and upon recent trends, the Southern States ripest for an overturn are North Carolina and Florida. If you wish to reflect the Republican view in your table of electoral votes, those are the States that it is safest, on the strength of present information, to switch from the Democratic column.

The better guess at this stage is that the South will again cast its full 114 votes for the Democratic nominee. The strength of the Democratic party tie is as strong in the rock-ribbed South as the strength of the Republican party tie in Pennsylvania. And this fact is always to be remembered in forecasting the result in any State: That the electoral votes go to the side that gets the majority, no matter how small that majority may be. Smith will get the electoral votes from Texas, whether he carries it by 300,000 or by 30.

Electoral, Not Popular Vote, Is One That Counts.

Presidential elections are decided not by the popular vote, but by the vote in the electoral college. It is possible for either candidate to get fewer popular ballots in the country at large than his opponent and yet win the election. This happened, for example, in 1888, when Cleveland, though receiving a popular plurality, was defeated by Harrison.

Assuming that Smith will hold the 114 votes of the Solid South, he will then need 152 more votes to be elected. Manifestly, he must gain these in territory that is normally Republican. His best chance to gain them is in the States that have shown the most pronounced signs of revolt against prohibition.

Smith was nominated at Houston because of the widespread belief among Democratic leaders, drys as well as wets, that he was the only man in the party with any chance of winning the election. There were other considerations, of course, but that was the deciding one. The Houston convention deliberately ran the risk of losses in the Southern and the border States in order that the party might have a chance to carry the wet Northeastern block of States.

Smith Must Win Part of Wet Northeast

From these facts it is easy to deduce what is—what must be—the "grand strategy" of the Smith campaign. It is a strategy devoted, of course, to capturing every doubtful state, and the Democrats this year, as I have already indicated, have the ammunition to carry the fight to the enemy on a wide front. But it will avail the party nothing to hold the Solid South, capture all the border states and make deep inroads on Republican strength in the West and Middle West if it cannot detach from the Republican column all or a large portion of the electoral votes of the Northeast.

This group of states comprises the following: New York, 45; Massachusetts, 18; New Jersey, 14; Connecticut, 7; Rhode Island, 5; Delaware, 3. Total electoral votes, 92.

The first and foremost object of the Smith strategy is to capture these six states. With them and the Solid South he will be within 60 votes of election. Any material subtraction from the total of 92, such as the loss of New York or the loss of Massachusetts and New Jersey, would seriously diminish his chances; the loss of all the 92 would almost certainly defeat him.

New York Essential to Democratic Success.

New York, then, is a crucial state. Wilson won the election in 1916 without it. Hardly anybody believes that Smith could do so. The prime argument in Smith's favor at Houston was that he had carried this normally Republican State four times for the governorship, and that he was the only Democrat who could be counted upon to carry it in a National election.

It can be set down as a reasonable certainty that if Smith loses his home State he will lose the election.

What are his chances of carrying it? The Democratic management says that he is sure to win; the Republican high command professes confidence that he will lose. The Republican theory is that many voters who have supported Smith for the governorship will not vote for him for the presidency. It is unquestionably true, as any observer can find out for himself in New York, that there is an appreciable number of voters in this class, but whether they represent the margin between defeat and victory can only be conjectured. On the other hand, there may be a pull of State pride that will counteract losses from other causes.

Many Things May Be Proved by the Figures.

You can take the New York figures and claims and prove anything you please. You can base your deduction on the fact that Smith in 1926, by virtue of his great personal popularity, carried the State over Ogden Mills by 247,000, or on the fact that in the last 11 presidential elections New York has gone Democratic but three times.

You can point to the fact, as Smith's Anti-Saloon League enemies are doing in pamphlets, that his successes would have been impossible without the huge Democratic majorities rolled up for him in New York City, or you can take as a guide the proved wetness of the State; it voted wet in the referendum of 1926 by 1,164,586 of which 316,834 came from upstate. That New York Republicans are afraid of the wet vote is indicated by the tortuous efforts of the New York Herald Tribune, leading Republican organ of the State, to read a wet meaning into Herbert Hoover's dry declaration.

New York City Alone Sent Smith to Albany.

The 1924 election figures show the dependence of Smith on the New York City vote. Outside the five counties which comprise New York City, Smith received 690,170 votes, against 1,100,577 for Roosevelt. Roosevelt, therefore, came down to the city with an upstate majority of 410,407. New York, responding as usual, ran up for Smith the thumping total of 936,941, against Roosevelt's 417,975. This city majority of 518,966 overcame Roosevelt's upstate lead and gave the Governor the State by a margin of 108,559. Smith ran 676,315 votes ahead of Davis. Of the 62 counties in the State, Smith carried only the five New York counties and Albany.

What the Record Shows in Other Wet States.

As for the other five States of the Northeastern wet group, whether you place them in the Democratic or the Republican column depends on whether you believe greater importance should be attached to their wetness or to their addiction to voting the Republican ticket in national elections. In the last 11 such elections Massachusetts has gone Democratic but once, New Jersey four times, Connecticut four times, Rhode Island once and Delaware four times. All of them may fairly be classiffed as wet states. With the exception of Connecticut, each of them has one Democratic United States Senator.

In Massachusetts, Smith will be aided by the presence on the ticket of the popular David I. Walsh, who is running for re-election to the Senate. Walsh, who is wet, was defeated in the presidential year of 1924, but was elected in 1926 to fill the unexpired term of Senator Lodge, by more than 55,000 majority. Against the factors favorable to Smith must be set down the strong traditional Republicanism of Massachusetts. The Democrats in 1924 polled but 24 per cent of the total vote.

New Jersey's Corkscrew Record on Presidency.

New Jersey, from the record, would seem to be a somewhat easier nut for Smith to crack than Massachusetts. It is supposed to be even wetter in sentiment than New York, and it went Democratic in the presidential elections of 1884, 1888, 1892 and 1912. Here again, however, there are indications calculated to temper Democratic optimism. The Democratic candidate in 1924 was able to poll but 27 per cent of the vote.

If Smith is to overturn the Republican majority, he must win large numbers of the Republican and independent voters. According to recent reports from progressive sources, independent voters have been inclined to support Smith on the strength of his progressive record, but now give evidence of wavering because of their dislike of Frank Hague, the Jersey City Mayor and boss, who is associated with the national management of the Smith campaign.

To recapitulate: If Smith holds the Solid South, and if the pulling power of his wet program is sufficient to break normal party ties in New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Delaware, he will have a total of 206 electoral votes. Where is he to get the other 60?

Border States With 61 Votes Also Necessary.

This brings us to another "crucial" section of the country—the so-called border States: Missouri, with 18 votes; Kentucky, 13; Maryland, 8; Tennessee, 12, and Oklahoma, 10. Total, 61.

Each of these, despite the decisive score in favor of the Democrats over a long span of years, is today fighting ground. Missouri has gone Democratic seven times in the last 11 elections—but it went Republican in the last two. Kentucky has wavered in its Democracy only twice—but one of those occasions was 1924. Maryland has gone Democratic seven times out of 11—but the Republicans carried it in 1920 and 1924. Tennessee left the Democratic fold for the first time in 1920 and returned in 1924. Oklahoma has voted in five presidential elections and has gone Republican once—in 1920.

The statistics of the last two presidential campaigns for each of these border States indicate the difficulty of the task which the Smith board of strategy has assigned to Senator Hawes of Missouri in charge of the regional headquarters at St. Louis. All of them fall within his territory except Maryland.

If the Smith people succeed, as they assert they will, in the East, the result in all probability will depend on the success or failure of Hawes and his organization in the border States.

How It Looks—and Then on the Other Hand.

What are Smith's prospects in this debatable territory? Each side, of course, is claiming all of it, and each can make out a persuasive case. No observer, however, if he values his reputation as a prophet, can afford to dogmatize about the result in any of the five States named.

The fight in Maryland at this stage looks extremely close. Maryland is a wet State—

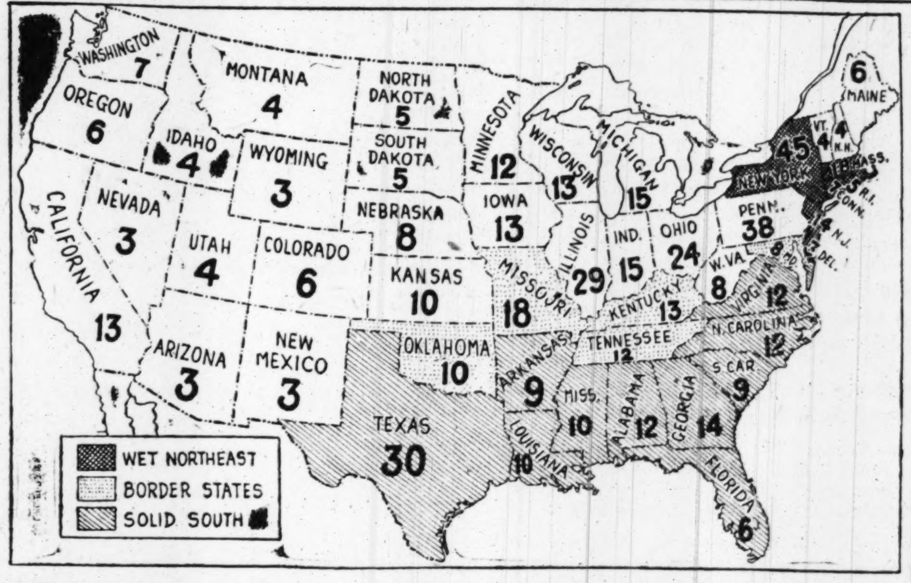
Zones of Action on Presidential Battlefield



THE Solid South—Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia—always has cast Democratic electoral votes. This year the Democrats are fighting for the Northeastern states, where wet sentiment is strong—New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Delaware. They regard as crucial also the so-called border states—Missouri, Kentucky, Maryland, Tennessee and Oklahoma. Electoral votes of each State are shown on the map in bold numerals.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

Another Layman's View.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A LETTER appearing in the Post-Dispatch on Aug. 26, signed "A Layman," states: "It is amusing to note that the most intemperate utterances prefacing the presidential campaign have issued from clerical quarters, save in few instances." As to what is or is not an "intemperate" utterance, it may be said that it is a matter of opinion. Any strong attack on one f the presidential candidates doubtless is regarded as "intemperate" by some of his supporters. A Layman speaks of the "caustic diatribes" made by Dr. Straton, Bishop Cannon and others of the cloth. Evidently A Layman, is a follower of Al Smith. I am also a layman, a Protestant layman, if you please, and I thank God that we have ministers like Dr. Straton, Bishop Cannon "and others of the cloth."

Attacks on evil do not constitute "throwing mud," and as far as that is concerned, did not the Democratic keynoter, Claude Bowers, throw a whole mud puddle? Do not the wearers of the cloth who have denounced prohibition indulge in "caustic diatribes" and intemperate language? Is the right to "throw mud" exclusively held by the followers of Al Smith? Are all attacks on Al Smith mere mud-slinging, while attacks on Herbert Hoover are "constructive criticism"? I ask these questions in all fairness. I am tired of seeing Protestant ministers subjected to abuse merely because they have the courage of their convictions. As a Protestant layman, I take off my hat to Dr. Straton, Bishop Cannon, "and others of the cloth" who are doing their duty as true members of their churches and as patriotic American citizens. PROTESTANT LAYMAN.

Why Baker's Prophecy Will Fail.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

GOVERNOR BAKER in an address to a Kansas audience declared that Missouri is not a doubtful state, and predicted that it will be safely in the Republican column and that it will give its electoral vote to Hoover in November.

One of the many reasons why the Governor's prophecy will fail of fulfillment and why Missouri will go Democratic this year is the Baker pin head administration. M. J. Mc.

A Beloved Public Officer.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE holy people are after Gov. Smith. Then heaven help him. The bigoted religionists are always the worst. They burned a few people in our own free land. They are the worst because they are so sure they know just what God wants and where and how.

As to the kind of Governor Smith has been, leave it to the great State of New York to make answer. What was their answer? Why, four times with huge majorities they returned their beloved Governor to office.

Do they know in New York what they are about? They do know. Gov. Smith stands nearer to the hearts of the people than any political leader has ever stood in New York or any other state. The Governor is fondly called "Al Smith." Let "Al" be the battle cry and like "Teddy" of old, let us sweep him into the White House.
MRS. JOHN BEVERLEY ROBINSON.

Public Ownership.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE letter of William Powers in regard to public ownership strikes a sympathetic chord in my own mind, also the many fine editorials that appear continually and which should have the support and backing of all public-spirited citizens.

As for an organization promoting public ownership, the only one of which I know has held weekly meetings for some time at the public library branches, on Friday evenings.

I wish to take this opportunity to thank the Post-Dispatch for its able support of the rights of the public and its trenchant criticism of abuses, the publishing of information that is so helpful to an understanding of conditions, and its unremitting pursuit of those who permit such abuses and are betraying the public. L. W. EVANS.

Drinking Has Become More Popular.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I WAS interested in what Gov. Smith said about prohibition. I, for one, as a good citizen and not in any way connected with politics, have observed the evil brought on by prohibition. It has made crime and sorrow for many in our city. I never believed in prohibition, but was strong for regulation. I many times expressed my view, why should everyone suffer for a disease of some? Today drinking has become more popular than when we had saloons. May the Governor succeed in the noble work he is trying to accomplish on Nov. 4, 1928. Independent in politics, nationality and religion, may the Creator of heaven and earth guide the path for the good of our country, is my toast and good wish.
MRS. MARY DAWLEY.

MR. RASKOB'S CLAIMS.

Mr. Raskob seems to have quickly become proficient in one department of campaign politics—the department of claims. He claims 347 electoral votes for Gov. Smith and predicts that the Smith-Robinson team will poll the largest popular vote ever cast for any ticket in a presidential election. This forecast will be received, we imagine, with scornful incredulity here and with pop-eyed, but hopeful, wonder there, according to party affiliation. The preponderant judgment doubtless will be that the prophecy can only be fulfilled by a political revolution.

What is the basis of that judgment? Obviously the results of the last two national elections. The tidal majority of 7,000,000 with which Mr. Harding was swept into office and the illusion which persists as tenaciously as fact that Mr. Coolidge was elected in 1924 by an equally magnificent and decisive preference.

Like so many other things about Mr. Coolidge the popular notion of his overwhelming indorsement at the polls is a myth. The unemotional figures show that Mr. Coolidge received 15,725,016 votes; Mr. Davis, 8,386,503; Mr. La Follette, 4,822,856. The Davis-La Follette vote combined totaled 13,209,359, leaving Mr. Coolidge a majority of 2,515,957.

That this was an ample margin goes without saying. That it gives the Republican party a tremendous initial advantage is, of course, patent. But that it guarantees Republican victory and foredooms the Democrats to defeat is not an admissible prémise. The country's political status is such that, given anything like active dissatisfaction with the administration, supplemented by a well equipped, capably directed opposition with a colorful, forceful leader, the outcome is debatable. That the Democratic party does present essentially such an aggressive front in the present encounter, and that the Republican party has a long and difficult line to defend in the corn belt's unrest cannot be gainsaid. And the deep urban revolt against the intolerable conditions with which prohibition harasses the cities is a factor that must be taken into account in intelligent reckoning.

"You are the eighth wonder of the world" was the congratulatory telegram the late George Brennan of Chicago sent to Gov. Smith on the latter's election in 1924 when Mr. Coolidge polled 1,820,000 votes in New York. How Gov. Smith will fare in the national field we have no idea. What we do know is that Mr. Coolidge was not the irresistible candidate which legend has portrayed, and disregarding the Raskob claims the signs and the omens indicate that Mr. Hoover will indeed be engaged in the battle of the century in November.

UPWARD AND ONWARD.

Senator Moses, who is Eastern director of Mr. Hoover's campaign, ridicules Chairman Raskob's prediction that Gov. Smith will get 309 electoral votes, saying:

"I understand that in merchandising automobiles dealers are given a certain quota to sell. Apparently Mr. Raskob is applying the same principle to electoral votes."

Well, maybe Mr. Raskob is. But we wonder if the Senator has ever looked at General Motors' sales report?

A NEW SENATOR FROM TEXAS.

It is an excellent wind that blows Earle B. Mayfield out of the United States Senate and blows Tom Connally in. That is the meaning of the "run-off primary" there, in which Connally won the Democratic nomination by a large majority.

Mayfield is an excellent specimen of the poorest type of Southern politician. Elected with the support of the klan, he has remained a senatorial nonentity, without force or influence. In six years he never rose above the estate of an obscure back bencher. Connally, on the other hand, has been a force in the House of Representatives throughout his 12 years of service. He vigorously opposed the inequitable schedules of the Mellon tax plan, and during the last session he frequently denounced the administration's barbarous treatment of Nicaragua.

During the primary, and afterward, Connally pledged his support to Gov. Smith, and thus again is demonstrated the fact that Republican claims of gains in Texas are not to be taken very seriously. The nomination of Connally is a victory of ability, tolerance and progressivism over prejudice, reaction and outworn political tactics. The liberals of the Senate will welcome him to their ranks.

Thinking of what Senator Fess had said, we often wonder how the country manages to get along so well while The Strong Guiding Hand is clamped to a fishing rod in the depths of Brule Forest.

SAVING THE GRIZZLY.

Will C. Barnes, assistant United States forester, summing up a census which has just been taken of game in the United States, finds the grizzly bear nearer extermination than the buffalo has ever been. He thinks drastic steps will have to be taken to save it from extinction.

It would be a pity if the grizzly became extinct. While it is true that dfificulty attends its preservation, the effort would be worth while. Both Col. Roosevelt and the late Enos Mills, who knew the grizzly well, considered it the most interesting wild animal on the American continent. Col. Roosevelt thought it the king of beasts, and doubted if a lion could survive a battle with a grizzly. He had hunted both. This is also the opinion of Capt. Ricardo, a life-long animal trainer. He has never been able to make a grizzly ride a bicycle or smoke a pipe.

Mills wrote a book about the grizzly, one of the most interesting books ever written of wild animals anywhere. He attributed to the grizzly great intelligence and no little humor. Mills raised a young grizzly at his Estes Park resort. When it grew up and its play became dangerously rough, he gave it to the zoo at Denver. It is there now. In the early days out West the grizzly was often taken as a cub and domesticated. Mills tried to collect all the authentic instances of the sort. In one case a man named Adams, a hunter in California, was saved by a domesticated grizzly in a fight with one of its kind which the hunter had shot. The tame bear, though not fully grown, drove the wild bear off when the hunter had been knocked down.

Mr. Barnes says the great brown bear of Kadiak Island is also fast disappearing. Great numbers of them have been killed within the last few years by American big game hunters. The Government contemplates more stringent regulations upon the shooting. The great brown bear is a variation of the grizzly, which is the brown bear described in the Lewis and Clark journal. The explorers feared this great creature, and so does man fear it today. However, there are wild parts of the western mountains where the grizzly can, with protection, hold out. This is particularly true in Montana, where 440 grizzlies, or one-half of all those in the United States, were reported by the game wardens through whom the census was made.

A DISCORDANT NOTE.

When Secretary Kellogg and Premier Mackenzie King of Canada landed at Havre on their way to Paris to sign the peace treaty, Secretary Kellogg made a pleasantry. It was to the effect that the United States and Canada are so friendly and such happy neighbors that the treaty would be a mere formality for them. Premier King smiled assent, the band played "God Save the King" and everything was hunky-dory.

It is with some pain that we inject a discordant note into this charming idyll. Our text is an editorial in the Vancouver Sun, entitled "A United States-Canada Tariff War Looms." The tone of this editorial is bitter, and not at all in harmony with the scene at Havre. In it are such expressions as this:

> If Canada is to have trade with the United States, that trade must be upon a reciprocal basis. If the United States is to continue waging a tariff war against Canada, that issue must be reciprocated by Canada.

The Sun points out that in 1927 Canada bought $836,000,000 worth of goods in the United States, while we spent only $475,000,000 in Canada. That trade balance is rendered distinctly more unfavorable against Canada because the goods we buy are largely raw materials, while the bulk of Canada's trade is in manufactured articles. To keep out Canadian goods we have erected a towering tariff wall, over which our neighbor to the north cannot possibly climb.

In the opinion of the Sun, Mr. Hoover's acceptance speech "throws out a world challenge that cannot be overlooked by Canada" when it says:

> An adequate tariff is the foundation of farm relief, and I would use my office and my influence to give the United States farmer the full benefit of our historic tariff policy.

To Canada that means the continuance of the Fordney-McCumber tariff structure, and a trade balance by which 120,000,000 Americans consume about one-half as much Canadian goods as 10,000,000 Canadians do American goods. That is poor business for Canada and, in the long run, it is poor business for us. As the Sun points out, Canada must sell where she buys and, if she cannot sell in the United States, she may have to look elsewhere for her purchases.

Multilateral treaties are fine things, but business is business.

CLOTHES AND THE WOMAN.

Paul Poiret, who ought to know, thinks women's styles are divesting them of the charm and mystery which have been theirs.

"I think women are losing their own game of charming men," says the famous Paris costumer, who agrees with what the Pope has said of women's clothing today, though for the different reason that he gives.

Whether one believes this or not, it is unquestionably true that women's clothes are related to one of the subtlest qualities of life. However, where one observer believes that the scantiness of women's attire has anything to do with our relaxing morals and the consequent loosing of the marriage tie there are 10 who think that the automobile and the high cost of home-making are to blame.

"They need more and longer clothes," M. Poiret adds. To which it seems pertinent to retort: Very well, make them some and give them the sanction of your prestige.

RABBI HARRISON.

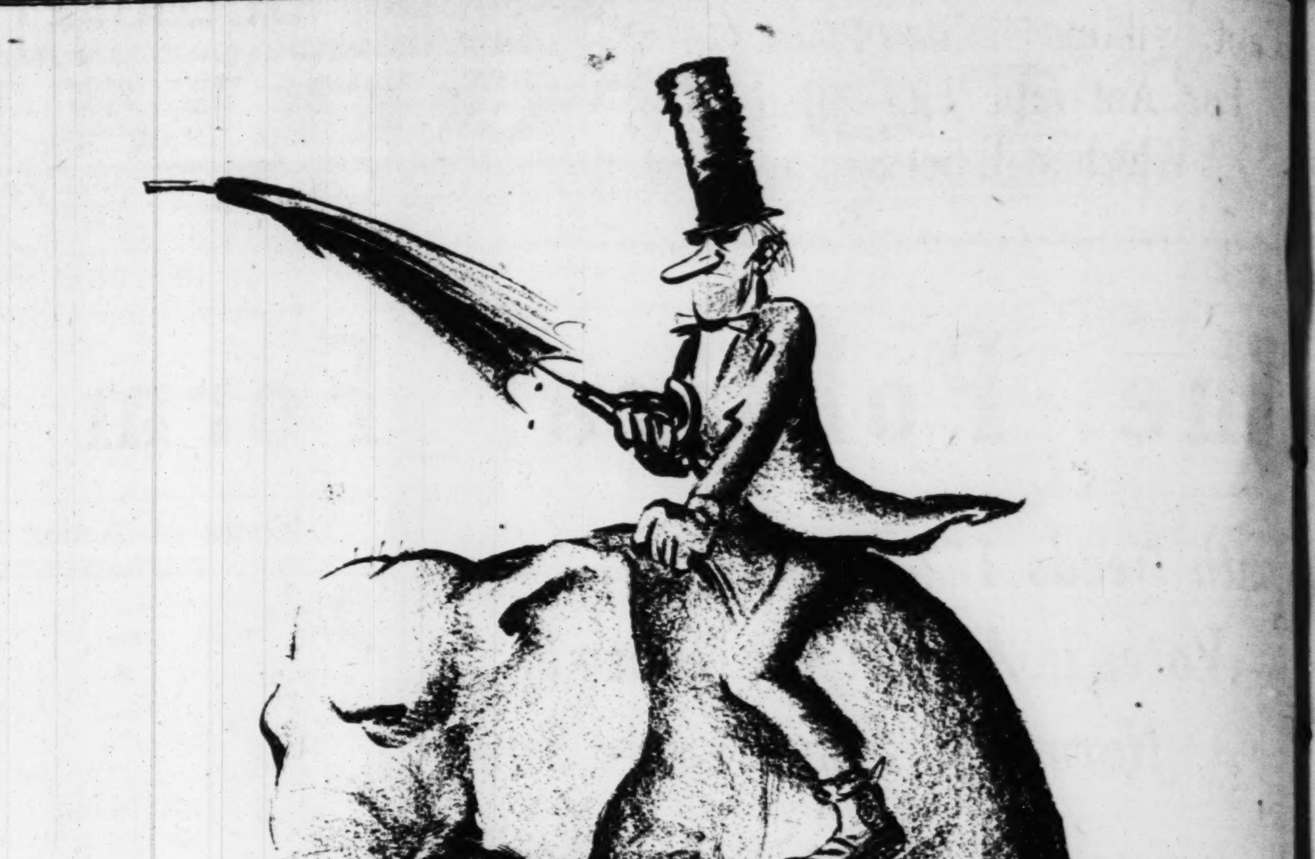
The violent death of Rabbi Leon Harrison is a shocking event, compact with all the elements of unmitigated tragedy. It is sad enough that a distinguished career should prematurely end, and that a great moral and cultural influence should be lost to the community; but there is something singularly and piercingly incongruous in the spectacle of a philosopher dying under the wheels of a subway train.

The exceptional talents of Leon Harrison won recognition when he was yet a student. During the 37 years of his ministry in St. Louis, under the urge of a powerful intellectual curiosity, they multiplied and expanded tremendously. The brilliant student became a great teacher. The indefatigable searcher for knowledge developed into a profound and original thinker, the influence of whose thought was vastly widened by his gifts as an orator. Not content merely to lead his own flock, he outgrew all the normal confines of his pastorate and became firmly established as one of the presiding minds of the community.

That he was aware of the distinction, and eager to meet the responsibilities which it imposed on him, was eloquently manifested in the character of his Sunday morning discourses. On Friday evenings and Saturday mornings he was Rabbi Harrison of Temple Israel, conducting the services of his creed and ministering to his congregation. But Sunday mornings found him free of all limitations of creed or race—he was Dr. Leon Harrison of St. Louis, orator, savant and humanitarian. He reviewed literature and social and economic movements, discussed ethics in the light of modern life, and gave his opinions concerning public affairs and contemporary events. Eloquent, witty and profound, his lectures attracted persons of all creeds and of none, for they were as universal in their scope as was his far-ranging intellect.

It was natural that such a vibrant and many-sided personality would take a part in the social life of the community commensurate with his part in its cultural life. For all his profundity, Rabbi Harrison could be the life of any party, and frequently he was. An English-born Jew, he was thoroughly at home in the German atmosphere of St. Louis, and had an acquaintance with its French strain possessed only by a few. Whether enlivening the wedding guests of his own congregation, lunching with Protestant and Catholic friends in a French restaurant, or bicycling along the byways of France and Germany, he was equally at home.

Any attempt to mitigate the degree of loss occasioned by his death would be perfectly idle. Such men never are replaced. He was not merely the epitome of the very best in Jewish culture; he was an ornament to the city and to mankind. This entire community is better, wiser and more tolerant because he lived in it. To that extent he lives on.



THE UNHAPPY WARRIOR

A Dangerous Journalistic Tendency

There are in the United States 1000 cities which have only one newspaper, or where the dailies are under one management; in most cases these newspapers are Republican or independents with Republican leanings, and readers largely hear only one side of the case; if the hope of democracy lies in full education and free discussion, this tendency must be corrected.

From the New York World.

IN five years, according to the Editor and Publisher, the number of American cities with only one daily newspaper has increased 17 per cent. In 1923 there were 782 such cities; today there are 915. The number of cities with two or more dailies has simultaneously decreased by one-fifth and is now only 418. But even these figures do not reveal the whole situation. Of the 418 cities with two or more dailies, in 87 these dailies have one ownership and management. There are therefore roughly 1000 American cities with what may be called a "monopoly" press and roughly one-third as many with genuine newspaper competition. And this extinction of newspapers and creation of journalistic monopolies is a process which shows no abatement. In the last 18 months nearly 70 American dailies have ceased publication.

Regrettable n many counts, this process is particularly deplorable in that it tends to suppress political debate and the full presentation of party issues. A generation ago nearly every considerable city had its Democratic and Republican organ. They clashed as vigorously as Dickens' Eatanswill Gazette and Eatanswill Messenger. The largest cities had four, six or eight newspapers, nearly all with decisive political convictions; and no school of thought lacked its expression. But today real discussion is being submerged. In so great a city as Chicago the citizen who dislikes Hearst journalism now has but one satisfactory morning paper to buy; once he chose among the Tribune, Record-Herald and Inter-Ocean, but now he has the Tribune alone. In San Francisco the situation is the same. In Minneapolis there is but one morning newspaper. The broad group of cities of 100,000 to 150,000 circulation—such cities as Sacramento, South Bend, Peoria, Wilmington and Springfield, Mass.—are, as a rule, cities of one morning newspaper. A great and growing section of our population has no choice but to take a newspaper that is either colorlessly neutral or wholly one-sided.

In a Presidential-campaign year this growing one-sidedness looms up as an alarming fact. Particularly is it a painful and pressing fact to those responsible in 1928 for presenting Gov. Smith's side of public questions. For obvious causes, the process of consolidation has tended throughout the North to increase the Republicanism of the press. Where the surviving papers are not frankly Republican they are likely to be independent with Republican leanings. For one reason, their chief constituency is usually Republican. For another, a newspaper has become a large-scale business enterprise, and business has leaned toward Republicanism. Certainly any one who surveys the area from Pennsylvania to the Pacific Coast must be struck by the paucity of avowed Democratic organs. The one-sidedness in the South is equally great and equally unfortunate, but there it is an old historic fact. In the North it is a new fact. Moreover, it means that a great political minority, such as has no real existence in the South, is without a voice. In State after State we see the new tendencies in journalism stripping this minority of the forum it had in Cleveland's time.

How much real political discussion, for example, is possible in California? In that great State there are fewer than 10 Democratic dailies, whose combined circulation hardly reaches 25,000; but there are more than 70 Republican dailies. In the five largest cities, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, San Diego and Sacramento, the Democrats have not a single regular organ. It may be said that California is an exceptional instance. If so, take Ohio, where the ordinary Democratic minority sometimes becomes a majority. We find in that State 52 Republican newspapers and 22 Democratic. In Cincinnati, Toledo, Columbus, Akron and Springfield there is no regular Democratic newspaper. Yet Cincinnati alone has three Republican newspapers, the Times-Star, Commercial-Tribune and Enquirer. In one after another of the smaller cities the news-stands offer only a Republican daily. In Iowa the disproportion is worse. Newspaper lists give 20 regular Republican dailies and just one regular Democratic sheet, with two independent Democratic papers. In Illinois the Chicago Tribune fairly blankets the down-State region. But it is supported by a solid phalanx of Republican dailies in small cities: for Alton, Aurora, Cairo, Galena, Galesburg, Kankakee, Moline, Elgin and Evanston have not a single Democratic daily. In Indianapolis there are one morning newspaper (independent Republican) and two evening papers (independent Republican and independent).

This is a situation which cannot please Americans of either party who believe that the chief hope of democracy lies in full education and free discussion. It justifies a plea to newspapers which happen to be Republican that in their news, at least, they give the opposition justice, without coloring, bias or unfair limitation. It justifies still more a demand that all so-called independent journals, which so often represent a merger of several party dailies, shall realize their responsibility and shall as far as possible give their bi-partisan constituencies all the facts and all the arguments.

MR. HOOVER AND VOLSTEADISM.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

IN an attempt to fathom Mr. Hoover's attitude on modification of the Volstead Act a subject which he failed to clarify in his address of acceptance, some newspapers have dug up a letter of Mr. Hoover written to a United States Senator in 1918 when the candidate was Food Administrator. In 1918 Mr. Hoover was an ardent believer in temperance and felt that it was "mighty difficult to get drunk on 2.75 per cent beer." Does Mr. Hoover still feel that way? Or does he think that 2.75 beer would be "modification of the enforcement laws which would permit that which the Constitution forbids"? Nobody knows for Mr. Hoover does not say.

Capt. Wilkins Outlines Plans For Antarctic Expedition Which Will Set Sail Sept. 22

It Will Operate From South Shetlands, With Deception Island as Main Base—Eielson to Pilot One of Two Planes.

FOLLOWING is the first of a series of articles by Capt. Wilkins on his approaching Antarctic expedition.

By CAPT. SIR GEORGE HUBERT WILKINS,
Commander of Wilkins Antarctic Expedition.
(Copyright, 1928.)

AWAY down at the bottom of the world, shrouded with desolate ice barriers and guarded by grim, foreboding mountain ranges, lies the greatest stretch of the unknown area on this globe.

For centuries man, with indomitable courage and primitive means, has sought to penetrate the great, silent wastes of Antrctica—the region of the South Pole. Mankind's adventure in those ice-locked vasts was glorious, but Nature's fastness remained practically untouched.

Today, with man-made wings science has opened new lanes for the explorer. The airplane has moved his horizons outward and upward, has given him another dimension, more speed and undreamed of opportunities to know the spinning globe he inhabits.

It is with this new means at its command that the Wilkins Antarctic expedition is leaving this fall to do its share of the great task still remaining to be done—exploration of the great Antarctic.

Purpose of Expedition.

I have been asked to write a brief outline of the plans, problems and the reasons for this expedition, and what modern, scientific exploration of that huge white continent will mean to civilization.

National prosperity depends on business, and much business depends on correspondence. Friendship of nations depends on intercourse and much friendly intercourse depends on leisure time. We can, by speeding up our mails and transportation, quicken the business of the entire world, and speedy intercommunication will cement the friendship of nations more securely than anything else.

When we realize that the work of the modern Polar explorer is, among other things, in the interest of that goal, then there need be no further explanation of the efforts made in the frigid and unusual conditions.

To Sail Sept. 2.

Our expedition will be compact and mobile. We plan to leave New York Sept. 22, sail down to Montevideo, South America, and there make connections with the Norwegian whaling fleet that is to carry us to the outpost of civilization, the South Shetland Islands.

Briefly, the plans of the expedition are these: We will arrive at Deception Island, our main base, in our winter time, which is spring in the Antarctic. I am taking along two Lockheed monoplanes. Plane No. 1 is the trusted veteran of my Arctic flight of this year. It will be fitted with skiis, wheels and pontoons. The other plane will be, with few minor exceptions, a duplicate of the first.

Lieut. Carl Ben Eielson, that great polar pilot, who so successfully brought our Vega monoplane through the Arctic storm, across the top of the world to Spitzbergen, will be chief pilot. The pilot for the other plane will be selected before we sail for South America.

Along with the planes will go the necessary equipment. Gasoline, scientific instruments, food supplies—all these will be assembled and taken to Deception Island with us.

With everything in readiness, we will proceed to survey and lay out our first depot somewhere in Graham Land and approximately 500 or 600 miles south of Deception Island. The north pole plane (No. 1) already is equipped with large gasoline tanks. This is the plane I will use to make the final "jump" across the uncharted territory of the Antarctic, to seek, if possible, some answer to the great scientific problem of the south pole.

Air Trucking Supplies.

We will use plane No. 2 to carry gasoline and supplies to this base. In all probability two flights will be made between Deception Island and the depot. While the primary purpose of these flights will be air trucking of the supplies, we will take this opportuinty of thoroughly surveying Graham Land.

Plane No 1 and Plane No. 2 probably will be equipped with pontoons in these preliminary flights, although conditions encountered in the South may change our plans.

When the final jump is made, skis will be used for the take-off and landing. I plan to fly to Ross Sea, on the Pacific side, where three of the Norwegian whalers will be awaiting me with gasoline and supplies.

In the meantime, the plane remaining at the depot will stand by until word is flashed by radio that we have landed safely on the other side.

With adequate preparation, experience sensibly accumulated, and the perfected machinery available today, there is no need, except through unfortunate accidents, for the modern explorer to suffer the untold trials and tribulations suffered by explorers of years ago.

Ice Aids the Flyers.

The treacherous ice floes in snow-bound Arctic deserts, which for years handicapped the vessels and men seeking the northwest passage, forcing the early explorers to suffer exhaustion, starvation and death, can now by means of aerial transportation be avoided. Even the solid pack ice, once the greatest hindrance to Arctic exploration, is a friendly haven for those who venture over it at high speeds and altitude on man-made wings of wood or metal.

The very ice we feared now makes the Arctic Ocean the safest ocean in the world over which to fly. In no other ocean could we make three forced landings, as we made last year with an airplane, and on no other ocean could we have walked 125 miles to the shore in safety. In no other ocean could a dirigible crash as Nobile's did and have part of its crew remain without outside help for 40 days and then be rescued.

The world will soon realize that trans-Arctic flying is much more safe than flying over established air lanes, which shortly will be crowded with airplane commuters.

One by one the bugbears of the Arctic are disappearing. The frightful cold, it was believed at one time, would paralyze any airplane motor, but this cold can be easily avoided, as shown by the tact that in Norway, Sweden, Russia and Alaska pilots for several years have been flying planes with both air-cooled and water-ccoled engines, in temperatures ranging down to 54 degrees below zero.

Navigation More Accurate.

Successful and accurate navigation was another bugbear that confronted explorers in polar regions, but Commander Byrd's spectacular flight from Spitzbergen to the North Pole and back, Amundsen and Nobile's spectacular flight from Spitzbergen to Alaska, our flight between the North Pole and the Magnetic Pole (where the compass declination was 180 degrees and the compass correction necessary 315 degrees, and Nobile's successful navigation of the flights before his expedition ended in disaster, should be sufficient proof that the navigation of aircraft over Arctc regions is practicable.

Throughout the whole world there is a feature in connection with aviation that always will e present. In the minds of every aviator starting out on a long journey, there is today, and always will be, the question: How is the weather?

If for no other reason than for the development of trans-Arctic air routes, we must know the weather conditions in the polar areas. This question is not a purely academic one. Explorers, navigators and pilots increasingly lean to the belief that air travel in the future from America to Europe and Asia may be routed via North Pole.

Improved Forecasting Sought.

Scientific meterologists have come to know that polar weather is the forerunner of weather conditions at many other parts of the world, and they believe that after a sufficiently long period of observation at the polar regions, it will be possible to chart a comprehensive weather system.

Since the action of the atmosphere probably conforms to fixed physical principles, as do the actions of more solid substances, it is likely, if we know the nature of the influence upon it, to forecast the result as definitely as a chemist now forecasts the result of mixing gases.

"Before we can commence an intensive study of polar meteorological forces, we must first select the points at which these investigations are to be carried out, and today there are still immense unknown areas in the Antarctic, as well as vast unknown areas in the Arctic, upon which it will be necessary to establish observation points. No other explanation need be given for our efforts to explore the polar regions than those of geographical importance.

Commander Byrd plans an extensive and intensive study of one quadrant of the Antarctic continent. Meteorological plans call for knowledge of the long, undiscovered coast line of the Southern Pacific Ocean.

Plans Coast Line Survey.

It is the purpose of the Wilkins Antarctic expedition to survey this coast line and at the same time collect other information of geographical importance.

Although it is obvious to anyone who looks at the globe on an atlas showing the polar regions, it is not generally known that the Arctic and Antarctic are of an entirely different character.

The North Pole is surrounded by a "Mediteranean" sea. This Arctic sea, except for a blanket of ice averaging not more than 20 feet thick, remains at a temperature above the freezing point of water. Because of this, the average summer temperature in the Arctic is high and temperatures as high as 90 degrees Fahrenheit are recorded.

The Antarctic Continent, rising as it does to a plateau about 10,-290 feet high at the pole, and covered with ice averaging perhaps 2000 feet thick, is the greatest refrigerator in the world, and the temperatures in this vicinity, even during the height of summer, are rarely above freezing point.

In the Arctic during summer, the land is generally free from snow and more than 500 species of flowering plants are found. Only two flowering plants have been seen on the Antarctic Continent and these are found only on its most northern areas.

Many species of moths, butterflies, bumblebees and mosquitoes abound in the Arctic, while only a few mites and spiders and other insects which live in the feathers of birds, are found in the Antarctic.

Wind 200 Miles an Hour.

The meterological conditions of the Arctic are also quite different from those experienced in the Antarctic. Sir Douglas Mawson at Adelie Land in the Australian quadrant of the antarctic, experienced an average velocity during the whole month of September of 53 miles an hour, and at times registered a wind of 200 miles an hour.

The most important questions exercising the minds of geographers today are:

Is there a large Antarctic continent as large as the whole of the United States, as has long been supposed, or is this continent divided by ocean currents flowing beneath the solid sea of ice? In other words, is the Antarctic land mass divides by ocean streams connecting the Ross Sea wit hthe Weddell Sea, leaving Graham Land an archiipelago of islands?

This question, technical at first glance, may hold in its answer a key to weather forecasts years in advance.

The observations taken by scientists on Shackleton's endurance expedition, which drifted after the ship was wrecked, throughout the length of the Weddell Sea, indicated that their drift was influenced by a current running beneath the ice mass south of Graham Land.

To Trace Mountain Ranges.

Does the huge mountain system, which includes the Rockies and the Andes, and the great dividing range of Australia, continue across the Antarctic continent and so form a continuous mountain circuit about the Pacific Ocean?

Another question, the answer to which may supply the missing chapter in the complete history of the world's formation and its past. The observations taken by Scott, Shackleton, Nawson and Amundsen show that the great mountain fringe of the 10,000-foot plateau on which the South Pole is situated, extends from the north end of the Ross Sea to within 600 miles of the pole, and then swings to the southeast. Does it connect with the high mountain peaks on Graham Land?

The mountains on the Ross Sea side of the Antarctic rise to a height of 5000 feet. The high peaks on Graham Land reach 8000 feet above the sea. It would be reasonable to suppose that these two mountain ranges join in a sweeping circle on the Antarctic continent.

But geological observations show that on Graham Land the mountain ranges are formed of volcanic lava and igneous rock, crumpled and tilted; while on the Ross Sea side the mountains are formed of sedimentary rocks, such as sandstone and shale, between which are immense seams of coal and fossilized vegetation.

Geologists say that when these large masses of coal were laid down there was little ice on what is now the South Pole. It was, as a matter of fact, a continent covered with dense vegetation, with trees and shrubs, such as are now found in highly fertile, temperate latitudes. Who can measure or foresee the economic importance of such immense coal deposits to the future of the race?

Geological evidence shows that there have been several periods when the Antarctic continent was free from ice and observations taken of actual glaciers within the last decade show that the ice covering the great white south is again receding.

If scientific study of nature's thermostatic laboratories, the polar caps of this busy little world of ours, can give us even an inkling of the meaning of these glacier migrations, will not all the efforts, expense and sacrifices in its search be well repaid?

Best scientific calculations indicate that the ice blanket on the polar continent was at one time almost 1000 feet thicker than it is today, even though it now is approximately 2000 feet thick.

These, then, are some of the problems involved and part of the plans for the expedition.

2000 PERSONS SIT DAILY AT FEET OF KRISHNAMURTI

In Canvas City in Holland, They Listen to the "Truth" From Self-Styled Messiah.

By the Associated Press.

OMMEN, Holland, Sept. 1.—Hidden away among the pinewoods of the Castle Eerde estate, only a few miles distant from the site of the Olympic games at Amsterdam, there lies a little city of tents whose 2000 inhabitants sit daily at the feet of a man who calls himself another Christ.

For weeks they have been searching among the written and spoken words of Krishnamurti for the "Truth." Thirty-seven nations, including the United States, are represented among the delegates here.

This little canvas city is built around the picturesque Castle Eerde, home of Krishnamurti, which dates from the beginning of the eighteenth century.

Twice a day these members of the Order of the Star in the East gather round Krishnamurti to listen to his teaching. The young high-caste Brahmin tells them the "Truth" can only be attained by liberating the self from the fetters of dogma and external authority, and can only be found in one's own heart.

The Political Form Sheet

the one State in the Union which has consistently refused to adopt a State prohibition enforcement code. It has given the popular Ritchie, one of the country's leading wets, an unprecedented tenure of office as Governor. Ritchie is wholeheartedly for Smith. These considerations would seem to place the State in the Smith column.

On the other hand (how often we must resort to that saving phrase!) there is the fact that both Harding and Coolidge carried the State. It is also to be noted that drys will be brought to the polls to vote for Goldsborough, a former Governor, who is running for the Senate against the wet Bruce. Goldsborough is highly popular, while Bruce has raised up a crop of enemies during his term in the Senate. As to Maryland, write your own ticket.

When Summer Waxes and When Autumn Wanes.

The same general conclusion must be reached with respect to Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee and Oklahoma. The result in all of them looks like a toss-up, with Smith at present having the edge in Missouri and Tennessee, Hoover in Oklahoma and not enough information available to justify any sort of forecast as to Kentucky.

Here the qualification must be made that the surface indications of August need to be discounted in any doubtful State. It will be remembered, for example, that in August of 1924 Davis looked to most detached observers like a sure winner in Missouri, but Coolidge carried the State. This year, Oklahoma for the moment, by reason of its klan and dry sentiment and the flop-over of several big Democratic newspapers, looks all set to go for Hoover, as it did in 1920 for Harding, but the Smith organization leaders are saying that November will tell a different story.

Standing out from the welter of speculation, of claims and counterclaims, is the indisputable fact that this group of border states, with its total of 61 electoral votes, is vitally important. Both sides so regard it. In none of these states can the respective managers be blamed if they exhort their followers with the assertion that on the local result will depend the national.

Democratic War Chest Nearly Equals Republican.

In estimating the chances of the two candidates on the border, account must be taken of the fact that the Democrats this year will be able, or nearly so, to match dollar for dollar of expenditure with their opponents. That is a strange circumstance in our national politics, and conceivably it will determine the outcome.

Money counts in politics. It counts most when spread through the precincts on election day to get out the vote. Other things being equal, the side that puts the most money into a precinct carries it. This is not to say that bribery is resorted to; direct vote-buying has largely gone out of fashion. But money can be used within the law for the employment of watchers, messengers, runners — call them what you will—and the side that hires the most of them in a close precinct will hold the balance of power. It is estimated $50 to $100, placed among 10 well-chosen workers with large family connections, will produce 100 votes. Everybody who read about the "golden" Pennsylvania Republican primary of 1926 will remember the eye-witness stories of the pay-off of the opposing armies of Vare and Pepper "watchers."

Back in 1896, it looked up to election day as if Bryan had won. Then the money that Mark Hanna had collected began to make itself felt in the precincts. Democratic dollars were a thin trickle compared with the stream that the Republicans let loose. It is doubtful if McKinley would have won that year if the Democrats had controlled an approximately equal war chest.

In the close States on the border, the possession of ample campaign funds by the Democrats may turn the scales in their favor.

Guesses on Governor's Chances in Wisconsin.

Smith, as we have seen, will receive the decision by 267 electoral votes to 264 if he holds the Solid South and carries the six wet Northeastern states and the five border states.

How can he repair losses that may be sustained in any of these quarters? Again we are in a realm of pure speculation. Running down the list of states in which, on the face of present indications, he has a chance, we find—

Wisconsin, 13 electoral votes. The Smith threat in this State, the sole State carried by La Follette in 1924, appears to be real. There is a great deal of wet sentiment in Wisconsin. It is saturated, moreover, with La Follette Progressivism, to which the attitude of the New York Governor toward the water-power question makes an appeal. In his campaign for the senatorship, Young Bob La Follette is taking no sides between the presidential candidates, but the tenor of his campaign is favorable to the creation of Smith sentiment. I should say that of all the States outside of the territory which has been covered, Wisconsin is the one most likely to go for Smith.

Hopes in Minnesota.

Minnesota, 12 votes. The hopes of the Smith people that Minnesota will break away from Republicanism are running high. Progressive sentiment in the State is strong, as shown by the La Follette vote of 1924 and the presence in the Senate of the Farmer-Labor member, Shipstead. Running for re-election, Shipstead, like La Follette, is neutral as to the national Democratic and Republican tickets, but, again like La Follette, he makes "good medicine" for Smith with his speeches.

The farm relief issue is supposed to be helping Smith in Minnesota and one of his liabilities may have been decreased by his expressed willingness to be guided by engineers' reports on the respective merits of the St. Lawrence and the "all-American" shipway from the Great Lakes to the sea. Northwestern farmers had been looking askance at Smith because of his previous advocacy of the "all-American" route, which they strongly oppose.

Battle for Illinois.

Illinois, 29 votes. It doesn't seem likely, from the record, that Smith can break into this bulwark of Republicanism. His supporters, however, are claiming the State, on the theory that his wetness will bring over thousands of votes. Chicago is supposed to be for him by a huge majority, though his chances there may have been hurt by the recent death of the Democratic leader, George Brennan. If Smith can carry Illinois, he can afford to lose, for example, Massachusetts and Oklahoma. The State will be the scene of a tremendous effort by the Democratic forces, and they must be conceded a fighting chance to win.

Illinois in the last presidential election gave Coolidge 1,453,321, Davis 576,975, La Follette 432,027—a plurality for Coolidge over the Democratic nominee of 876,346. The Democratic hope of an upset this year rests on the showing made by George Brennan, running for the Senate on a dripping wet platform, in 1926. Frank L. Smith, the Republican candidate, with the indorsement of the Antisaloon League, polled 842,273 votes, Brennan 774,943, and Magill, on an independent ticket, 156,245. Later a seat in the Senate was denied Smith because of the source and size of the campaign fund used in his behalf in the primary election.

Raskob Claims Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania, 38 votes. Pennsylvania is being mentioned here and there as a possibility for the Smith column. Chairman Raskob has predicted that he will carry it. Such an outcome is conceivable on the theory that the wet Vare may not exert himself for the Hoover-Curtis ticket in Philadelphia, but it is not more than conceivable. Democratic hopes are based in part on the great showing which the Democratic candidate for the Senate, Wilson, with the support of Senator Norris, made against Vare in 1926, and in part on the strong wet sentiment in the State. In 1924, Coolidge received about 1,-400,000 votes in Pennsylvania, against 400,000 for Davis and 300,-000 for La Follette.

As to the Western States in which Smith has a chance, one guess at this stage is as good as another. This group comprises: Arizona, 3 votes; Colorado, 6; Montana, 4; Nevada, 3; New Mexico, 3; Wyoming, 3; Idaho, 4; Utah, 4. Some recent observers have reported that Smith has the edge in Arizona, Nevada and Montana; that Hoover probably will carry Idaho and Utah, and that the rest of them are a toss-up.

Eleven Small States.

The Dakotas, with 5 electoral votes each, are counted in some lists as doubtful, though Smith's chances in North Dakota apparently have been diminished recently by the pro-Hoover declarations of the two progressive Republican Senators of that State, Frazier and Nye.

Hopes of winning Nebraska's eight votes have been inspired among the Democrats by the progressive stand of the two Senators of that State, Norris and Howell, and by the fact that Charles W. Bryan, who is running for the governorship, is out for Smith.

But the 11 Western and Middle Western States that have been here named are weak reeds for the Smith people to lean upon. Hoover is certain to carry some if not the majority of them. The total of their electoral votes is 48. New York is almost a complete offset for all of them.

By a Process of Elimination.

Now to approach the problem from the other angle:

Eliminate all the States that have heretofore in this survey been named as favorable to Smith or in any measure doubtful and we have the following list in which the probabilites favor Hoover: California, 13 votes; Indiana, 15; Iowa, 13; Kansas, 10; Maine, 6; Michigan, 15; New Hampshire, 4; Ohio, 24 Oregon, 5; Vermont, 4; Washington, 7; West Virginia, 8. Total, 124.

If it is objected that Iowa should be placed in the doubtful list, the answer is that the Iowa Republican, though he may talk revolt, is as likely to vote for the Republican ticket as the Georgia Democrat for the Democratic. Having in mind the farm "insurrection" of 1924, a good many observers gave the State to La Follette. The result, in round numbers, showed Coolidge with 537,000 votes, Davis with 162,600 and La Follette with 272,000. It is a significant fact, too, that Brookhart, the wild man, is back in the regular Republican fold with both feet, shouting for the man who has promised to aid the farmer with "several hundred millions of dollars without obligation upon the individual farmer"—a scheme which differs only in degree from that proposed by Brookhart himself and denounced by Republican leaders at the time as a direct subsidy.

How Either Might Win.

Now if to the total of 124 virtually certain Hoover votes we add the 29 from Illinois and the 38 from Pennsylvania, we reach a grand total of 191, which is 75 short of the number needed for election. Hoover could then be elected by carrying, for example, New York 45, Missouri 18 and Tennessee 12.

These conclusions are inevitable:

That from the record the outlook favors Hoover, but that the election, because of the many uncertain elements injected into it by new issues, new methods and new personalities, cannot be foreclosed in his favor. Smith has a fighting chance.

That the two main fighting sectors are the Northeastern wet block, where Smith, in order to win, must overturn normal Republican majorities, and the border States.

That the issue on which Smith will win or lose is the prohibition issue, with the farm issue but a negligible factor.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

9 ST. LOUIS SCOUT CHIEFS TO CONFERENCE

Depart for Ithaca, N. Y., for National Training Session, Sept. 5 to 12.

One of the largest delegations that will attend the fifth National Training Conference for Boy Scout Executives, to be held at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 5 to 12, will be that of the St. Louis Council. Nine men, headed by Earl W. Beckman, local scout executive, will leave St. Louis today in automobiles to drive to Ithaca. The executives will be gone about two weeks.

The training conference, the first to be held since 1926, when the scout leaders met at Hot Springs, Ark., is the largest national activity of the Boy Scout organization, being in the nature of a national convention of the 600 local councils in the country. It is expected that more than 1000 delegates will attend.

St. Louisans also will have a place on the program, as Beckman will deliver an address on "Caravan Camping," a subject on which he has more information than any other leader in the United States. The "Caravan Camp," or camp on wheels, is a St. Louis contribution to scouting activities, as it was this council which originated the practice of taking Boy Scouts on bus tours throughout the country. Seventy local scouts just recently returned from a tour to Yellowstone Park.

Assistant Scout Executive Jack Wright will also take part as an official, as he will be the adviser and expert in charge of the department of horsemanship during the recreationa lperiod. He also is on the Morale Committee for Region 8, in which St. Louis is located. Wright is one of the recognized horsemanship experts of the national organization.

Spanish Society to Give Playlet.

La Sociedad Espanola of St. Louis, will present a playlet, "El Debut," at SS. Mary and Joseph hall, Minnesota and Kansas street, Saturday night. Under the direction of Senor Placido Martinez, the members of the cast are rehearsing each evening at Carondelet Library. The society last spring gave a dramatic sketch entitled "La Marcha de Cadiz."

600 BOY SCOUTS ATTEND EXCURSION TO ALTON

Outing on Steamer Devoted to Sightseeing, Contests and Prize Games.

More than 600 St. Louis Boy Scouts, accompanied by parents and friends, attended the first Boy Scout steamboat excursion given by the local council, on the St. Paul a week ago yesterday afternoon. The upriver trip to Alton was devoted to sightseeing, while the return was given over to contests and prize games.

A pamphlet, describing the various historic and scenic spot passed by the excursion, had been prepared by Scoutmaster George Newcomb of Troop Overland 1, and was distributed to everyone on the boat. The pamphlet pointed out the cliffs dedicated to the Piasa bird, Bloody Island, on which duels used to take place; the new Lewis and Clark bridges and other points of interest.

About 30 games and contests, with boxes of candy for prizes, were held, under the supervision of Scoutmaster Louis A. Lange and Field Executive S. C. Reaves. Judging by the noise, the bugling contest was the greatest success. The judges were 12 scoutmasters and troop committeemen.

It is planned to hold another excursion next year.

Scout Activities

North District.

The scouts of Troop 3, of the Grace Holy Cross Church, visited Troop 206, of the Ames School, at the last meeting. Inter-troop games were played, and a double program was put on. After the meeting the troops united in saying the Scoutmasters' Benediction. Some of the scouts of Troop 3 accompanied differendt organizations of the church on an outing to the Chain of Rocks last Wednesday.

Scout Edward Knollman has appointed reported of Troop 206, of the Ames School. The drum and bugle corps of the troop gave a demonstration at the meeting last Tuesday evening. Troop 3 visited 206 during the meeting, and Scoutmaster Simons of the former troop spoke on the rapid advancement of Troop 206.

West District.

There will be no meeting of Troop 101 of the West Park Baptist Church, tomorrow evening, it was announced at the meeting of the troop last Monday. The Advisory Council of the troop met at the last meeting and discussed plans for a new achievement contest.

South District.

Tropp 57, of the American Legion Post No. 3, drove to Springfield, Ill., last Saturday and Sunday to visit the State Fair. Camp was made overnight at the tourist camp, each scout preparing his own meals. Besides the fair, the scouts visited the State Capitol, Lincoln's home, and Lincoln's tomb, under the guidance of M. Johnson of Springfield.

Suburban District.

Twelve members of Kirkwood 2 took a canoe trip on the Meramec last Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, starting from Meramec Highlands in six canoes. Camp was made on the Lincoln Beach, near Castlewood, shelters being erected to sleep in. A lean-to, covered and bedded with willow branches, built by Scouts Franklin Shands, Evans Crosby and George Hawkins, was awarded the prize for being the best shelter. The sand of the beach offered an excellent place to study bird tracks, 11 kinds being identified.

Most of Wednesday was spent in swimming, life-saving and canoe-handling practice, with Senior Patrol Leader George Irwin and Associate Scout Carl Irwin acting as instructors. Color ceremonies were held each morning and evening. Those attending were Senior Patrol Leader George Irwin, Patrol Leaders Bill Kiel and Jack Rose, Associate Scouts Carl Irwin, Shorty Hamilton and Hugh Hamilton; Scouts Evans Crosby, Jack d'Arcy, George Hawkins, Ted Piersall, Franklin Shands and Charles Schweitzer;' Troop Committeeman John d'Arcy and Scoutmaster W. L. Clarke.

Fourteen scouts of Kirkwood No. 3 spent 14 days at a campsite near House Springs, for the troop's summer encampment. The troop was under the charge of Eagle Scout Stewart Matthews during the camp, while all the cooking was done by Scout Arthur Williams. The scouts and their equipment were taken to camp by the Troop Committee.

The troop attended a council fire held on the estate of Edward L. Bakewell a week ago Friday evening. The three Bakewell boys were initiated into the troop and a vote of thanks was given their father for the invitation to visit the estate. Louis Des Jardines, chairman of the Troop Committee, spoke on advancement; marshmallows were roasted and games were played.

Troop Overland 1, of Overland School, has received a letter from Troop Committeeman E. B. Seidel, who is touring Alaska with President Head of the Boy Scouts of America, telling of the troops they have visited in that territory. Committeeman Seidel is following the old gold prospectors' trail along the Yukon River at present.

HOTEL PROPOSED FOR DELMAR TO FACE VIADUCT

Contemplated Project Calls for 15-Story Building to Cost Approximately $2,500,000.

LEE & RUSH WILL HEAD SYNDICATE

Work Started on Wabash Station; Other Structures Planned for That Neighborhood.

By Berry Moore.

A hotel project was disclosed yesterday by Lee & Rush, architects, for the southwest corner of Delmar boulevard and the proposed new Des Peres avenue that will be a distinguishing feature of that part of the city. A 15-story fireproof structure on a comprehensive scale is contemplated, with a frontage on Delmar boulevard of 200 feet and on Des Peres avenue of 116 feet. Cost is estimated at $2,500,000.

The exterior of the proposed hotel structure will mark a transition from the early English to the Gothic style, with the first two stories in rough granite and the upper in gray brick. The site is directly opposite the Delmar station of the Wabash Railway at the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Hodiamont avenue, which is to be replaced by a new structure.

The hotel will be connected with the new station by two subways, one for passengers and one for freight. The structure will be virtually on the crest of the recently completed viaduct over the Wabash tracks.

700 Rooms With Baths.

There will be 700 rooms, each with bath, mirrored doors, and Murphy in-a-dor beds. While cooking will not be permitted, in the guest rooms, each room or suite will be available as an apartment in connection with a cafeteria to be installed in the basement. An open court will afford light and ventilation to all the rooms.

The lobby will be on a sumptuous scale with its main entrance at the southwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Des Peres avenue. There will be six shops on Delmar boulevard, accessible from the hotel.

The main dining room, overlooked by a balcony, will form a part of the first floor. A paved terrace, a replica of one in Paris, will be an attractive al fresco feature on the Des Peres avenue side of the building. Private dining rooms will be located on the second floor.

The basement will include a large cafeteria, grill room, barber shop and bowling alley. Each floor will have a dumb-waiter service operated in connection with the cafeteria, for the convenience of guests electing to be served in their own rooms. There will be seven elevators, including passenger and freight. A large storage space is also to be set aside. No garage space is provided for in the plans. An enclosed roof garden, available in both summer and winter, may be included in the plans.

Work Waits on Boulevard.

Construction of the building is to be started as soon as work is begun on Des Peres avenue, as provided for under the bond issue. The avenue, which will enclose the River des Peres, will follow the river's course from Delmar to Lindell boulevard. Meantime, Rush will go abroad for ideas for the new hotel enterprise.

Lee & Rush will head the building syndicate, which will have at its command ample resources for executing the project on the proposed scale, it was stated.

Work, preparatory to the construction of the new Wabash station, has already been begun, with the contract awarded to the Dwight P. Robinson Co. of New York. The station is scheduled for completion within six months.

The structure will front on Delmar boulevard and extend entirely over the railway tracks. Entrance to the station for all passengers will be on the viaduct level, both on Delmar boulevard and Hodiamont avenue. Delmar cars pass directly in front of the station, over the viaduct, and extensive parking facilities will be provided, both on Delmar boulevard and Hodiamont avenue.

To Harmonize With Viaduct.

The building was planned and designed so that it would harmonize with the Delmar viaduct. Separate corridors for arriving and departing trains will lead from the main waiting room to train sheds on the track level. The train sheds will be 800 feet long and will be of structural steel of the modern cantilever type. The platforms will be of concrete. Baggage rooms and heating plant are on the track level. An elevator is provided from the viaduct level to the tracks.

Widening of Delmar boulevard from Skinker road to Hamilton avenue was recently completed—Coincidentally with the new viaduct, with renewed interest aroused in thisthoroughfare.

The southwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Hodiamont avenue, 173x160 feet, has been the object of many attractive offers, ostensibly from promoters with ambitious building plans. The site, which is vacant, was purchased a year ago by R. A. and G. P. Bullock, through Proetz & Schnell and Barngrove & Specht, as a speculative investment. William Keane of the real estate firm of Keane & Franke, has received many attractive offers recently for the southeast corner of Delmar and Hodiamont avenue which he purchased several years ago when prices at this intersection were at comparatively low levels. Keane, who is now in Europe, has declined these offers, with the announcement that he is not yet ready to sell it. Both corners are essentially sites for large improvements.

A number of building projects have been disclosed for prominent sites on this section of Delmar which is attaining the status of a boulevard from Grand boulevard to University City.

Sam Hamburg Jr. and associates recently acquired a 99-year lease of the northeast corner of Delmar boulevard and De Baliviere avenue for a large building, with stores on the first floor and apartments above. There also have been not a few speculative purchases on this stretch of Delmar, in anticipation of developments.

Smith Bros., builders and real estate operators, have declined a profit of $100 a foot for 50 feet of vacant ground on the north side of Delmar boulevard, just east of Skinker, which they purchased two weeks ago for a reported price of $500 a foot, through the Oreon E. & R. G. Scott Real Estate Co. The ground was formerly owned by the Muckermann Investment Co., which purchased it a decade or more ago for around $60 a foot, according to realty circles.

The making and paving of Skinker road, north of Delmar boulevard, has reawakened business development in this part of the city. Keen interest is reported for sites on Skinker, north of Delmar.

21 LOTS TAKEN FIRST WEEK IN NEW LARIMORE ACRES

Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co. announces the development of Larimore Acres, a subdivision townsite on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad at Larimore Station. Twenty-one lots were sold the first week. Numerous industrial plants are in and around this district. The Lewis and Clark bridges and the Mitchell bridge across the Mississippi at the Chain of Rocks are nearby. The St. Louis Rose Co., and one or two other large floral companies also have plants in this vicinity.

KIRKWOOD MAYOR TO BUILD HOME IN WESTCHESTER

Mayor Jacobsmeyer of Kirkwood has completed arrangements for the erection of a new home in Westchester on the Manchester road, just west of the Geyer road. It will be a duplicate of the model home, completely furnished, on exhibition in this addition.

James McCoy, Inc., is handling the addition, which is within the corporate limits of Kirkwood.

INTERNATIONAL LIFE CO. ROOMS OPEN FOR LEASE

Forty Thousand Square Feet on Five Floors of Building Available.

There will be approximately 40,000 square feet of floor space available in the International Life Building with the exit of the International Life Insurance Co. The company occupies practically all of the thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth floors, and its lease has four and one-half years to run. The Missouri State Life Insurance Co., which took over the International Life, has assumed the lease.

There are a number of lessees in prospect, one for 25,000 square feet and another 21,000 square feet, according to J. K. Gregg, manager of the building, which is owned by Henri Chouteau

TWO APARTMENTS IN NORTH ST. LOUIS NEAR COMPLETION

The Dubinsky Realty Co. is completing two modern apartment buildings in North St. Louis. One is a 36-family apartment building adjoining the Fairground Hotel and park at northeast corner of Spring and Palm. It is built of reinformed concrete fire-proof construction throughout. It contains suites of four rooms, each suite consisting of a large living room, bedroom, kitchenette, dinette and dressing closet. The equipment will include electric refrigeration and porcelain ice boxes, gas stoves, in-a-dor beds and curtain rods. Janitor service will be provided. The building was designed by Ben Shapiro, architect.

There is also under construction at the northeast corner of Kingshighway and Rosaile a building similar in style, containing 16 apartments. Jacob Rubin & Sons are the contractors for both of these buildings.

CENTRAL STATES INSURANCE CO. TO MOVE TO 3663 LINDELL

The Central States Life Insurance Co., will remove this week to its ne whome at 3663 Lindell boulevard. This building was the old St. Louis Club Building, the interior of which was badly damaged by fire three years ago. The reconstruction of the building was started about a year ago. The new fire-proof structure was started at the basement and there are now four floors of reinforced concrete. The exterior of the building has been restored to the original design, which was used in 1889 when the building was first erected.

The only recreational feature of the old St. Louis Club to be retained is the bowling alley below the terrace on the east side of the building. All other floors have been devoted to modern office space. The executive officers are quartered on the second floor. The architectural work on this building has been handled by the T. P. FRANKLIN AVENUE LOOP HEARING TO BE SET ON TUESDAY

City and Street Car Company File Answers to Commission Men's Injunction.

Answers were filed in Circuit Court yesterday by the city and the St. Louis Public Service Co. in a suit begun Thursday by the Commission Row Protective Association and property owners in the commission house district attacking the validity of an ordinance which permits the street car company to build a loop on Third street, Fourth street and Franklin avenue. Both answers seek immediate dissolution of a temporary restraining order issued in the case, contending that the ordinance was passed as a public necessity.

The ordinance authorizes the use for the loop of a triangular tract at the intersections mentioned. This tract was part of the property condemned in the Franklin avenue widening improvement and it is contended by the commission merchants that the space was intended to be used as a focal point for convenience of vehicle traffic, property owners in the district having been assessed for the supposed benefit. They charge that the city's permit to the Public Service Co. to use the space for a car loop is in violation of the terms of the condemnation proceedings by which the property was taken, and ask that the ordinance be declared void.

City Denies Merchants' Claims.

The city, in its answer filed by Assistant City Counselors Oliver Senti and Jules R. Field, denies these allegations, and sets forth that the ordinance was legally enacted and is valid. It is further stated by the city that the commission men's petition does not contain facts sufficient to entitle them to the relief sought.

Attorney Edward P. Walsh and O. P. Owen, for the street car company, filed an answer showing that the company accepted the terms of the ordinance, which was approved July 23, and proceeded to construct double street car tracks along Franklin avenue from High street to Third street, with the loop included, as provided by the ordinance. The company says it purchased a large amount of materials for the improvement and the work of laying the tracks was well under way when the restraining order was granted which stopped all work on the tracks. The company declares the loop is part of the plans involved in the improvement of Franklin avenue and meets with the approval of the City Plan Commission for the purpose of relieving congestion in the downtown business district and providing a more direct route from the northwest and western sections of the city. Any delay in completion of the work will result in heavy loss to the street car company as well as to property owners, business concerns on Franklin avenue and the citizens at large, the answer sets forth.

Hearing Date to Be Set Tuesday.

While the restraining order was issued by Judge Hamilton, the case will be heard by Judge Falkenhainer, who is the "vacation Judge" for September at the courthouse. At a preliminary hearing yesterday counsel for the street car company demanded an immediate hearing of the injunction on its merits, saying that much harm would be caused by postponement. Daniel Bartlett, attorney for the plaintiffs, demanded a delay until he could get all his evidence ready. He denied that the injunction was harmful to business interests. Glendy B. Arnold, attorney for Franklin avenue merchants, told the court that the torn-up condition of the street was having a bad effect on business.

Judge Falkenhainer announced he would make a personal observation of conditions and told the parties to the suit to return Tuesday, when he would set the case. He remarked that the controversy was too important to be decided in a hurry.

MARQUETTE HOTEL, RECENTLY SOLD, TO BE REMODELED

Additional Shops and New Rooms and Baths Included in Plans of Thompson Corporation.

Plans are under way for remodeling the 10-story Marquette Hotel, at the southeast corner of Washington avenue and Eighteenth street, which was purchased last week by the George T. Thompson Hotel Corporation for $1,300,000, through J. I. Epstein & Son.

The improvements will include extensive alterations to the first floor and additional shops, which will mean an increase in the rental returns. New rooms and baths also are contemplated, together with new decorations and furnishings. The exterior of the building is also to be gone over.

The building, which is of fireproof construction, contains approximately 400 rooms, most of which have baths. It has a frontage of 116 feet on Washington by a depth of 115 feet on Eighteenth street, extending through to St. Charles street.

The structure was erected about 20 years ago by a syndicate headed by Fletcher R. Harris, president of the Fletcher R. Harris Realty Co. Artistic in design, and the loftiest building at that point on Washington avenue, it has been an attractive feature of that part of the city. Soon after its completion the Fletcher R. Harris syndicate sold the building and site to T. H. Glancy, who operated the hotel building until he sold the property to Sam Levitt.

Glancy is building a 10-story commercial building at the southwest corner of Washington avenue and Eighteenth street, embracing approximately a quarter of a block, which will be a handsome addition to this intersection.

The month closed in realty circles with negotiations under way for a number of high-class holdings in the business center. The northeast corner of Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, owned by the Lindsay estate, a client of the Franciscus Realty Co., is attracting noteworthy attention. This site, it is reported, is coveted by a large wholesale concern having big building plans.

Negotiations have been renewed, it is understood, for the southeast corner of Eighteenth and Olive streets. This site, according to realty circles, is wanted for a new bank. It has also been exciting hotel promoters. With a frontage of 127 feet on Olive and 69 feet on Eighteenth street, it is available for a building of large proportions. It is owned by a syndicate headed by Frank Rice, who recently purchased it through the Hemmelman-Spackler Real Estate Co. The lot, which is vacant, is ready for immediate improvements.

Dealers Back From Vacations.

Fred G. Zeibig of Cornet and Zeibig has returned from a tour of Europe. Eugene J. Altheimer of the Eugene J. Altheimer, Williams & Calmer, Inc., from Canadian resorts. Ben Altheimer of Ben Altheimer & Bro. from a trip through the East. Albert G. Blanke of the Albert G. Blanke Real Estate Co. from Europe, Jerry Healey, president of the Hiemenz Realty Co., from Michigan, and Frank Dubinsky of the Dubinsky Realty Co. from a sojourn at Atlantic City.

All sounded a note of optimism as to the fall outlook in the real estate field, especially in the business sections of the city. The advent of the fall season, it is believed, will be the signal for renewed activity in these centers.

LEASE CLOSED FOR CAFE AT SIXTH AND WASHINGTON

The Martin & Breitt Real Estate Co. has leased the entire second floor at the northeast corner of Sixth street and Washington avenue to the Joy Young Restaurant Co. for a term of 20 years at an average rental of $15,000 a year. This company will spend about $40,000 to equip this floor as a Chinese and American restaurant, with a dance floor and cabaret. The lease was negotiated for Neisner Bros., who have leased the entire building.

J. J. REARDON, EXPERT ON VALUES, IN NEW QUARTERS

John J. Reardon, with quarters at 911 Chestnut street for 20 years, has taken ground floor space at 111 North Tenth street, in the Bell Telephone Building. He entered the real estate field as a clerk for the late Robert Noonan, whom he virtually succeeded in the business. He is regarded as an authority on real estate values throughout the city. His son, John J. Reardon Jr., is associated with him.

$2,934,996 IN BUILDING PERMITS ISSUED IN AUGUST

Building permits issued by the city for the month of August amounted to $2,934,996 for 953 projects, compared with $5,933,463 for 1129 structures in the corresponding month a year ago.

In July of this year, permits aggregated $6,781,731.

INTERIOR WORK IN FOX THEATER RUSHED

Opening Early in December Planned — Tall Marble Columns in Place.

Plaster partitions and Hindu models in the new Fox Theater at Grand and Washington boulevards are now being set in an effort to have the new picture theater ready for an early December opening. The marble columns, which will extend around the entire lower floor and which will rise six stories in height, are already in set places on the floor and are expected to be completed within a month.

The central dome, rich in Hindu symbolism, is entirely completed and ready for final coats of paint. This dome will extend over the entire ceiling space of the theater. Smaller domes in the main lobby are also nearing completion.

Backstage, the floor of the largest stage in a St. Louis picture theater has been laid. Plumbing work in the dressing rooms, which will front on the Washington boulevard side, has been completed and plans for furnishings are being made.

It is expected that the one-story shops fronting on Washington boulevard will be ready for occupancy in the latter part of this month. Work on the shops on the Grand boulevard side is now under way.

Construction Firm In New Office.

The S. L. Enoch Realty & Construction Co. announces the removal of their offices from 1372 Goodfellow avenue to 6713 Clayton road. The firm also reports completion of two single 6 and 6 room flats at 7242 and 7248 Amherst avenue, University Park, University City, which are now open for inspection. Another single flat on 7543 Hoover avenue, Richmond Heights, is nearing completion.

IRISH REPUBLICANS BOYCOTT KELLOGG

No Discourtesy Meant, However, by Failure to Attend Functions, Says Spokesman.

By ARTHUR E. MANN.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1928, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

DUBLIN, Sept. 1.—Eamonn de Valera, leader of the opposition in the Free State Dail, today emphasized his party's boycott of Secretary Kellogg's visit by returning here early this morning from Germany and leaving town immediately afterward for an unknown destination in Ireland. His secretary refused to divulge De Valera's whereabouts and indicated that no query asking for information regarding the action of his party would be forwarded to him.

However, the explanation of the Fianna Fail's attitude was given to the correspondent here today by Deputy Sean F. Lemass, honorary secretary of that organization and the only authoritative spokesman of the party now in Dublin.

"It is the settled policy of the party," he said, "to attend no function at which the Governor-General or members of President Cosgrave's party are present. To do so might create a misunderstanding of our political position among our supporters. But no discourtesy was intended to Mr. Kellogg."

However, as against the last part of his statement may be placed an editorial in today's issue of "The Nation," the official weekly organ of Fianna Fail. It is headed, "Mr. Kellogg's Irish bodyguard." It says:

"Mr. Kellogg, as an emissary of world peace, is due to arrive in Ireland on Aug. 29, and be received by a 'military guard of honor' furnished by the Free State forces body, whose one and only activity since their inception has been the waging of merciless war on the Republicans.

"It is questionable whether any military bodyguard, even if it was drawn from the ranks of an army which bore an unsullied name, would be an appropriate guard for a man of peace. Certainly a military guard of Free State soldiers, officered by men who have committed many outrages and permitted the grossest of outrages to be carried on by the rank and file, can hardly be termed a 'guard of honor' for Mr. Kellogg.

"Would the American peace emissary approve of such deeds as the Ballyseedy massacre? Would he feel honored by being guarded by men guilty of the murder of Noel Lemass (brother of the Fianna Fail spokesman quoted above), Henry Macentee and many others? Would he not feel more at ease if he was left unguarded by men who massacred unarmed prisoners?

Cosgrave Predicts Ratification.

"The cause of world peace will not be served by Mr. Kellogg's association with Liam Cosgrave, who publicly boasted that he, not Kevin O'Higgins, was responsible for the 77 executions carried out by the Free State.

"Surrounded by Free State soldiers, accompanied by a self-proclaimed executioner and passing through streets lined with those British imperial reservists, the Baden Powell Boy Scouts, Mr. Kellogg will enter Dublin. All who truly desire world peace must regret that its emissary has been so unfortunate in his choice of friends in Ireland."

Incidentally, it is possible that the Fianna Fail's deputies in the Dail may vote against the ratification of the Kellogg peace pact on account of the British reservations thereto, but President Cosgrave, in a conversation with the correspondent today indicated that he is confident of a majority for the treaty, even in such an event. The President spoke emphatically of the good he felt that Secretary Kellogg's visit had done, because of the Anglo-Irish relations and furthermore in helping to stabilize the internal political situation in the Free State by having come here officially.

Kellogg Finds Satisfactory Golf Clubs and Enjoys Self.

DUBLIN, Sept. 1.—Secretary of State Kellogg has found some golf clubs to his taste to replace his own, lost somewhere on the way here, and now seems to be enjoying thoroughly his stay in Dublin. He spent several hours this morning on Dublin's best course. At his own request no program had been arranged for him, either for today or tomorrow. Monday morning he will depart aboard the cruiser Detroit for Cherbourg where he will board the Leviathan for America.

GROCER HELD UP AS HE LOCKS STORE, ANOTHER IN HIS AUTO

Max Adelman, a grocer, reported to police that he was held up and robbed of $237, Saturday's receipts, by an armed man as he locked his store, 1433 Tower Grove avenue, at 10:30 o'clock last night. The robber struck Adelman in the mouth with his revolver when the grocer was slow in raising his hands.

Morris Flatken, proprietor of the Thirty-ninth street Market, 1716 South Thirty-ninth street, was driving home in his automobile after closing his store at 10 p. m., when a Negro robber, who had hid in the tonneau of the car, pressed a revolver against his head and robbed him of $60. The Negro then forced Flatken to drive back to the store in the expectation of obtaining further loot, but jumped from the machine and fled when Flatken stopped the car at the store.

An armed Negro entered a Kroger grocery store, 6417 Grove avenue, Pine Lawn, at 7:30 p. m., held up the manager, Paul Seaman, and escaped with $70.

'HOSPITALITY' FINE FOR ILLINOIS SPEEDER

Judge Beck in Making Sentence Light Rebukes East Side Courts.

"Kangaroo courts" in Illinois, which make a practice of assessing heavy fines against St. Louis motorists, were rebuked by Police Judge Beck of St. Louis yesterday. In fining a speeder from East Alton, instead of sending him to the Workhouse, his practice with St. Louis speeders, Judge Beck said that Illinois Judges should follow the St. Louis example of treating motoring guests with hospitality.

Justice of the Peace courts in East St. Louis and other Southern Illinois cities and towns, so Judge Beck said he had been informed, "first find out how much the St. Louis motorist has, and then take it all." The fines, according to Judge Beck, range all the way from $15 to $100.

"Go back," he told William D. Haralson, 33 years old, superintendent of a grading company employed on Route No. 160, the Alton-Greenville road now in the making, "and tell the people of Illinois that St. Louis treats its non-resident motorists fairly, despite the way Illinois does. Your fine is $30 and costs. If you lived in St. Louis it would be 15 days in the Workhouse."

Haralson, who paid the fine, was arrested for speeding 45 miles an hour on North Broadway yesterday afternoon. He said he was making a "hurry-up" trip from the construction camp to St. Louis to replace a broken piece of machinery.

Haralson said that, although he had $1400 in checks on his person, which he could have cashed in St. Louis, he was held at the Angelica street station for five hours.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped, addressed envelope.

G. T.—Scrapple is a Pennsylvania dish which originated among the Germans. The genuine old-fashioned formula calls for a young pig's head boiled until the meat is readily separated from the bones. The meat is then minced very fine and put back into the soup, the latter being afterwards thickened with buckwheat or cornmeal, and seasoned with spices and herbs. When of the consistency of mush it is run into pans to cool, to be later sliced for the table.

W. C. K.—As to whether or not it ever occurred that two presidential candidates received electoral votes out of the same state, there are numerous instances of the kind. At first the Legislature chose electors, and chose those who were known to favor certain candidates. This method was considered undemocratic, and gradually the Legislatures have transferred the choice of electors from themselves to the voters of their respective states. In some states two electors were chosen by the voters of the State-at-large, and the remaining electors were chosen by Congressional districts. The result was that some districts chose Democratic electors while others chose Republican. But the majority party of each state saw that all its electors could be elected if they were chosen at large, and naturally the majority party abandoned the district system in favor of the State-wide system. Even with the State-wide system the electoral vote of a state has been divided. In 1908 Maryland gave two electoral votes to Taft and six to Bryan, although a small majority of the voters of the State may have thought they were casting their full vote for Taft. The election was very close, and a few voters blundered by marking their ballots for the first-named Taft electors only, believing that they were thereby voting for all of the Taft electors, and causing six votes to go to Bryan.

MRS. P. G.—If you erected the fences you can keep the lumber. If your neighbors erected them, the lumber belongs to them. If you did it jointly, the lumber belongs to you both.

C. W.—The stock can be transferred direct from one spouse to the other, but it is sometimes better to transfer it to a "straw man" and have him transfer it to the other spouse.

F. L. A.—The Clerk of the County Court at Clayton keeps the standard weights and measures, for comparison with other weights and measures in use.

Captain Cook's Invasion of the South Seas Celebrated

Native Life in the Polynesian Islands, Now Fast Disappearing, as It Looked to the Hardiest of English Explorers.

HONOLULU, Hawaii.

THE people of Hawaii have just ended a celebration in honor of the discovery of the islands. It was 150 years ago that a resolute English seaman, Captain James Cook, first touched at this minor Eden.

British, Australian, New Zealand and American naval officers in full-dress uniform led a pilgrimage to the beach at Kaui, one of the smaller islands, where Cook first landed and was greeted as a god.

Flowers were strewn before his path and the whole populace chanted songs in his honor, just as the passengers on each incoming boat today are welcomed with flower-formed wreaths and with the strumming of ukuleles. The chief difference being that the flowers and the songs are today a part of the "atmosphere" created by steamship and hotel companies, seeking to make the islands an ideal playground for American visitors.

The dwellers in this paradise 150 years ago gave Cook a spontaneous welcome. But even that very first brush between "civilization" and native life bred hatred and mistrust. Cook himself found the island paradise a poisoned one and he was murdered by the same natives who had hailed him as the white god.

Cook has been called the greatest of England's maritime discoverers. During three voyages he charted vast, unknown areas in the Pacific. He laid claim for England to Australia, New South Wales, New Zealand and other territories. He corrected the errors of ancient maps, in many instances so accurately that his recordings have stood to this day. He conquered scurvy and was the first explorer who was able to keep his men contented and happy over long voyages that sometimes extended to three and four years.

HE TOUCHED at innumerable islands—the Marquesas, the Fijis, and others. And at each one the handsome, coffee-brown people rushed forth to greet him, never dreaming that his coming sounded the ultimate doom to their peace and freedom. He, in his turn, was enchanted by the Polynesians, whose origin remains almost as much a mystery as it was at the time of Cook's voyages.

With the scientists who accompanied him, notably Joseph Banks, he compiled a fascinating picture of these island paradises in their virgin state. On his second voyage, which lasted for three years and 18 days and took him round the world, he touched at Tahiti, which the natives called Otaheite, and others of the South Seas group. He wrote:

"As to the people they are of the largest size of Europeans. The men are tall, strong, well-limbed, and finely shaped. The tallest we saw was a man upon a neighboring island, called Huaheine, who measured six feet three and one-half inches tall. The women of the superior rank are also in general above our middle stature, but those of the inferior class are rather below it, and some of them are very small. . . .

"Their natural complexion is that kind of clear olive, or brunette, which many people prefer to the finest white and red. In those that are exposed to the wind and sun, it is considerably deepened, but in others that live under shelter, especially the superior class of woman, it continues of its native hue, and the skin is most delicately smooth and soft; they have no tint in their cheeks, which we distinguish by the name of color. The shape of the face is comely, the cheek bones are not high, neither are the eyes hollow, nor the brow prominent; the only feature that does not correspond with our ideas of beauty is the nose, which, in general, is somewhat flat; but their eyes, especially those of the women, are full of expression, sometimes sparkling with fire, and sometimes melting with softness; their teeth also are, almost without exception, most beautifully even and white, and their breath perfectly without taint. . . .

"In their motions there is at once vigor and ease; their walk is graceful, their deportment liberal, and their behavior to strangers and to each other affable and courteous. In their disposition also, they seemed to be brave, open, and candid, without either suspicion or treachery, cruelty or revenge; so that we placed the same confidence in them as in our best friends, many of us, particularly Mr. Banks, sleeping frequently in their houses in the woods, without a companion and consequently wholly in their power. They were, however, all thieves; and when that is allowed, they need not much fear a competition with the people of any other nation upon the earth."

He describes them as far more cleanly than Europeans of the time. They bathed three times a day, once in the morning, once before lunch at noon and once in the evening. Since their food was so easily obtainable—it was merely necessary to pick a few breadfruit or catch a few fish—they were able to give up much of their time to singing, dancing, a primitive form of play acting and love-making, he writes. Of the latter, he notes:

"It cannot be supposed that, among these people, chastity is held in much estimation. It might be expected that sisters and daughters would be offered to strangers, either as a courtesy or for reward; and that breaches of conjugal fidelity, even in the wife, should not be otherwise punished than by a few hard words, or perhaps a slight beating, as, indeed, is the case; but there is a scale in dissolute sensuality, which these people have ascended, wholly unknown to every other nation whose manners have been recorded from the beginning of the world to the present hour, and which no imagination could possibly conceive."

He tells of the societies which existed for sensual gratification. Membership in these groups, far from being a source of shame, was considered a signal honor. In these "Arreoy" every wife belonged to every husband. Cook describes their meetings, which included the dancing of the "Timoro-dee," a highly stylized and elaborate dance to stimulate desire.

Their religion, while simple, contained a beautiful legend of the creation:

"The Supreme Deity, one of these two first beings, they call Taroataihetoomoo, and the other, whom they suppose to have been a rock, Tepapa. A daughter of these was Tettowmatatayo, the year, or 13 months collectively, which they never name but upon this occasion, and she, by the common father, produced the months, and the months, by conjunction with each other, the days; the stars they suppose partly to be the immediate offspring of the first pair, and partly to have increased among themselves; and they have the same notion with respect to the different species of plants.

"AMONG other progeny of Taroataihetoomoo and Tepapa they suppose an inferior race of deities, whom they call Eatuas. Two of these Eatuas, at a remote period of time, inhabited the earth, and were the parents of the first man. When this man, their common ancestor, was born, they say that he was round like a ball, but that his mother, with great care, drew out his limbs, and having at length moulded him into his present form, she called him Eothe, which signifies 'finished.'"

Since there was no money, or anything resembling it, there was little incitement to crime. The petty thieveries which occurred never worked any real harm, and therefore were not punished.

Similar conditions prevailed in Hawaii, which was the farthest eastern point to which the Polynesians had penetrated, when Captain Cook first touched at Kaui in the late summer of 1778. And while he is rightfully regarded as the discoverer of the islands, it is almost certain they were sighted very much earlier by a Spanish explorer. The news was, however, kept in the secret archives of Spain.

Bearing ever eastward in his search for the mythical "Northwest Passage," Cook touched at Kaui but almost immediately put out to sea again. A few startled na

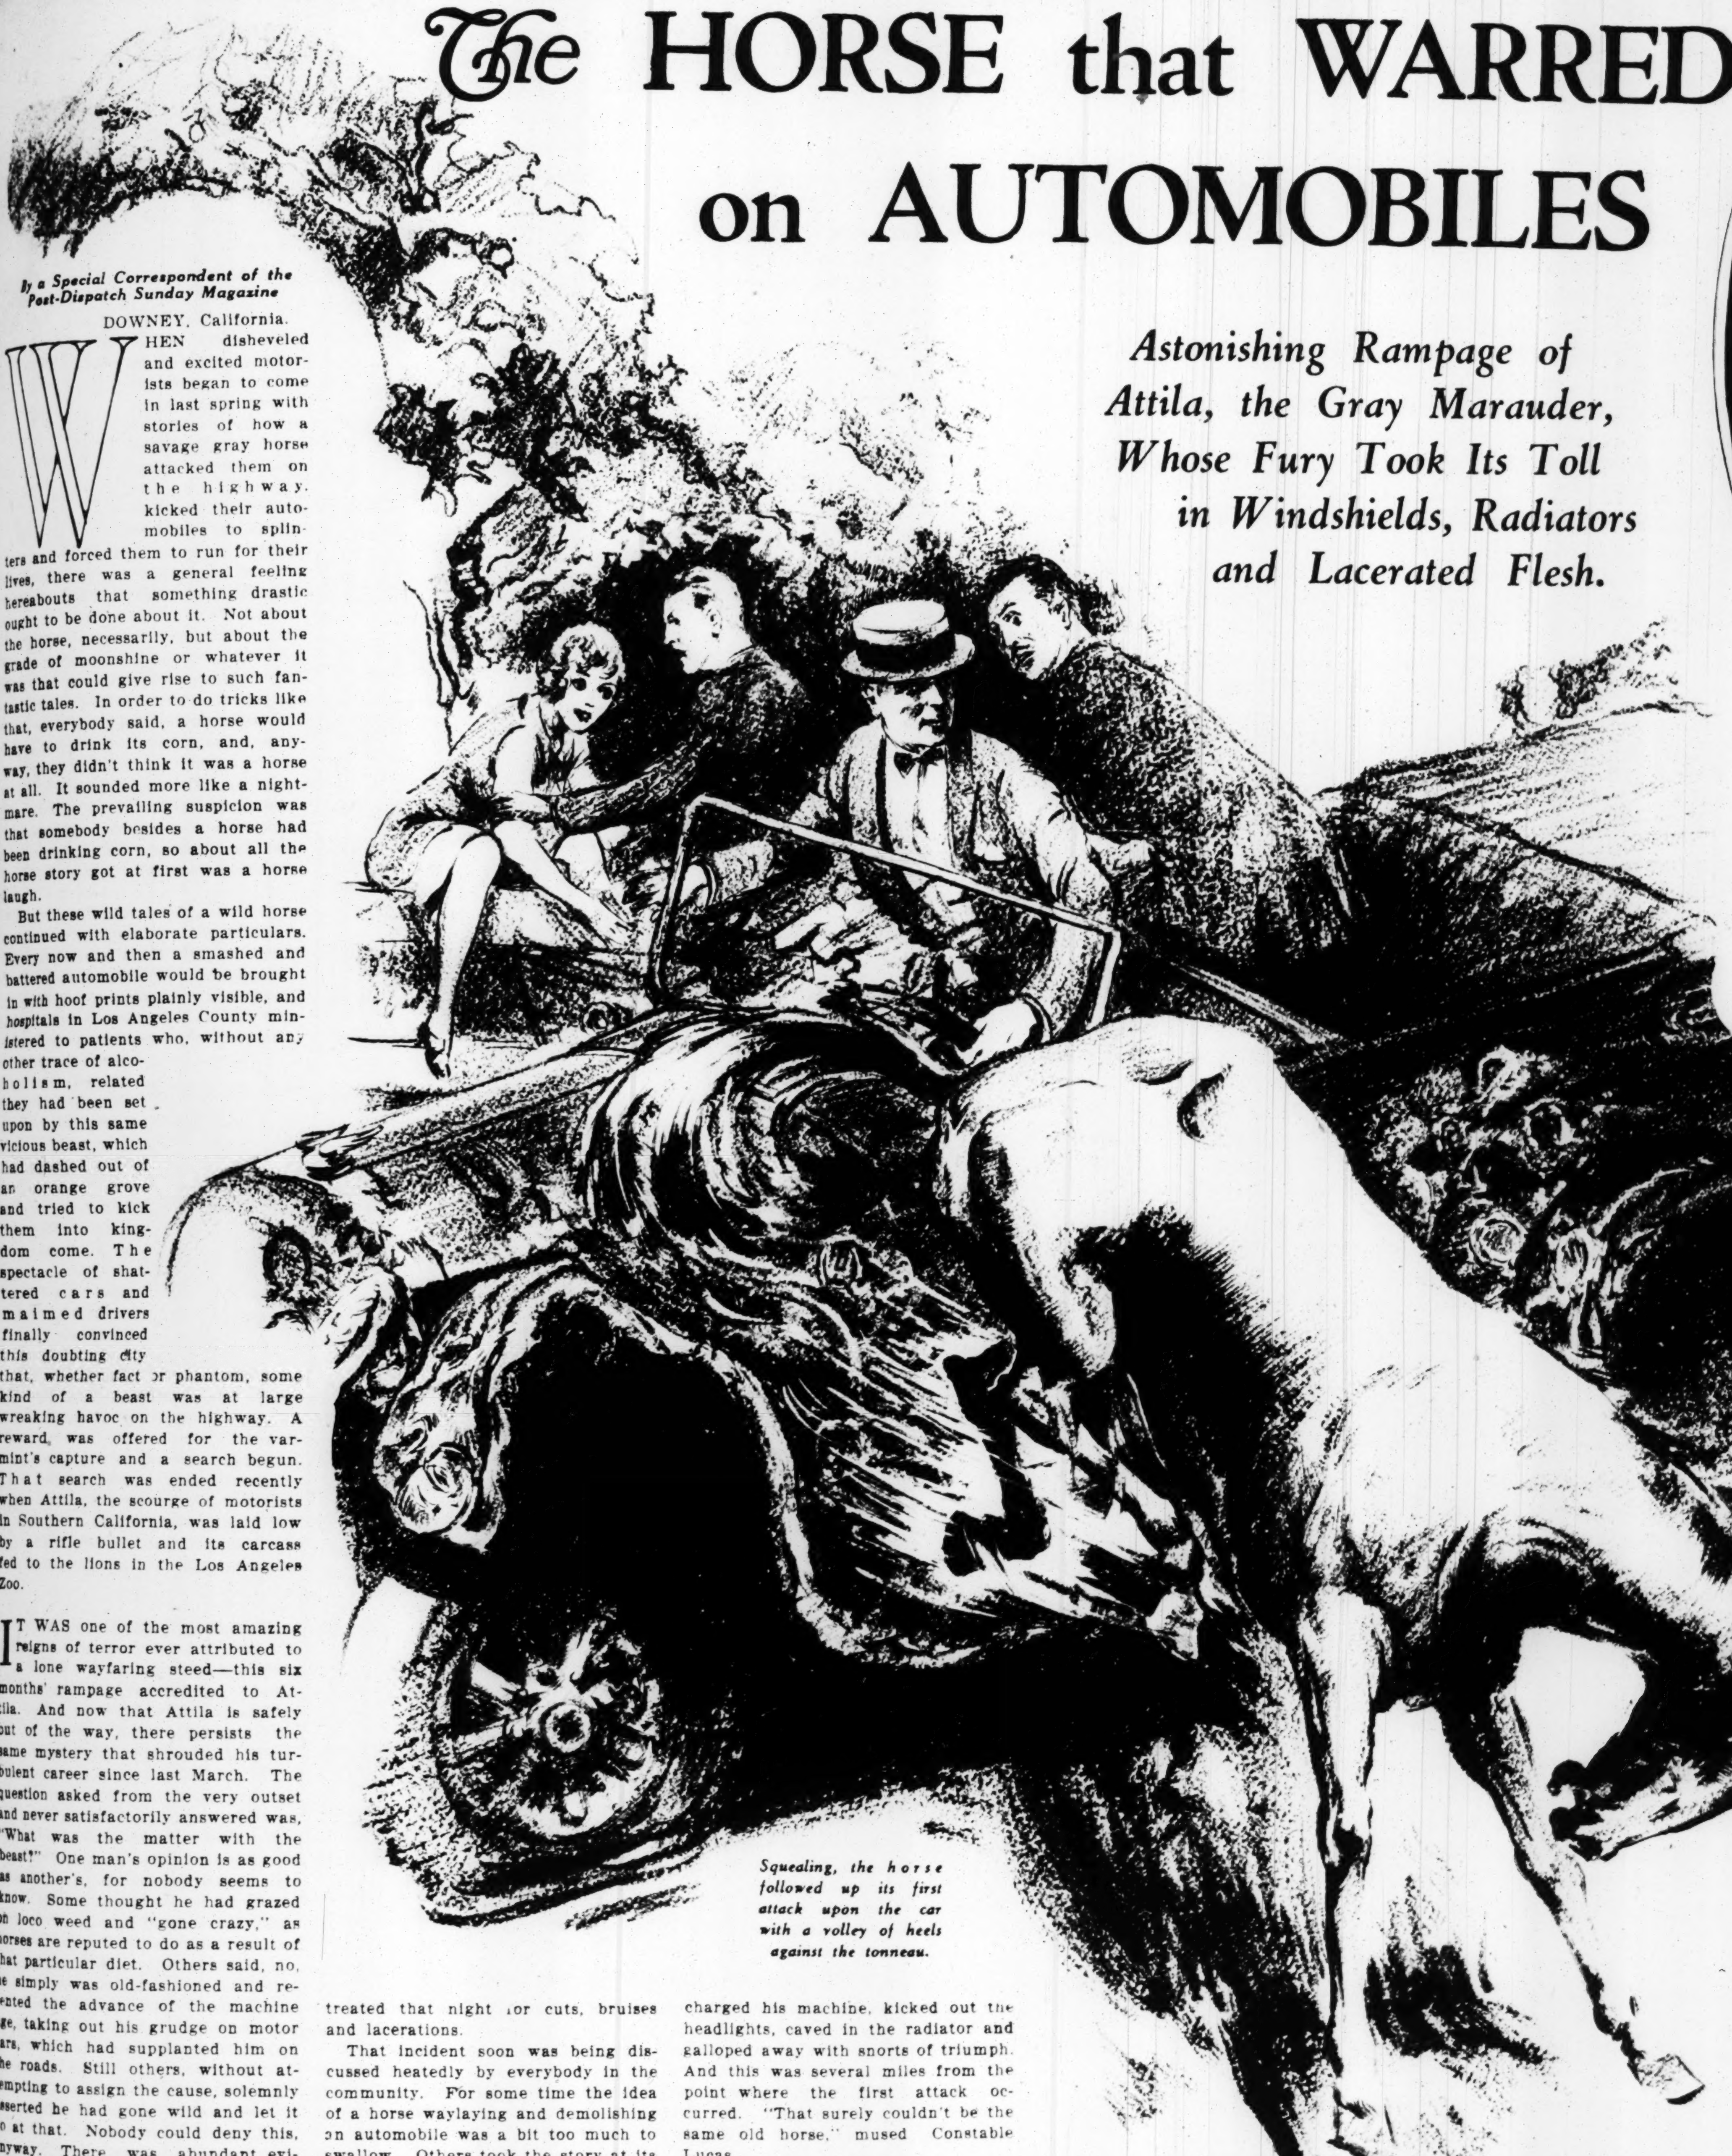
The HORSE that WARRED on AUTOMOBILES

Astonishing Rampage of Attila, the Gray Marauder, Whose Fury Took Its Toll in Windshields, Radiators and Lacerated Flesh.

Bert Lucas, Constable at Downey, Cal.



Squealing, the horse followed up its first attack upon the car with a volley of heels against the tonneau.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

DOWNEY, California.

WHEN disheveled and excited motorists began to come in last spring with stories of how a savage gray horse attacked them on the highway, kicked their automobiles to splinters and forced them to run for their lives, there was a general feeling hereabouts that something drastic ought to be done about it. Not about the horse, necessarily, but about the grade of moonshine or whatever it was that could give rise to such fantastic tales. In order to do tricks like that, everybody said, a horse would have to drink its corn, and, anyway, they didn't think it was a horse at all. It sounded more like a nightmare. The prevailing suspicion was that somebody besides a horse had been drinking corn, so about all the horse story got at first was a horse laugh.

But these wild tales of a wild horse continued with elaborate particulars. Every now and then a smashed and battered automobile would be brought in with hoof prints plainly visible, and hospitals in Los Angeles County ministered to patients who, without any other trace of alcoholism, related they had been set upon by this same vicious beast, which had dashed out of an orange grove and tried to kick them into kingdom come. The spectacle of shattered cars and maimed drivers finally convinced this doubting city that, whether fact or phantom, some kind of a beast was at large wreaking havoc on the highway. A reward was offered for the varmint's capture and a search begun. That search was ended recently when Attila, the scourge of motorists in Southern California, was laid low by a rifle bullet and its carcass fed to the lions in the Los Angeles Zoo.

IT WAS one of the most amazing reigns of terror ever attributed to a lone wayfaring steed—this six months' rampage accredited to Attila. And now that Attila is safely out of the way, there persists the same mystery that shrouded his turbulent career since last March. The question asked from the very outset and never satisfactorily answered was, "What was the matter with the beast?" One man's opinion is as good as another's, for nobody seems to know. Some thought he had grazed on loco weed and "gone crazy," as horses are reputed to do as a result of that particular diet. Others said, no, he simply was old-fashioned and resented the advance of the machine age, taking out his grudge on motor cars, which had supplanted him on the roads. Still others, without attempting to assign the cause, solemnly asserted he had gone wild and let it go at that. Nobody could deny this, anyway. There was abundant evidence that, whatever the cause, Attila was as wild as the Hun whose name he bore. All travelers came to fear him and his flying heels.

Attila's campaign against motor cars began early in March. One evening a party of young people was driving along a paved road through the orange groves near this city. It had grown dark and the automobile headlights were turned on. Suddenly something white loomed ahead of the car and the driver jammed on the brakes. As the machine came to a stop the white object was observed to be a horse.

That was about all anybody had time to observe, for at the machine's approach the animal whirled in the road and sent his heels against the radiator. Wham! Again they struck. And a third time. Wham! The windshield was shattered and the steering wheel wrecked. Then, with a squeal, the beast reared and struck out with its fore feet against a door. That assault was followed by another volley of heels against the tonneau. When the assault was finally abandoned the car was a ruin and the occupants were scrambling for the shelter of nearby trees. They saw the crazed animal gallop, screaming, into the orange groves and then made their way to Downey Hospital, where Dr. W. M. Carter bandaged their wounds. Flora Detweiler, Herbert Peterson, K. L. Leeks and L. J. Drollingers were treated that night for cuts, bruises and lacerations.

That incident soon was being discussed heatedly by everybody in the community. For some time the idea of a horse waylaying and demolishing an automobile was a bit too much to swallow. Others took the story at its face value and watched their steps when traveling at night. A few tried to advance a logical explanation of the phenomenon. Constable Bert Lucas was one of these.

"PSHAW," said the Constable, "I'll never believe a horse would act like that. It's all hooey. The old plug was simply in the road and got scared. Probably it was blinded by the headlights and floundered around trying to get out of the way until it got to plunging and kicking. He just kept at it until he got half-way into the car and the boys thought he was trying to get into their vest pockets. But he did wreck the car. That much is certain."

Constable Lucas, it may be remarked, knows a thing or two about horses. He was born on a farm near Ironton, Missouri, where boys learn how to handle horses soon after they learn to walk. After he grew up and left the farm he handled them in St. Louis before coming to California. And he insisted that no horse in his right mind would tackle an automobile with malice aforethought. At least, said the Constable, he wouldn't do it more than once.

Nevertheless, the thing happened again. Scarcely a week later Arthur P. Burton was driving on Centinella boulevard, near Downey, when he encountered this strange scourge of the highways. A huge white horse charged his machine, kicked out the headlights, caved in the radiator and galloped away with snorts of triumph. And this was several miles from the point where the first attack occurred. "That surely couldn't be the same old horse," mused Constable Lucas.

Recurrence of the strange episode started residents of the valley to speculating and some of their speculations were wilder than the horse. Some even suggested the beast was a phantom that could swoop down out of nowhere and disappear the same way. And it did seem strange that a lone white horse so rebellious against civilization could live unseen in that well-populated district. There were no swamps or canebrakes in which to hide and no hoof prints were found in the orchards from which the charging assailant came. Besides, nobody reported seeing a ghost horse slinking about in the shadows, though virtually the whole rural population was on the lookout for one. Certainly the scourge was crafty in selecting his hiding place.

IN THE course of a few weeks arguments about the real nature of the beast and the wrecks attributed to it died down and mention of it brought only smiles of incredulity. Then, suddenly, Attila broke into the news again. This time the tale was wilder, if possible, than any heard before, but it was authenticated by several witnesses and other tangible evidence in the form of two dead mules and one dead horse. According to the witnesses and two Deputy Sheriffs who investigated the phenomenal occurrence, this is what happened:

On the morning of April 1, Attila actually led a cavalry charge on the ranch of W. T. Morgan at 1412 Washburn road. Somewhere, Attila had organized a band of vicious outlaws like himself—four other horses and four mules—and he led them in an attack on domesticated animals on the Morgan farm. The scourge first centered his assault on an idle tractor, kicking off the gas tank and smashing the carburetor. Then, followed by his band, he charged the Morgan stock, which comprised two horses, a mare and a colt.

Outnumbered more than two to one, the Morgan horses were being kicked all around the pasture when Treece Morgan, Kenneth Brown and three other boys rushed to the rescue with clubs and rocks. Attila knocked young Morgan down three times, and then, snorting and screaming, he attacked Kenneth Brown. The boy fell and Attila's heels caught in his trousers, ripping them off. From behind the tractor the three other boys laid down a barrage of stones, and under cover of this young Brown ran to the house for a rifle. Returning, he opened fire on Attila and his wild cavalry. Two horses and two mules went down under that rifle fire before the outlaw band finally fled, leaving three dead and one wounded on the field.

Deputy Sheriffs Meadows and Stewart, rushing to the scene, checked the story with the elder Morgan and his son. They found the two dead mules, the dead horse and the wounded. They inspected the injuries to the Morgan stock and the two boys and then heartily agreed that:

"Something sure happened in this pasture!"

Naturally, the new outbreak brought another avalanche of comment and speculation. Some of the ranchers were beginning to lose their patience and demanded that official action be taken. So Constable Lucas set out to solve the mystery.

THE first fact of importance he found was the source of Attila's army. Four horses and four mules had escaped recently from a corral near Norwalk, a few miles away. Undoubtedly these were the beasts which had followed the white scourge in the assault on the Morgan ranch, but none of the absentees answered the description of Attila himself. The search continued and, to liven things up a bit, some rodeo promoters at Saugus offered a reward of $100 for Attila's capture.

For weeks there appeared no sign of the white scourge and it seemed that maybe the officer was on the right track in his declaration, "I tell you, there ain't no such critter." Then, when everything was quiet, it happened again and a Los Angeles newspaper carried under big headlines this account of the affair:

"Attila, 'the scourge of motorists,' that foul white equine fiend of Southern California, is back again!

"Leaping out of a bank of fog at Pico boulevard and Spaulding avenue early today, the gaunt white steed launched a whirlwind one-horse offensive against Harry Herrold, 35, of 313 1-2 South Western avenue, and his benzine buggy.

"Herrold jammed on his four-wheel brakes and ducked — too late. Attila kicked once and the windshield flew into fragments. He kicked twice and the steering wheel sailed across Pico boulevard. His plunging heels shot upward a third time and Herrold, describing a perfect parabola, left the cushions of his car to sit solidly on the pavement.

"Then Attila, screaming in rage and joyous satisfaction, whirled and raced away into the fog, heading for the beach."

The charge on Herrold's car turned out to be Attila's last. On a lot in the edge of Downey, one morning not long ago, Constable Lucas found Harvey Redfield kneeling by the side of a battered old white steed. With needle and sacking twine he was trying to sew up two or three gashes in the animal's side and hip.

"Where did you get the horse?" the Constable asked Redfield.

"He just wandered in," replied the amateur veterinarian.

"How did he get hurt?"

"Jumped on a motor car, I think. I found a lot of glass in his side. He's almost done for, but I thought I'd sew him up a little."

THE horse lay dejectedly at rest. A bucket of water was brought and he drank eagerly. He was scratched and scarred from forehead to hocks. The shanks of his hind legs were bruised and swollen. Above one eye was a half-healed gash. A hoof was split in the middle.

Plodding down the road, rope in hand, came a Mexican.

"My horse," he explained. "He run away and I hear he kick at motor car, mebbe."

"How much will you take for him?" Redfield asked the Mexican.

"Three dollars."

"I'll take him," said Redfield, and he handed over the money.

When the others had gone, a shot was heard on the lot and Redfield telephoned the Los Angeles Zoo.

That afternoon the jungle cats feasted on fresh horse meat.

Famed German Soldier of Fortune Bound for the "DRY GUILLOTINE"

PARIS.

THE career of one of the most picturesque of modern adventurers is to close in the fever-haunted swamps of Devil's Island. The French authorities the other day commuted the death sentence of Joseph Klems and gave him the "dry guillotine" instead.

He will sail soon, with others, aboard a French cruiser for the little island off the coast of French Guiana. Escape, even for this veteran soldier of fortune, is remote. Only three or four have ever eluded this living death. The natives on the island are too eager to collect the 10 francs which the French Government grants for recaptured prisoners, dead or alive.

Klems has escaped his just fate many times in the past. He knocked down his superior officer in the French Legion, deserted to a tribe of warring Arabs, and ultimately became one of their leaders. Later he joined the fierce chieftain, Abd el-Krim, and for his valiant work with the Riffians, against French and Spanish forces, won a position of importance. The Arabs called him Caid el-Hadj, "The Pilgrim," because they believed he had been to Mecca. He never disillusioned them.

His career is more amazing when his origin is considered. He was born the son of a stolid merchant of Dusseldorf, Germany, and for 20 years he led the narrow, sober life of the petit bourgeoisie. But in the 21 years since that time he has more than made up for his tame youth.

He told his story—for the first and last time, it is believed—to Vincent Sheean, a journalist, not long before the downfall of Abd el-Krim. Sheean has included this narrative in his book, "An American With the Riffi," based on his experiences with the stalwart tribesmen who so long resisted the military forces of two nations.

"AS I LOOK back on that part of my life," he said of his youth, "it seems too stupid to be true. Yet then it was all there was to the world; my ambition was to have a good wine business in Cologne and a steady, sensible girl from the town for my wife. I never thought of Morocco or Africa or the deserts or mountains; I doubt if I knew such places existed. It was a small life, nice enough in its way; my family had lived it for centuries, never wandering from Cologne and Dusseldorf.

"When I was 20, something happened. As it is always when we are 20, this had to do with a woman. Well, there is no harm in telling it now; before the war it would have been very bad for me, because it meant that I was evading military service. She was an actress, a singing actress; I met her in Cologne. And I ran away with her to Paris, with a police permit that nobody had any reason to believe would do me any good after three months were up. That was—let me see—in 1907. I have never gone back to Germany.

"That woman was a very bad woman. Or maybe she was not; maybe she was only a Christian woman. I have almost forgotten; perhaps all Christian women are like that, really. But my mother was not, I know. This was a Christian woman in the sense that, when she was tired of me, she left me at once and went off with another man. No Arab woman would even think of leaving a man unless she was sent away. That is why I like Arab women better than Christian women. She left me hardly a month after we arrived in Paris. We were living in a little hotel up toward Montmartre, and I was paying all the expenses with my own money. I had a little, you know, from my grandfather. But she found a rich man."

DESPERATELY unhappy, he went to Constantinople. For three years he wandered in Persia and Afghanistan and made considerable money. "No matter how," he said. "People make money in a lot of ways." On his way back to Paris he stopped at Monte Carlo and there he lost every sou he had made. He lived by his wits for a year in Paris. "I was not witless and I did not starve," he related.

"It was in 1911 that I left Paris and traveled down, through Spain, to Tangier. I liked Tangier and went on farther, to Rabat and Fez. Then, in 1912, after the French protectorate was proclaimed in Morocco, I took service under the French as an ordinary infantryman. I had seen enough of Morocco to know that the country appealed to me more than France or Germany or Spain or any of the other countries I knew. I was recommended to the French as a German who had evaded his military service to Germany. It did not matter to them that I had not intended to evade my service, but had been dragged into doing so by a woman.

"I served under the French for eight years, and by 1920 I was a Lieutenant in the Foreign Legion. You may say that it was unnatural for me to fight in Morocco for France while France was fighting my own country in Europe; but I had been so long away from Germany that all that meant very little to me. And so long as one fights, does it matter very much whom or why? Unless there is a personal feeling, of course. . . . This period of service for France did something for Germany, too. I do not mean that I was a spy; I have never been a spy. But my eight years' service in the French army did one thing: it made me an enemy of the French.

"For this the French are to blame, not I. I fought very loyally for France. I fought the Berber tribes of the Sus, and I fought the Bedouins of the Sahara; I was in all the engagements of 1917 against Abd el-Malek, to the north, and it never occurred to me to try to betray the French, who had, I thought, become my friends.

"But towards the end of the war they surrounded me with suspicions and half-insults. I had risked my life for them thousands of times, but that meant nothing. Often, I could tell, some of the officers could hardly keep from calling me 'Boche,' only because I was born in Germany. After the war their arrogance became insufferable. I was in the Sahara until 1920, and in constant action I found little time to think of my hatred of the French. But it grew almost beyond limits when I came back to the north in that year and was posted on the border. I was holding myself only until an occasion should make it reasonable to do my best against France.

"THEN at a little dinner in Fez a certain French Captain—my superior officer in the Foreign Legion—got drunk and called me a Boche. I knocked him down, got out before the guards came and rode directly back to my post. I arrived at about dawn the next morning and, taking all the money there was at post headquarters, put on the Arab clothes I had often worn in little excursions into native life, and started out for the hills.

"I knew every inch of those hills, for I had mapped them a dozen times and had fought over them against the marauding Beni Warrenne. It was while I was in their country that I was captured. A group of eight or ten of them, out looking for straggling or scouting Frenchmen, got me neatly enough and rode with me for the nearest village.

"At that time I could speak very little Arabic, and not a word in the corrupt dialect of the Beni Warrenne and their kindred of the border. I could not talk to these men well enough to make them understand anything; so I did not try. They were happy to have come up with me, especially after they had searched me and found my money. They made another discovery; my whole French uniform underneath my Arab clothes. At this, it seemed, they were more than ever jubilant.

"The village was a group of mud huts, with an open space in the middle. They beat drums—for the Beni Warrenne are as savage as you can hope for, and not really Mahommedan or Arab in the civilized sense—and got all the men and old women of the village out. I was bound hand and foot and left there while the old crones began digging a hole in the middle of the cleared ground.

"I watched them idly for awhile. Presently it became clear that I was to be buried alive there. Turning me so that I could watch them work, they pointed at the growing hole and then at me, chuckling happily. I lay there perhaps a half-hour, almost suffocated already by the thought. There seemed nothing to do. I could not move; even if I had been able to use my arms and they had not taken my revolver, they would have been too many for me. That is perhaps the only moment in my life when I have experienced what you would call despair."

But Sherif Hassan of the tribe had taken a liking to Klems and he interceded to save his life, the condition being that the soldier of fortune become his slave. With appropriate ritual, Klems was shortly made a Mahommedan and there were indications that he was to be taken into the tribe on a basis nearly equal to that of the other men. He goes on with his story as follows:

"This happy day was put off partly by my own fault; for a hideous thing happened and I tried to prevent it. A young French officer—he was not more than 22—was captured and brought in one day and, of course, condemned to die. I was not armed and had no influence. But when I saw how he was to die I could not restrain myself. The tribesmen took him out to an open space at the foot of the next hill and dug his grave. The shape of it struck horror into me. It was about five feet deep and only three feet across. They were going to bury him standing up. He was a boy with a fine face, and I was glad he kept his eyes closed. I did not know him, but I could not have supported his eyes on me.

"THEN they put him into the grave, with his head well above it, and filled in earth all around. There were 30 or 40 of them and only one of me, but I made up my mind to try to dig him out when night came. The plan would never have worked anyway, I suppose, since some of the bloodthirsty women would have been sure to be sitting there to watch his tortures all night long. But I was not able even to attempt to rescue him; for after he had been completely buried, all but his head, with its wide, agonized blue eyes, the women brought a bowl of thick honey and poured it over him.

"In a flash I saw how he would be tortured before he could die—the long hours in that scorching sun, the insects and the animals. . . . I suppose I went mad. I struck out at them, broke through, knocking down three or four tribesmen, and made for the grave. But in a moment they had me, 10 or 15 of them. I know I made a good fight. I had grabbed a stick and belabored them well, but they only

Dead Man's Confession and the Mystery It Solved

Henry Grymes, Who Met His Fate in the Same River From Which His Victim's Body Was Pulled, Speaks Through His Brother.

FREDERICKSBURG, Virginia.

THE confession of a dead man, told by his brother more than a year after his death, has cleared up, finally, one of the strangest mysteries in the history of Virginia, that of the disappearance of 9-year-old Albert Baker, whose body was found, tied up in a sack, in the Rappahannock River.

Albert Baker, youngest son of one of those old Virginia families which have never recovered from the Civil War, vanished from the streets of Fredericksburg as if by magic on the day before Easter, 1927, while riding his bicycle from the home of a playmate, where he had just had lunch, to a playground on the edge of town.

For three months police of Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina and the District of Columbia, augmented by numerous private detective agencies, searched the countryside for the boy without result. The entire eastern section of the United States was eventually called in on the search, and frequent reports from Maine to Florida furnished many clews, which always proved to be false.

Then, late in the summer, two fishermen in the historic Rappahannock River noticed a bundle, thrown up on the shore of the river, and when they investigated they found to their amazement a child's leg sticking out of a hole in one corner. They notified the authorities, and the bundle was taken to the Fredericksburg morgue, where the body was found to be that of the missing Albert Baker.

Even after the body was found the case was not solved. An autopsy showed that the child's legs had been broken and that he had suffered internal injuries which could have caused his death. But how he sustained those injuries remained unknown until in an unguarded moment Abram Grymes, young farmer, let slip a remark that led to the solution.

THE remark itself, indeed, was innocent enough, but to the ears of Constable Musselman of Fredericksburg it became a clew, perhaps because of the way it was said or because of some little betraying expression in the man's eyes.

Musselman followed the clew up relentlessly for more than a month, saying nothing to anyone about it, and finally, at the end of that time, presented to the District Attorney a full confession, signed by Grymes, stating that his brother, Henry Willis Grymes, had accidentally run over the boy and killed him. Then, the confession said, fearing detection and prosecution, the man sought to dispose of the corpse by tying it up in a sack and throwing it into the river.

Strangely enough, it was in that same river that Henry Grymes himself died, less than two months after the Baker boy disappeared. He and his brother were working on a bridge near Fredericksburg when both fell into the stream. The water was comparatively shallow at that point, and Abram had little difficulty in saving himself. The brother, however, apparently wanted to die, for he made no effort to get ashore.

It was on a Saturday, holiday for schoolboys, that little Albert Baker vanished while riding on his bicycle from the home of a playmate to a baseball diamond on the edge of the village.

The friend waited at the field for him until 3 o'clock, and when he had not arrived by that time and the opposing team had taken the field, the ball game went on without him. Albert's playmate, indeed, was a little chagrined at him for not appearing, as he was one of the mainstays of the team, and as a result of his absence his team lost the game. Nothing was thought of it, however, until some time after dark that night, when Mrs. Baker, worried when Albert failed to come home, went to the friend's house to get him.

When she found that he had not been seen since noon she immediately notified authorities, and a search was started, but without success. No one had seen him and no trace of his bicycle could be found. It was as though he had been spirited away by magic.

Numerous theories as to the disappearance were advanced in the days that followed, some believing he had been kidnaped for ransom, others holding that he had been murdered by some moron, and still others that he had simply wandered away and met, perhaps, with some accident.

But time failed to verify any of these. Nothing was heard of the child, and all of the reports that he had been seen in various parts of the country turned out to be false.

To add to the mystery, a freshly-dug grave was found by police about two weeks after the disappearance in a remote wood about 10 miles from the village, and a crew of men were immediately dispatched to open it. After several hours' work they removed all the loose earth and found—nothing.

Thus, without the slightest development, the search went on until one afternoon, late in May, when two fishermen rushed into the office of the Chief of Police in Fredericksburg and said they had found, on the brink of the Rappahannock, a sack with a human leg sticking out a hole in one corner of it.

The Police Chief, with the Coroner and the Commonwealth Attorney, went to the river with the men and found the sack in the mud along the shore, where it had apparently been thrown up by receding flood waters.

The body was so badly decomposed that it was impossible to tell what had caused the child's death, but it was established that both legs had been broken, and that the skull had either been fractured or cut open by some sharp instrument. A deep cut around the throat led to the belief that the boy might have been garroted to death, but physicians admitted that this might have been caused by decomposition.

The garroting theory, however, gained considerable momentum several days later when another fisherman found two more sacks of the same kind, containing the bodies of dogs, the throats of which were in the same condition.

Nearly a year passed, and Fredericksburg was rapidly forgetting that Albert Baker had ever existed, when Constable Musselman, at a party, heard the tell-tale remark. He said nothing about it at the time, but he called on Grymes the following afternoon and discussed the matter with him.

It was nearly a month, however, before he could persuade the man to admit the truth.

According to the story Grymes told, his brother, Henry, had gone to Fredericksburg on the day the child disappeared to get some provisions, and had been riding along one of the narrow streets when the child, who was riding his bicycle in front of him, suddenly swerved out and was struck before he could apply his brakes.

Albert was thrown from his wrecked bicycle and landed in a gutter, his head striking the curbing. Henry Grymes, the confession said, picked him up and put him in the front seat and threw the remains of the bicycle in the rear. He had intended taking the child to a hospital, but when he got in to drive away he noticed that the boy had stopped his moaning and was lying very still in the car.

He felt his heart, according to Abram Grymes, and found the child dead.

Henry Grymes was terror-stricken and feared that if he were found out he might be held for murder. He knew nothing of law, had no money to hire an attorney, and had a mortal dread of jail. He therefore arranged the body so that it could not be seen by pedestrians and drove back to the farm, some 15 miles away.

He hid the corpse in an outhouse and waited until the next day before telling anyone about it. Then he confessed the killing to the brother.

Abram Grymes likewise knew nothing of the ways of the law and he agreed with his brother that the wisest thing to do was to bury the body in a secluded spot where there would be little likelihood of its being found, and say nothing about it.

Shortly after dusk they took the corpse out into the woods, dug a deep grave for it and buried it in an improvised coffin made out of boxes.

Late the next afternoon, they went in to Fredericksburg to find the village in a turmoil of excitement. Several suspects had been arrested for the murder of the boy, yet none could be held because there was no way to know that the child had been murdered. New searching parties were starting out every few minutes, scouring the countryside for some trace of the lad, and a few astute questions on the part of the brothers brought out the information that the search would probably reach the grave, in which they had buried the child, by the next afternoon.

THEY hurried back and dug up the body again, refilling the grave before the next morning. They took the little coffin and hid it in a remote room in the cellar of their old farmhouse and waited. Surely enough, shortly after noon a searching party found the grave and set to work with picks and shovels.

For more than a week the two men kept the body in its hiding place, and then, when the hunt died down temporarily, they went to the Fredericksburg dump and picked up an old sack in which they sewed up the body, tying heavy rocks on all four corners.

In the dead of night they took the body to the Rappahannock and threw it in, hoping to be rid of it forever.

But Henry Grymes had not reckoned with that powerful spectre, conscience. In the weeks that followed he could not sleep, his brother said, and he wasted away physically. The very associations of the farm seemed to haunt him, and he would not go into the cellar for any reason whatsoever.

Family finances waned, and some ready cash was necessary, so the two brothers went to work for the State Roads Commission, which was then doing some repair work on a bridge near Fredericksburg. Henry and Abram were in a small skiff under the span when the boat suddenly turned over and both men went into the water. Henry apparently made no effort to save himself, and went down immediately, although he was an excellent swimmer. The body was recovered by divers later that day.

NEW METHOD OF FORTIFYING LEONARDO'S "LAST SUPPER" AGAINST TIME

A SCIENTIST has at last discovered the reason for the mysterious deterioration of "The Last Supper," Leonardo da Vinci's most celebrated masterpiece. For over 400 years the great mural, painted on a plaster wall in the Convent of Santa Maria della Grazie, at Milan, has faded and cracked, resisting the efforts of restorers and art specialists through the generations.

Now it appears that its latest "art doctor," Oreste Silvestri, may be successful in preserving the famous painting for posterity. Commissioned by the Italian Government, he is but one of many who have attempted the task. So often has the mural been repainted that not a vestige of Da Vinci's original pigment remains, but the new colors and plaster continued to crack and scale off.

No one succeeded in finding the cause, and some went so far as to blame the fading on the defective medium of Da Vinci, master art craftsman of all time. It remained for Silvestri to explain the baffling deterioration.

He discovered that the plaster underneath was constantly being eaten away by moisture forming on the surface. The back of the picture was exposed to cold drafts of air, while the front, on the refectory wall, was always warm. Therefore water condensed on the painting as it does on a glass of cold water.

Silvestri removed a part of the rear wall and installed an automatic heating device to keep both sides at the same temperature. Then he went to work on the surface. Under the loose particles of paint and plaster he injected a mixture of oil, resin, plaster and wax, and with an electric iron rolled out the uneven surface.

Results were immediately forthcoming. There was a remarkable change for the better in the condition of the painting; the small scars disappeared and the larger ones became less obvious.

Silvestri still watches it carefully, working over the cracks and patches daily under a magnifying glass. From present indications, "The Last Supper" is now well fortified to stand the test of time.

If the painting as restored by Silvestri should at last cease to deteriorate, he has performed a great service for art. "The Last Supper" is justly celebrated as the world's greatest painting. Despite the disappearance of the original coloring, the picture is still a marvel of beauty because of the masterly drawing and composition in the inspired characterization of Christ and His apostles.

It is a mural painting, in a medium more akin to tempera than to pure fresco, 15 feet high by 28 feet long, depicting Christ and His apostles seated at their last supper just before Judas Iscariot betrayed the Master. Jesus, seated in the center, has just prophesied His betrayal by one of the twelve, who are depicted in various postures of agitation and astonishment, except Judas, whose face is a cold mask.

The early fading of the picture has been blamed on Leonardo da Vinci's versatility and love for experiment. He had been experimenting with tempera and other ingredients. An enthusiastic scientist as well as artist, Leonardo used the new medium for this, his greatest work. He finished "The Last Supper" in 1493. Almost immediately, it is said, the pigments proved to be perishable, and showed signs of deterioration.

The tempera did not adhere firmly to the plaster; flaking and scaling set in, mildew formed, and finally a veritable rain of minute particles fell from the surface. In the eighteenth century several attempts were made to restore the work, but all proceeded on the assumption that the original had been painted in oil. It was saturated in oil at one time, in the hope of reviving the colors, and some experimenters tried "secret" processes which involved glues and varnishes.

No one succeeded in arresting the deterioration, and eventually the doctorings accelerated the natural processes of decay. Later it was discovered that tempera rather than oil had been the original medium, and by touching in the bare spots with the former, the condition of the picture was somewhat improved in 1908 by Cavenaghi.

Other abuses during its 400 years of existence almost threatened the complete ruin of the painting. A door was cut through the lower portion in 1652, and in 1796 careless dragoons of Napoleon's army used the refectory as a stable. In 1800 the room was flooded with water for fifteen days, which eventually necessitated extensive patching by Berezzi in 1819.

Yet through all the long years the ghost of the original picture remained wondrously beautiful and impressive. If the restorative work of Silvestri shall prove as permanent as is hoped the result will be a great gain for posterity, and a happy refutation of d'Annunzio's despairing poem, "The Death of a Masterpiece."

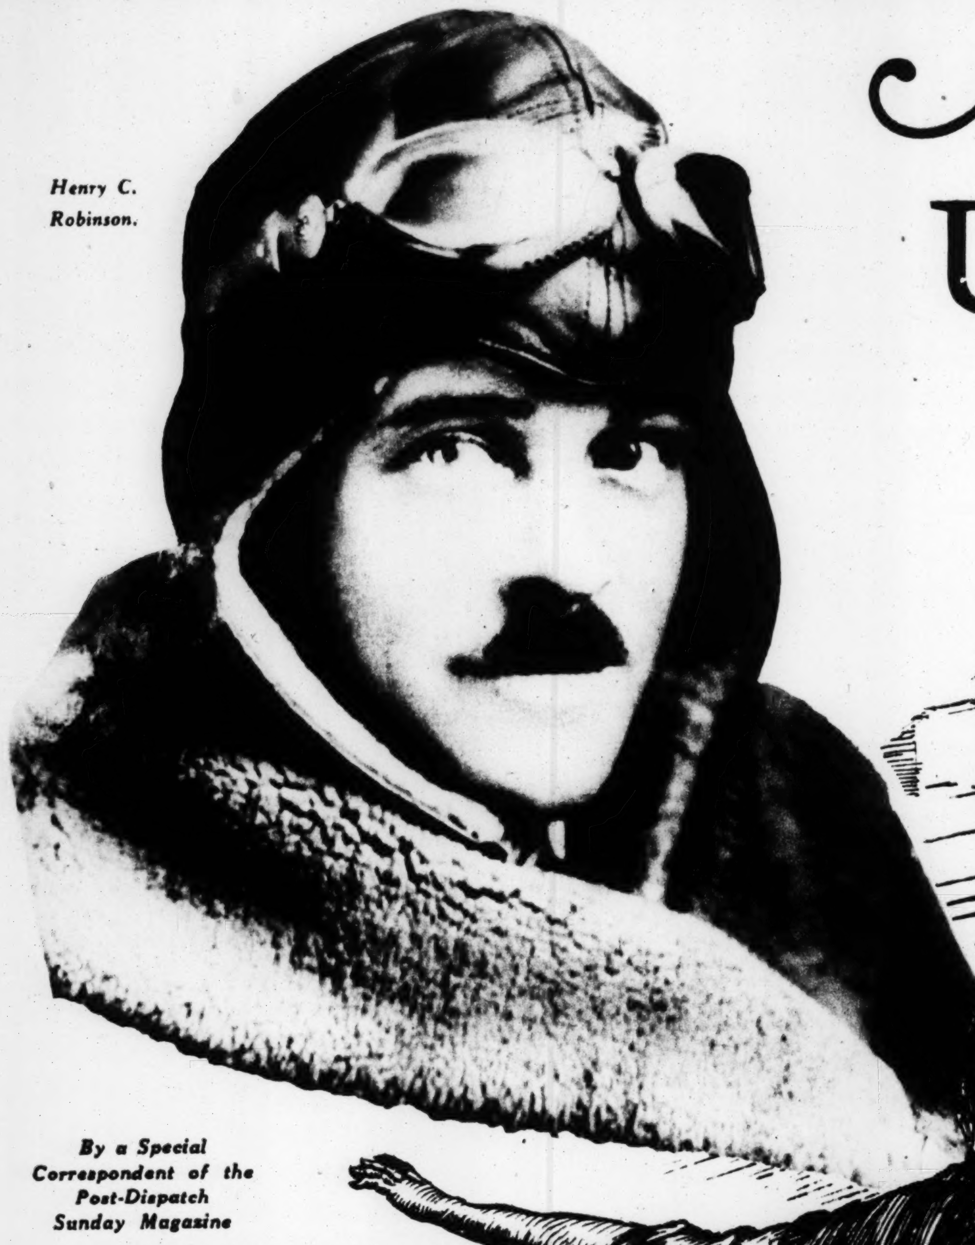
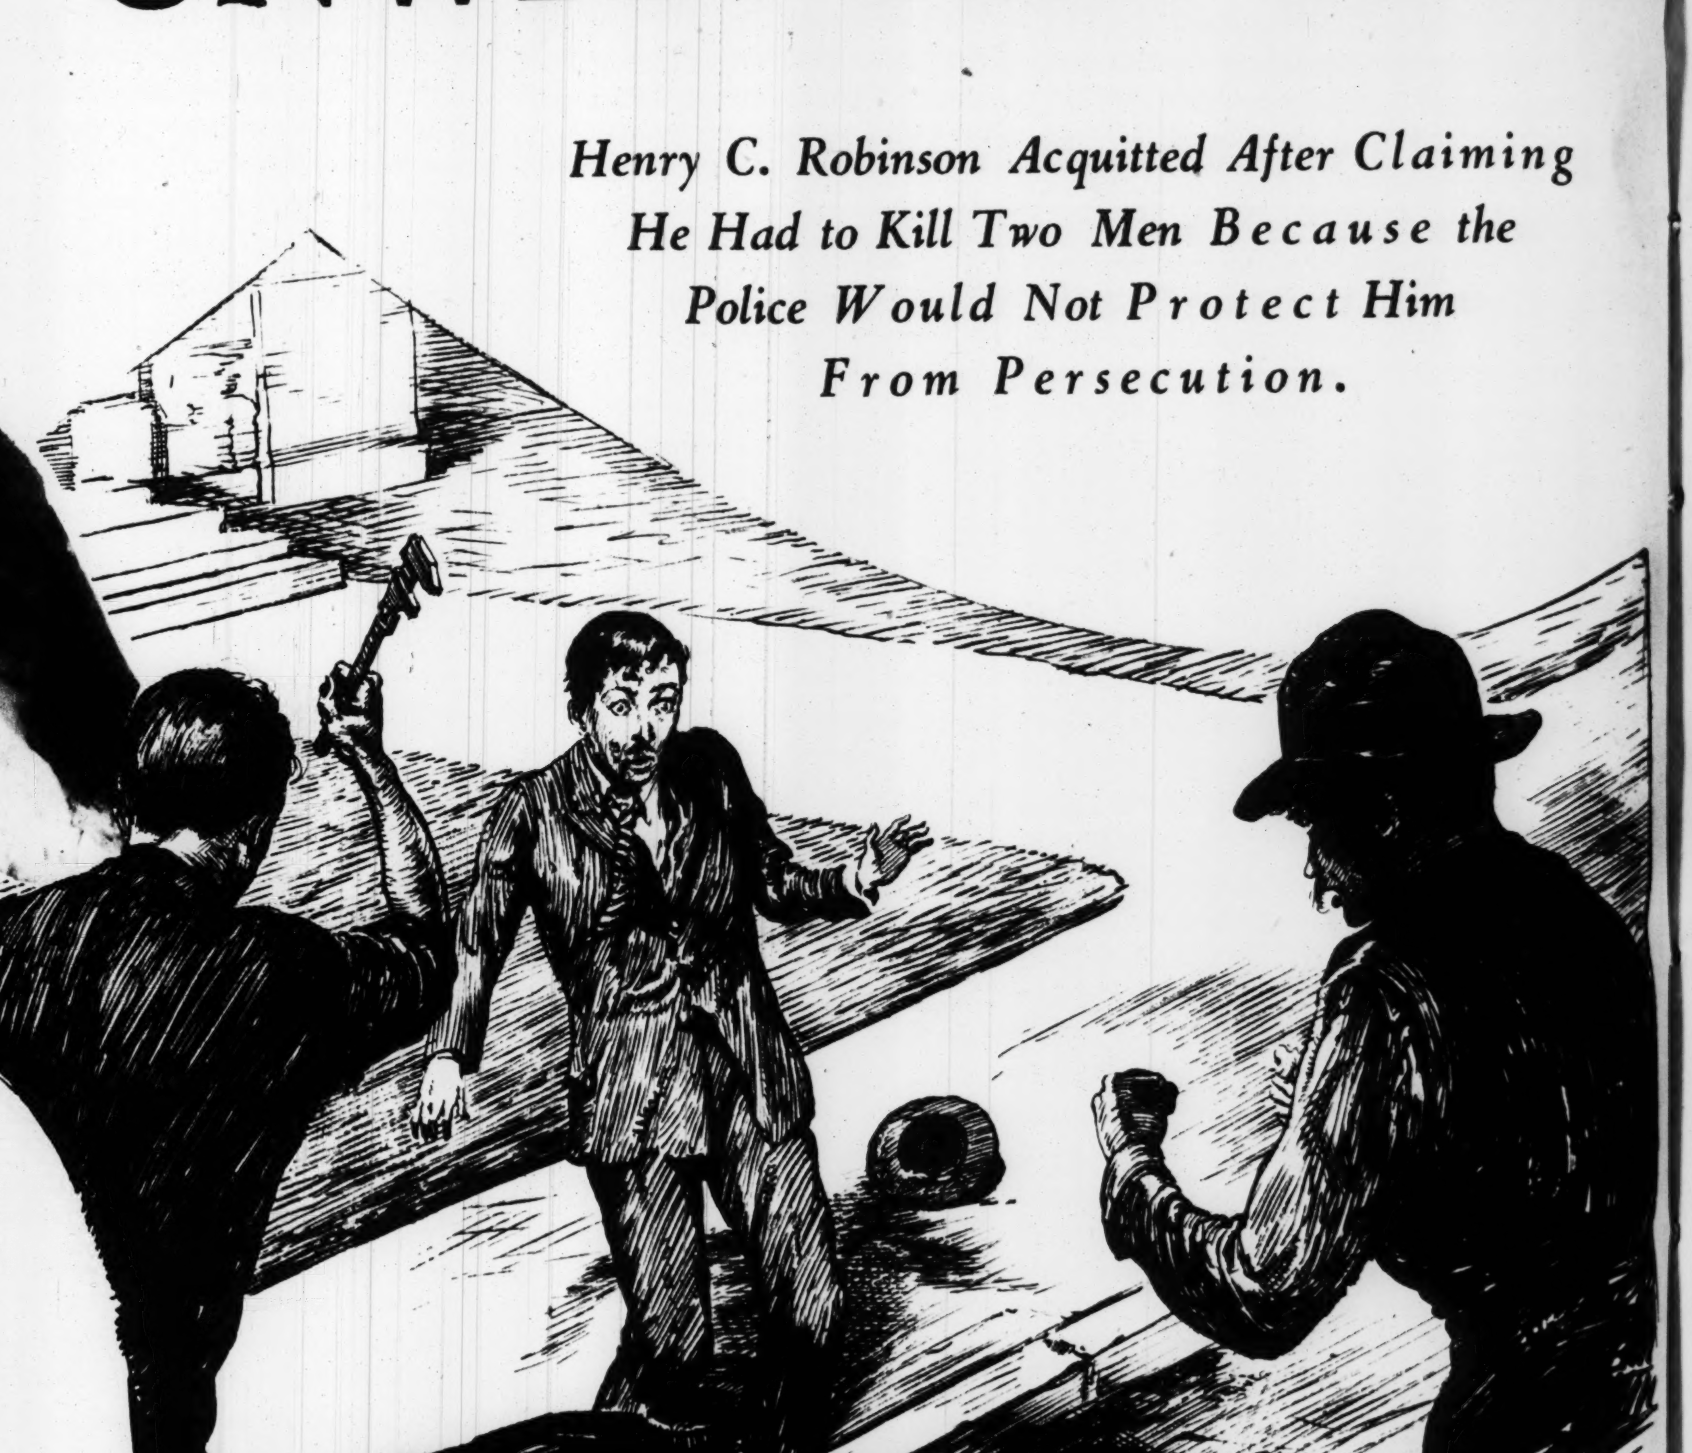
A NEW TWIST to the UNWRITTEN LAW



Henry C. Robinson.

Henry C. Robinson Acquitted After Claiming He Had to Kill Two Men Because the Police Would Not Protect Him From Persecution.



The two men continued advancing toward him.

INTO that code men call "the unwritten law" Virginia has inserted a new precedent — the right of a man to kill his persecutor when the law fails to protect him.

In the most sensational murder case in the history of this historic old town, Henry C. Robinson, 30-year-old aerial photographer, was found not guilty of murder when he was tried for the killing of John M. Johnson, wealthy farmer, and his son, Middleton Johnson, at high noon on the Main street of the town.

Nearly a dozen of the leading citizens of Front Royal saw the killing, and for weeks this entire section of the country was gripped with the most intense feeling, with the country folk demanding death for the killer and the residents of Front Royal demanding his release. But it was the latter who finally won out when, after a trial that lasted almost a week, the jury finally filed into the jammed courtroom and announced that it had reached a verdict.

Robinson, sitting at a table with his pretty young wife on one side of him and his 6-year-old daughter on the other, looked up expectantly. The foreman began:

"After due deliberation we find the defendant guilty"——

Robinson's face dropped, and he bowed his head forward. But the foreman was not through:

——"of justifiable homicide."

Robinson looked up suddenly, a little puzzled. Then, as the realization gradually came to him that it was freedom, not doom, that had been spoken, he burst into tears. His pretty young wife took him in her arms, as she might have taken a small child, and held him for several minutes, stroking his hair. Their little daughter, not understanding what it all meant, but sensing that she should be very happy over something, clapped her hands gleefully. And the new precedent had been written into the unwritten law.

HENRY C. ROBINSON, young and eager to succeed, came to Front Royal about three years ago and opened a studio for portrait work. He was cultured, well dressed, and had a beautiful young wife and infant daughter. Both he and his wife became very popular with residents of the town and were prominent in the young married set, which, in these sections of Virginia horse country, live from one hunting season to another and find life a happy and glorious thing. The Johnsons, on the other hand, have been farmers in this section for several generations, have amassed a considerable fortune and own thousands of acres of land. They are countryfolk at heart, dyed in the wool farmers, and the two men particularly held a cordial disdain and dislike for "city folk."

Just what was the ground for their great animosity towards Robinson has never been learned, but shortly after he and his little family arrived in Front Royal, according to witnesses who were presented at the trial, the two men made it their business to circulate stories about the young photographer which were very damaging to his reputation. Furthermore, they made it a point to publicly insult the young man whenever they met him, and these insults became constantly worse as time wore on. Finally, they began calling him vile names—terms that witnesses at the trial wrote out on paper rather than say openly in the courtroom—and it was these last that caused an open break between the Johnsons and Robinson.

The young photographer, up to that time, had tried to overlook the insults, he told the Court, not wishing to be placed in the position of being an undesirable newcomer. And even though the names were "fighting words," he took no steps, hoping that the animosity would die, and that if he ignored the affronts, they would grow tired of persecuting him and stop.

BUT the two Johnsons, according to witnesses, were drinking heavily and Robinson's system of ignoring them only urged them on and made them angry, rather than causing them to forget. Thus bad blood began to flow between them, and each day Robinson heard of some new insult, or some new occasion upon which they had called him the vile name.

It was this name, really, that finally aroused his ire, and he told friends on several occasions, according to the testimony, that he would kill the next man who used it in his connection, regardless of who the man might be. That, he told the Court, was simply an idle remark, such as anyone might make under the stress of emotion.

And so things went on, going from bad to worse, each day bringing word of some new affront. Finally, the climax came when Robinson was riding down Main street in his automobile and the two Johnsons, in their car, shot out of a side street and smashed into the front wheel of his machine.

Both got out of the car, with a volley of abuse, and, according to witnesses, both appeared to be under the influence of liquor. Robinson was angry, but strove to control himself, simply telling the elder Johnson that he must wait until police arrived. The father then took a wrench out of his car, according to the story told in court, and brandished it in the air, threatening to brain Robinson then and there, but seeing a Deputy Sheriff coming along the street he put the weapon away.

The Deputy Sheriff placed both men under arrest and searched their car, finding in it, he testified, an empty whisky flask. At the trial the State sought to use him as a prosecution witness, and had him testify that he had searched the car carefully but had not seen any wrench in it. The defense, however, wiped out that damage by making him admit that he was looking for whisky, not automobile tools, and might easily have overlooked it.

The damage to Robinson's car was repaired, and the bill of $28.40 was sent to the elder Johnson. He refused to pay it, and Robinson, with a view to making a settlement, went to the Johnson home. He stopped outside and called the son, Middleton, but no one answered, and he went on. At the trial Mrs. Johnson testified that he came in and talked with Middleton, but several witnesses who were with Robinson at the time denied this.

Four days passed, and still the bill was not paid, nor had John Johnson shown the slightest indication that he intended to pay it. In the meantime, however, the two Johnsons had been spending considerable time in the village, loitering about the familiar corner haunts, and having a great deal to say about young Robinson. On four separate occasions, according to the testimony, Middleton told residents of the town that he was going to "get" the young photographer for turning him over to the police at the time of the crash. The stories, of course, immediately got back to Robinson, and he went to the police to ask for aid.

Unfortunately, however, the authorities refused to take the matter seriously, and told Robinson that he was exaggerating the matter. They said that Johnson was really a very likeable fellow, and that the trouble was that Robinson did not understand him. They advised him to say nothing about it and let the matter drop.

But it was not a matter that could be allowed to drop. Each day the alleged slander became worse, and finally, one Saturday morning, when Robinson was on his way home from the studio to lunch, the two Johnsons whisked up to the curb in their car and, jumping out, accosted the young photographer.

They demanded to know, according to witnesses, why he had turned them over to the police, and what he meant by sending them the bill for the damage to his automobile. He reminded the elder Johnson that at the time of the crash he had agreed to pay for the injuries to the car, and Johnson called him a liar. Middleton then chimed in, and when he became abusive, young Robinson warned him to be careful of his language.

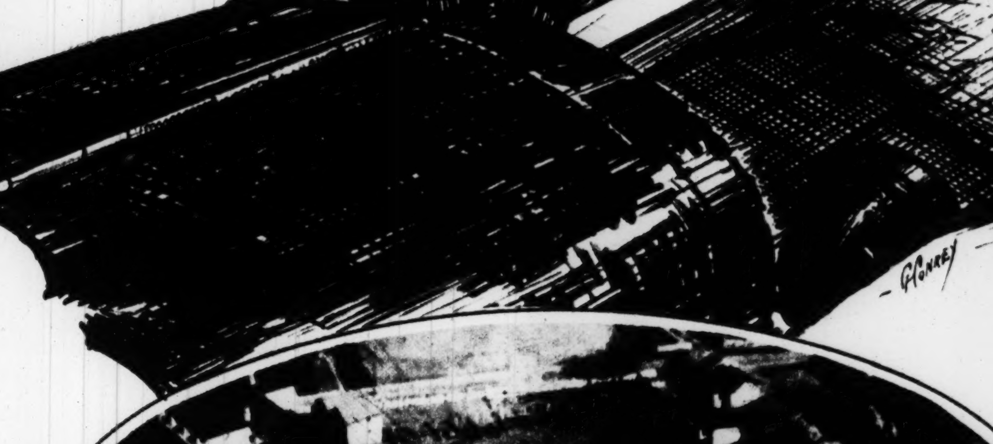
In reply to this warning, the elder Johnson charged forward and sent his fist smashing into Robinson's face. That was the end. The injuries that had been welling up inside the youth for months surged into his blood all at once. The suppressed anger suddenly tore loose and overwhelmed him.

Blood streaming from his mouth, Robinson backed away, crouching. Middleton, the son, had meanwhile run to the car and had procured the trusty wrench from some hiding place, and was coming at him from one side, brandishing the weapon in the air. From the other side of the car came John Johnson, the father, fists doubled up ready to strike again.

AND into this picture stepped the Chief of Police, smiling sweetly, urging the boys not to quarrel. It was to this same Chief of Police that Robinson had appealed thrice before for protection. As the two Johnsons approached threateningly, he screamed:

"Help me, Chief. Can't you see they're going to kill me?"

The Chief, still not taking the matter seriously, only laughed, according to witnesses, and tried to pacify the father and son. But his efforts were like drops of water on a hot stove. The two men kept advancing until they were almost within striking distance.



Photograph taken by Robinson himself showing (1) the scene of the shooting and (2) his studio at Front Royal, Va.

Then, suddenly, Robinson whipped a revolver out of his back pocket and pumped four bullets into the body of the son. Middleton sprawled forward onto the street, and the Chief of Police, screaming for Robinson to stop, jumped out of the way and circled around behind him. He later told the Court he made this move in an effort to capture the gun.

But if he intended capturing it he was too late. No sooner had the last shot been fired into the prostrate form of Middleton than Robinson turned the pistol on the father and poured the rest of the bullets in the magazine into him. The father died almost instantly. Middleton died four hours later in the Front Royal Jail.

As the echoes of the shots died out in the Blue Mountains that encircle the town, Robinson held the gun out to the Police Chief.

"They hit me in the face, Chief, and I couldn't take that," he said. "I'm giving myself up. Let's move along."

Word of the shooting spread through the town like the wind, and then into the outlying sections. Most of the town folk were highly sympathetic to Robinson, but the country residents were hostile in the extreme.

The State based its case on the shooting of Middleton Johnson, considering that the strongest point, because Robinson had shot Middleton when the son had not struck him. John Johnson had struck the blow, and the State feared a self-defense plea in that case.

As a matter of fact, it was self-defense that was used by the defendant's counsel, based on the various threats that the two men are alleged to have made against the young photographer.

TALES of REAL DOGS

Lassie, a Collie That Twice Saved Her Owner.

YOU will remember that the newspapers all over America, in the autumn of 1927, were full of accounts of the terrific floods which devastated so much of New England, causing deaths and incalculable loss of property.

One dam after another burst under the unprecedented pressure of water and cascaded avalanches of flood down into the valleys below. It was a national catastrophe. Incidentally—as with every great catastrophe—it brought forth gallant heroes by the dozen.

One of these heroes—or rather heroines—was a collie dog named Lassie. She belonged to W. N. Chapman, who had a prosperous farm on the outskirts of Springfield, Vermont.

Lassie was a family pet as well as a wise herder and vigilant watchdog. Such a dog pays its own way, tenfold, on any farm. Lassie was destined to do infinitely more to justify her own existence and to reward her owner's care.

One evening in the autumn Mr. Chapman and his wife were sitting by the kitchen fire listening to the torrent of rain that hammered down on the roof. For days it had been raining. The three little Chapman children were fast asleep upstairs. The hour was growing late. Lassie, the watchdog, lay on the porch outside the kitchen.

In the hollow of the meadow below the house the swollen river was roaring so loudly as almost to drown out the pounding noise of the rain. Chapman and his wife were about to go up to bed, secure as ever in the knowledge that Lassie would guard their home safely while they slept.

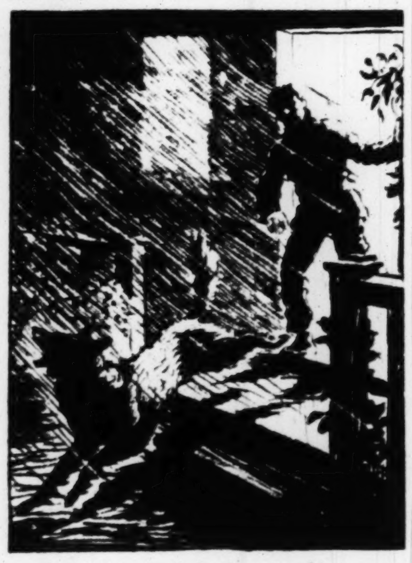
Suddenly the collie burst into frantic barking. She could be heard rushing off the porch and out into the night. Then, through the rain her bark could be heard louder and shriller than before, as she galloped frantically back to the house. Barking, yelling, she tore at the kitchen door with her forepaws, clamoring an alarm.

THINKING she was in play, and fearful lest her racket awaken the children upstairs, Chapman shouted to her to be quiet. Always hitherto she had obeyed her master's every command. But now her barking and scratching grew more insistent. She fairly flung herself against the door, screeching in excitement.

Angrily, Chapman strode to the door and opened it. But Lassie did not enter. Instead she wheeled about and ran down the steps into the darkness, then ran back and tried to draw her master after her. Chapman was convinced by this time that something around the farm was amiss.

Perhaps some of his hogs or cattle had gotten out and Lassie was trying to tell him about it. So, half-reluctantly, he followed the eager collie out into the dooryard and beyond. His wife stood on the threshold, seeking in vain to see 10 feet ahead of her into the dense blackness.

Then her husband called loudly to her, from somewhere below, to bring him a lantern. She did so, running out to see what had befallen him. She found Chapman up to his waist in an ocean of swirling water, Lassie swimming at his side. He was trying to reach the stable to let out the livestock, lest the flood sweep the animals away with the barns.



Lassie wheeled about and ran down the steps.

The river, in a few minutes, had become an ever-higher and wider lake. It threatened to rise far above the level of the knoll on which the Chapman house stood. In another half-hour or less the occupants of the barns must have been drowned and Chapman and his family, in the house, must have been cut off from escape.

The wise collie had heard or smelt the rising of the torrent. Though it was a wholly new experience to her, yet instinct told her it spelt danger to those she was guarding. Therefore, she had galloped up to the house to give the alarm — an alarm for which Chapman had at first bidden her be silent.

Barely had Chapman let out his hogs and cattle when the stable was flooded. Then, as Mrs. Chapman woke the children and carried them, with her husband's aid, to higher ground, the water filled the cellar and began to creep around the porch. At last, neighbors in a boat heard Lassie's shrill barks and found the Chapmans and rescued them.

THEY were told that a dam, just above, had burst and spread its waters everywhere through the valley. But as it was not a large dam, the flood was already beginning to ebb. Presently the waters were so low that the Chapmans went back to their house. The stable and cellar were still flooded, but the upper part of the building was dry. And, at every minute, the waters were receding.

They decided it would be safe to go to bed, as nothing could be done that night toward finding the liberated livestock or repairing damages. Accordingly, they went upstairs to get what sleep they might, leaving Lassie lying on guard on the soaking wet porch.

They were exhausted by the excitement of the past few hours, and all of them slept heavily. A little before dawn, Lassie's frantic barking waked them again. Mrs. Chapman was roused from slumber to find the collie tugging at her bedclothes, stopping every moment or so to bark and bark again.

The collie had gotten into the house somehow, when her barking on the porch failed to wake her owners, and she had run straight to Mrs. Chapman to force her to get up. This time, neither Chapman nor his wife disregarded the vehement warning.

Up they got, gathering the children in their arms and hurrying downstairs. Nothing seemed amiss, anywhere, so far as they could tell through the darkness. They were about to go back to bed once more when a shout from somewhere outside halted them.

"The big dam has just burst!" roared a man as he rode furiously past their house. "Look out for yourselves!"

The "big dam" was many times larger than the one which had burst a few hours earlier. Well did the Chapmans realize what must happen when its released volume of water should come thundering down their valley.

At top speed they hurried out and up the side of a high hill to the house of a neighbor who lived on the summit. They had barely reached this place of safety, with Lassie pattering along beside them, when the flood swept upon the spot they had just quitted.

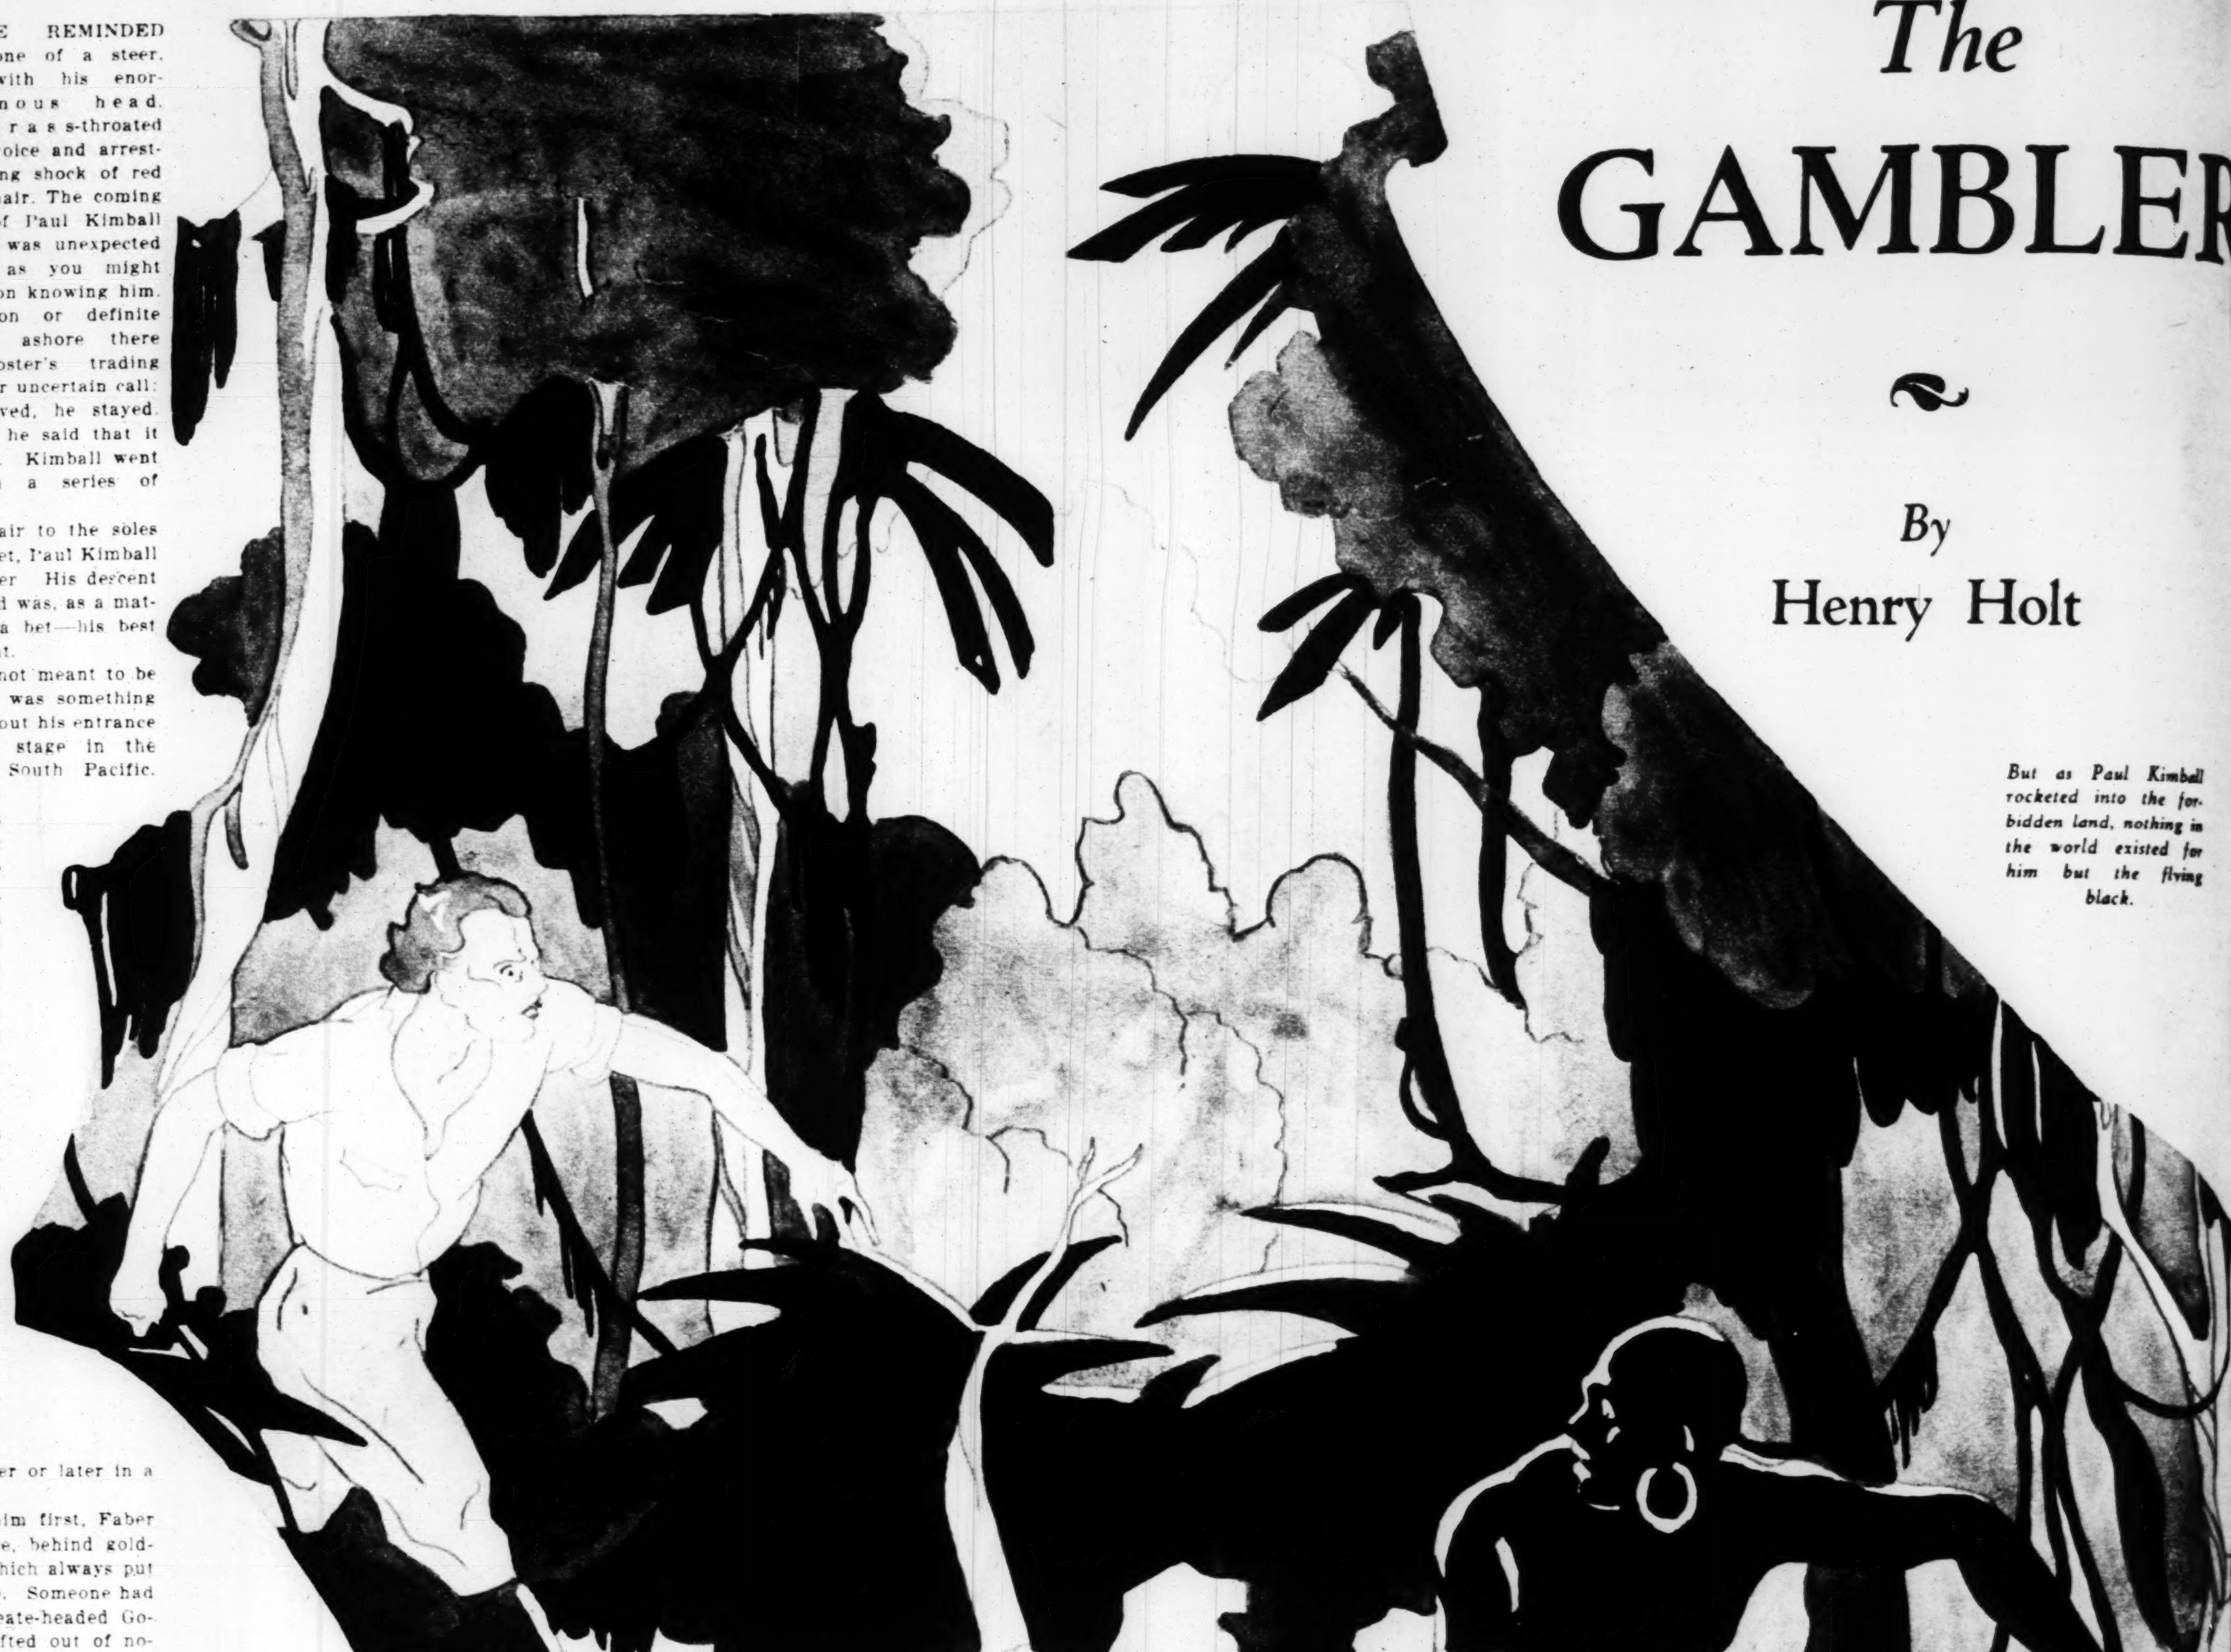
The GAMBLER

By

Henry Holt



But as Paul Kimball rocketed into the forbidden land, nothing in the world existed for him but the flying black.

HE REMINDED one of a steer, with his enormous head, brass-throated voice and arresting shock of red hair. The coming of Paul Kimball to Misery Island was unexpected and unreasoned, as you might have anticipated on knowing him. Without invitation or definite purpose he went ashore there when Tom Foster's trading schooner made her uncertain call; and, having arrived, he stayed. In the afterward he said that it was just a hunch. Kimball went through life on a series of hunches.

From sunset hair to the soles of his extensive feet, Paul Kimball was a born gambler. His descent upon Misery Island was, as a matter of fact, just a bet—his best bet at the moment.

Though it was not meant to be spectacular, there was something rather splendid about his entrance upon that small stage in the black belt of the South Pacific. When the schooner's mud hook was hauled, banging the door of the world upon him, he remained on the beach, 6 feet 2 of manhood, in possession of only one moth-bitten coat, tattered pants, a shirt open at a hairy chest, shoes whose plaited rope soles were coming unraveled, and a deck of cards.

At the moment of the resurrection, Kimball will feel in his pockets to be sure he has a deck of cards with him. Even a nimbus wouldn't be eternally safe in his possession; he might lose it sooner or later in a game of stud.

Faber tackled him first, Faber with the cool stare, behind gold-rimmed glasses, which always put you on your mettle. Someone had to tackle this roseate-headed Goliath who had drifted out of nowhere into a small community where a man must needs know his neighbor inside out.

Besides, Faber's brother was Consul at Tuperi, only 300 miles away, and that always shed about him a reflected air of official authority. But no, Paul Kimball hadn't come to buy nor to sell. Nor had he any clear intentions; he just happened, and was perfectly frank about it, his voice echoing over the coral reefs.

"But what do you want?" asked Faber, slightly piqued because he couldn't look down his nose at 6 feet 2.

A smile flickered under the shock of red hair.

"I've often wondered," he said, "what is the answer?" From the first he had no inclination for Faber. He never had for people who were suspicious of him. But that was understandable: Paul Kimball was a curious complex.

HE WON his first bet, however, with somewhat long odds against him. At almost any other time the half-dozen white men on Misery Island would have resented the idea that a beach comber had strayed ashore; but now he was welcome because Schravendyk, the Dutch planter, was suffering from a bad attack of malaria and gin, and help came as a godsend.

Kimball's installation savored of a state ceremony, and though he knew no more about plantation routine than about the fourth dimension, Schravendyk's servants put in more solid work the first week than they had got through in the previous three months.

But Paul Kimball was a gambler, so that on the seventh day he demanded a week's pay, after which he learned from the Dutchman a little game they play in Holland. The pleasure of teaching it cost Schravendyk the price of half a ton of copra. And this was as wine in the veins of the beach comber, for it comprised his ticket of admission into the only world which counted with him.

The McTavish had Scottish blood, which swayed him one way, and he also had within him the spirit of a daughter of Spain, who had mothered him. This left the McTavish forever poised between the stern, narrow path of caution and other paths less cautious but more alluring. The two conflicting halves of him had in 45 years almost rent his soul in twain.

Up to six years ago he lived in New Hampshire with a wife and four children, disturbed only at rare intervals by a vague thirst for glamour. Then, like the snapping of a carrot, came the irresistible urge, and the blood of his mother became paramount. He issued forth from New Hampshire in quest of fortune and something less tangible, which was beyond his comprehension.

Dutifully, even with the natural affection of a family man, he mailed money home at regular intervals, yet wandered wider afield until, in Misery Island, the thirst for more glowing things than those within his own New Hampshire four walls became gradually assuaged. He wanted to go home. In a small way he had found prosperity, and in the coming fall the fatted calf—he was never a prodigal—was to take upon himself once more the pleasant chains of domesticity.

Of the little white community on Misery Island, Sandy McTavish alone remained without the world of hazard which built itself about Paul Kimball. The giant with red hair was like some opium dreamer in that he ever fostered his love among others. Even Faber of the cool stare and the gold-rimmed glasses sat in, convinced at first that Kimball dealt hands according to his own sweet fancy, then, as fortune fluctuated, less sure that they were nurturing a viper to their bosom.

For Kimball won and Kimball lost, even to the point where his pay for three months to come, excepting a bare 50 cents, shuttled into other hands.

AND then the tide turned. There came to the beach comber one of those curious heady waves of luck which will carry a gambler onward in a steady triumphal march, when everything falls beneath his heel and he knows — knows — that everything will continue to fall up to some indefinite stage which neither science, logic nor intuition can determine.

He had no mercy on these islanders, this true born gambler, for just as he took so would he have expected to pay, even had the stake been his arm or life itself.

Perhaps it was a subtle suggestion from Faber which set the maggots of doubt gnawing in the minds of those with whom Kimball played; perhaps it was largely their own sudden realization that the stranger within their gates was absorbing from them much that he had not earned by the sweat of his brow.

Four months after his ascent upon their horizon the islanders wearied of gambling and the red-headed Goliath found existence savorless. He began to long for the day when Tom Foster's gray-winged schooner would come creeping around the purple headland to bear him to the next scene. Where that scene might be or what the drama or comedy there to be staged might be, he had no notion, nor did he particularly want to know. All life was a gamble, anyway, and who would want to play with transparent cards?

OF THE six white islanders, Sandy McTavish came nearest to displaying friendship toward Kimball. That friendship was a very guarded affair, for the Scottish blood in Sandy was paramount these days. The heritage of carefulness from his father, too, had kept him away from the devil's pictures which chained the others for months, even while his fingers itched to be in the game.

And it was to Sandy McTavish that Kimball went in his melancholy after the curtain had been rung down on the only play which made life endurable for the beach comber. Night after night the two sat on the veranda of the Scot's bungalow nestling among the foothills, behind which towered mountains of mystery, where, unseen, there lived black humanity, primitive and treacherous.

Then, mercifully, came the schooner bobbing in the ground swell, to bear away cargo and Kimball. All afternoon under a sweltering sun natives sweated in the surf boat, bringing in supplies and taking out interminable loads of copra. When swift nightfall came the task remained unfinished. Tom Foster's schooner was to sail the following forenoon.

A blatant moon hung theatrically, dripping its madness on white and black alike. On the balcony of Sandy McTavish's bungalow Kimball and the half-Scot sat, only a fine screen sheltering them from countless millions of insects which droned and buzzed. As ever in that exotic belt, night was athrob, strange pulses beating out there under the vast silvery lantern of the moon.

These were the hours, with their tang of mystery, when Sandy McTavish wondered how far New Hampshire, and that which it held for him, would be unsatisfying. He was fond of Janette and the children, but Janette was consistently prosaic. Albeit, she had been a good wife, forever watchful of the children's interests.

A night bird screeched from the top of a high tree. McTavish snuffed up the odor of Misery Island, with its countless suggestions and its blend which never yet drifted over New Hampshire.

"I'll be following you away from here the next time the schooner calls," he said to Kimball behind the glow of a long, rank cigar, "but I'll tell you, it's queer. I want to go back and I want to stay. If it wasn't for Janette and the kids I guess I'd end my days here. Still, you can't jump two ways at once. Say, are you any judge of pearls?"

KIMBALL smiled. Pearling, that greatest of all tropic gambles, had inevitably claimed him at one time—drawn him with a full wallet and left him, as so many other things had in turn left him, penniless.

"I've handled a few," replied Kimball.

Sandy rose, went indoors, and presently returned with a chamois bag. He poured a handful of pearls on to a dark cloth, where they shone with an opalescent luster.

"What d'you think of 'em, Kimball?"

Kimball poked them about with a big finger, allowed one or two of the largest to rest in his great palm, the better to examine them.

"Hell, man! Where did you get those?" he exclaimed. "They're worth a wad in the right market."

"A good many thousand, I guess, when they're safe in New York. I've picked 'em up cheap, one or two at a time, in the last few years."

SANDY rummaged among them for a few moments before finding one particular pearl.

"A man called Duguid sold me that for a case of whisky before he drowned himself two years ago.

"Those two were given to me by the skipper of a tramp steamer off Viti Levu because, he said, he'd never have any use for 'em once the ship touched port. We ran into Suva and they hanged the skipper three months later at Sydney.

"That big one was stolen by a one-eyed Kanaka from a Jap pearler. Lord, what fingers that Jap had! I can see him now as he slid the Kanaka overboard. Gosh, ain't it queer!" McTavish paused for a moment. "Some day a woman will wear these strung over her white flesh and other women will slant their eyes at 'em enviously. And there isn't a damned pearl there which hasn't got a history a man would hesitate to tell his own daughter exactly how it happened.

"They represent the savings of Sandy McTavish in five years. These and the bit I've got tucked away in my jeans are going to stand between Janette and starvation for the rest of her days. Not that she'll ever know about the red stuff they're stained with."

Kimball's hand strayed to his hip pocket. From it he drew a deck of cards, which he quietly put on the table between them, allowing his thumb to flick once only along their edge. It was his answer, entirely characteristic.

McTavish bit on the end of his cigar and returned Kimball's look through half-closed eyes.

"Five years' savings, I said," came from him almost defiantly.

Kimball shrugged, and from the inside of his moth-bitten coat produced all he had won on Misery Island.

"I don't want to corrupt your morals," he said, "but there won't be another chance after tonight."

A bird screeched from the top of some high panyani tree . . . the moon dripped its madness . . .

TWO men faced one another on that veranda, one wild-eyed, gnawing at his tawny mustache, the other cold, ruthless, a born gambler, who had staked his all and who expected his pound of flesh if he won, just as much as he expected to pay if he lost. Between them lay 10 cards, five in front of each man, turned downward; and in the center of the table, cheek by jowl with Kimball's money, were clustered the pearls of Sandy McTavish.

Sandy's future rested on that which he was watching—the big fingers of a red-headed Goliath turning over the bits of pasteboard—one king—two, three, four kings!

A soft hiss in the night air, the twang of something crashing through the screen, and the sound of a heavy club which bit into McTavish's skull. Also, for a moment, out there in the bright moonlight, a dark form—one of the primitive myst from the gray mount beyond the foothills.

The enormous head of Kim shot back, and his eyes bl even as his cry that was half- boomed. There was no McTavi the earthy case that had held h slid to the floor in a heap.

With a bound, trumpeting l a wounded elephant, the be comber burst bodily through th screen, down into the compo eyes which still blazed fixed the dark form scuttering into nut groves, where every p stood out clear and gaunt in t vast overhead spotlight. Suicide Note That Was Taken From a Movie Scenario

And How It Caused a Murder Charge to Be Lodged Against Mrs. Hugo Pernetta and Her Friend, Johannes Gleissner.

BERLIN.

A SHORT time before he ended his life, a year ago, Hugo Pernetta, an Italian fruit dealer of this city, wrote a scenario for the movies. It may have been that the morbid state of mind which eventually led him to suicide was even then at work, for his screen story constituted a grewsome and depressing excursion into the realm of suicide and murder. It dealt with a murder in which the slayer almost escaped detection by "planting" evidence to make the crime look like a case of self-destruction. The evidence in question was a suicide note which read as follows:

"I have lost my honor, my fortune and the love of my children. Therefore, I am tired of life."

As Pernetta's talents lay more in the line of fruit marketing than in writing, his work fell short of even the standard acceptable to the movies and he was unable to find a market for it. But he was very proud of his attempt, nevertheless, and especially pleased with the wording of that fake suicide note. Indeed, he liked it so well that when his melancholia drove him to take his own life he left behind him a note couched in the selfsame words. Witness the strange and ironic result.

Where in the fictional instance it had shielded a murderer and convinced the investigators of suicide, it accomplished precisely the reverse in real life. It immediately stamped a real suicide's death as a murder and came dangerously near causing the execution of an innocent woman as his slayer. After being twice arrested on suspicion and held during a long investigation which involved exhumation of her late husband's body, Mrs. Pernetta, an English woman, has just been released and the blot on her character erased.

Mrs. Pernetta was not the only one to be brought under suspicion by the curious circumstances surrounding her husband's death. Johannes Gleissner, another fruit dealer and a friend of the Pernetta family, also was caught in the net of circumstantial evidence and accused of complicity in the supposed murder. He, too, was held during the investigation, which, thanks to the testimony of physicians and handwriting experts, finally cleared up the case as a suicide.

IN VIEW of the unusual bits of evidence, it was not surprising that both the fruit dealer's widow and Gleissner should have been suspected. The first thing to suggest that something was wrong was the suicide letter, found in Pernetta's bedroom, where his body lay, shot through the temple. Struck with its resemblance to the letter in the screen story, investigators hunted down the scenario manuscript to check the two. Probably this move was inspired more by curiosity than suspicion, but at any rate its result was significant, for it was found that the page containing the fictional suicide note was missing. Comparisons were made and it developed that the note found not only filled the gap in the manuscript but had been written on the same kind of paper and apparently with the same kind of pen and ink.

Mrs. Hugo Pernetta.

Johannes Gleissner.

These findings at once suggested that the fictional note had been taken from the manuscript and, with Pernetta's signature forged, had been "planted" beside the body to explain, in Pernetta's own handwriting, his death as a suicide. Obviously that indicated murder, and the authorities then cast about for clews as to the identity of the slayer. They found plenty of these, too.

About the first fact of importance they learned was that Pernetta, for some time, had been estranged from his wife and that she had been a bit more than friendly with Gleissner, who was 10 years her junior and who had left his own wife shortly after making her acquaintance. Then when they learned that the revolver with which Pernetta had been killed belonged to Gleissner, the case against the pair seemed clinched. They were taken into custody at once and subjected to a grilling in the hope they would confess.

But they didn't confess. The more they were grilled the stronger became their denials of guilt, and they were never tangled in their stories. Each stuck steadfastly to the same version, denying their friendship had caused trouble in either household or that it was, in any way, improper. As to the weapon, Gleissner stoutly maintained it had been loaned to Pernetta months before and never returned. Although the authorities were convinced of their guilt, there was no conclusive evidence upon which to hold them longer, and they were released but kept under surveillance.

MEANWHILE, the papers in the case were sent to the public prosecutor. After reviewing the evidence, he, too, was convinced there had been murder and ordered the exhumation of Pernetta's body, which had been in its grave almost a year. At the same time the farewell letter and the scenario manuscript were placed in the hands of a handwriting expert for examination.

Why Pernetta's body was not thoroughly examined before its burial is not clear. Apparently, it was a case of bungling on the part of the local authorities, who didn't think much of the murder theory until it was discovered the suicide note was missing from the manuscript. Had a careful autopsy been made at the outset, a lot of trouble would have been avoided, for examination of the body, even after a year, disclosed two important facts. One was that the wound in his temple was one typical of suicides and of such a nature that it could hardly have been other than self-inflicted. The second point of importance was the finding that Pernetta had met his death two hours after taking a meal.

Here was something definite to work with. Investigation showed that on the day of his death, May 12, 1927, he had taken a meal at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. That fixed the time of his death at 4:30 p. m. The question then was, where were Mrs. Pernetta and Gleissner at that hour? Witnesses at once came forward to prove they were not in the Pernetta home and, indeed, were several miles away at the time.

These disclosures left only the matter of the suicide note to be cleared up and a graphological expert quickly took care of that. He testified that the date and the signature on the note were written with the same ink and with the same pen as the text and, further, that the entire letter was undoubtedly in Pernetta's handwriting. This proved that the letter found with the body was not identical with that of the film manuscript, even if the wording did happen to be the same. What had become of the missing part of the manuscript was never learned, but it was believed that Pernetta probably had removed it in order to copy it and had then destroyed the original.

With such evidence in hand, it was impossible to hold the prisoners longer. The fruit merchant's death was finally accepted as a suicide and they were released, but Pernetta's insistence on employing that ready-made suicide note had given them a close call.

had to make a rush and I was down. They took me back to the Sherif's house, where I was tied hands and feet again and left in a room guarded by the Sherif himself. I do not think that good old man wanted the captured French youth to die so horrible a death. But in this case he could do nothing."

For five days Klems was bound. During this time the beautiful 14-year-old daughter of the Sherif tended and consoled him. He had now learned the Beni Warrenne dialect so well that he could speak it with some fluency. When he was released he was again given menial work to do. "You must not think," he said of the whole episode, "that I am soft-hearted because I could not endure the idea of a Frenchman's being buried alive with jackals eating his head; that revolted me only because it was fiendishly cruel. In actual fight I like to kill people, especially Frenchmen."

Shortly afterward he was made a full-fledged Beni Warrenne warrior and accompanied the tribesmen on every raid. His services were invaluable, since he knew the tactics of the French so thoroughly. Four months later he married Sherif Hassan's daughter. "She was in love with me, of course, from the time I came into the house," he explained. "Arab girls are always in love with the first stranger they see. She was my first Arab wife, I learned much from her."

WHENEVER he was able to work any damage against the French, he left his name scrawled on a piece of paper —"El-Hadj Aleman"—the German pilgrim. In the winter of 1921-1922 he went on a solitary reconnaissance expedition alone across French Morocco to the Sahara. He would have been shot out of hand if the French authorities had caught up with him.

"I made up my mind to leave the Beni Warrenne," he continued. "It would be necessary to do so secretly; for they were a little watchful of me now, since my experience gave them greater chances of success than they would have had under another leader and they did not want me to leave them again. I sold my flocks, in a quiet way, and got together some money in Spanish silver, which would be useful later on. It affected me somewhat, I admit, to leave my wife, who was still pretty and had a little son; but she was, after all, only one woman, and no doubt there were prettier women in the Rif."

After a slight delay, he was able to make his way uninterrupted to the Sultan Abd el-Krim.

"Abd el-Krim questioned me shrewdly on my whole past and drew out of me about everything there was to confess. He saw me ride; he saw me map the country around Ait Kamara; he tried me out on a chemical analysis. Then he gave me a chance to show my skill in photography. In the end—it took about three weeks for him to decide—he made me a caid in his own guards with special functions as topographer.

"WHEN he decided to trust me, he was generous. He does not always—indeed, not often—trust a deserter; but when he does, it is to the deserter's good. He gave me a wife, a mule and a house immediately, so that I had a real home in the Rif. The house is at Adjdir, and that wife now has two companions in the harem. One of these, Fat'ma—two of my wives are named Fat'ma, as half of all Arab women are—has a son whom I have called Mahommed. She is very pretty and very good, the little Fat'ma, and she weaves very well. The clothes I wear are made by her, and the cloth was woven by her. I have not been home since September, but I have no uneasiness about my family. Adjdir is much safer than Paris or Berlin for women and children. My son shall grow up to be a real Riffi, I hope, and will never go outside this country to learn the evil ways of what you call civilization."

Klems was invaluable as a mapmaker to Abd el-Krim. The French placed a huge bounty on his head. "You needn't think it is a tame job to be making maps after a career spent chiefly in fighting," he said. "Map-making is much more dangerous and a good deal more exciting than fighting because it demands solitary reconnaissance, which I do myself. I mapped a post near Tetuan from a place not five feet from a Spanish machine-gun nest. I have mapped every inch of the ground about the present Spanish front, and you may believe it was exciting work."

He ended his narrative thus:

"And that is how I come to be here. But as for why I stay—well, this is my place. There is very little left for any man to do in Christian civilization if he wants excitement, pleasure or happiness. The only world fit for a man to live in is the Mahommedan world. Germany? Herr Gott! I am a Riffi and my children shall be Riffi, and Germany is only a lesson I have learned in my childhood. I have outgrown the lesson and all the lessons of the Christians. May Allah be praised!"

LESS than a year after this vaunt he fell. Abd el-Krim was captured and sent to exile on the French island of Reunion with the wives of his harem and a few members of his immediate family.

Klems was captured later only after a terrific fight. With 42 wounds in his body, he was carried on a stretcher before a French courtmartial and in reply to the sentence of death he shouted:

"You can shoot me if you want. I am not afraid, but I am no traitor. I am a naturalized Arab who has fought for the freedom of his people and his country against the brutal yoke and usurpation of a foreign power."

He was sentenced to death last September. Then the French authorities relented and for some time his fate was in the balance. At last came the decision to send this soldier of fortune, with the face like that of a hawk, to Devil's Island, where death comes slowly and painfully, not swiftly and mercifully.

tives stared at the party of white men. Cook claimed the islands for England, naming them the Sandwich Islands, in honor of his patron, Lord Sandwich. Still Cook drove his two ships, "The Resolution" and "The Discovery," eastward. The northwest passage between the two oceans was an obsession with mariners of the time.

His course took him along the shores of what are now Oregon and Washington, through the numerous inlets on the British Columbia coast and on along the Alaskan shores to Bering Strait. After extended reconnaissances he concluded definitely that no northwest passage existed. He began his voyage back to the warmer waters of the South Seas. One year later from the time he had first set foot upon Hawaiian soil he sailed his two ships into Kealakekua Bay, Island of Hawaii.

This time he found thousands of natives gathered on the shore to greet him as the god of peace and plenty, Rono, who ruled the islands in ages past when true paradise was on earth. Rono had said: "I will return in after times on an island bearing trees and swine and dogs."

At first Cook enjoyed the experience of being a god, but it soon grew tiresome. It was impossible to do any exploration without 20 or more adoring natives at his heels. He wearied of the continued adulation. Finally he decided to set sail and return later. But a fierce storm assailed his boats when he was but a short way from the island and he was forced to put back.

In the legend of Rono there was nothing about his returning a second time. Moreover, skepticism had begun to spread. The charm had lost its efficacy and even a god could wear out his welcome. Also, incidents had occurred upon the first visit which seemed to discredit Cook's godlike qualities. One of the crew died, and Cook, unaware that he and his men were supposed to be immortal, buried the man publicly. Some of the sailors also had removed a wooden fence around a sacred image in order to get some fuel for a fire. This desecration had displeased the Hawaiians, although at the time they had thought little of the matter.

THE night of February 13, 1779, some natives stole a cutter from one of Cook's vessels. Cook went ashore to seize the king and hold him as a hostage until the boat could be recovered and the culprits punished. The king was willing to go with Cook but his people protested. They became so threatening in their attitude that Cook retreated to the shore with the party of marines which he had taken along for protection.

They remained there all night, on the watch against a possible uprising. When morning came, Cook signaled his ships to send a boat for him and his men. The natives, in a mass, ran down to the beach and attacked the handful of Englishmen. Cook fought desperately but was separated from his men and surrounded. One native struck him over the head with a club and as he fell forward another stabbed him in the back. The remainder of Cook's party were rescued by their comrades and later the natives were persuaded to give up Cook's body, which was buried with honors in the bay. Almost a century later an obelisk, surrounded by a square of old-fashioned cannons as a fence, was erected by the officers of a British warship.

The degeneration and deterioration of the Polynesians, not only in Hawaii, but in almost every other island, has been constant since the advent of white men. The diseases and vices of "civilization" swiftly undermined them and they dwindle in number each year.

Innumerable recent books testify to the decay of the natives of the Society Islands, notably those of Tahiti, which is one of the loveliest of the entire group. Virtually the same thing has been true in Hawaii. The Hawaiians have mixed with every race until now some of the most surprising racial admixtures are to be seen. The pure native type has all but disappeared. The function of the Polynesians here today is to add the "picturesque" touch and perform the labors considered beneath the white man's dignity. They are a rather sad lot, like corrupted and diseased children. Or they are thoroughly Americanized.

The last native ruler was Queen Liliuokalani, who attempted, in 1893, to abrogate the constitution and establish an absolute monarchy. Upon this the "constitutional party" dethroned her, established the Republic of Hawaii and named as President S. B. Dole, who virtually defied the United States to interfere when Queen Lil complained to President Cleveland of the treatment accorded by foreigners to the native population.

HE WAS the son of missionaries and had been born on the island but educated at Williams College, in Massachusetts. So successful was his defiance that the United States refrained from intervention. Later, however, he furthered annexation.

The Dole family has for long been important in Hawaiian affairs. James B. Dole controls enormous pineapple estates. It was he who offered the $35,000 prize for a flight to Hawaii with which so many mishaps were connected. The sugar and pineapple industries of the island are almost entirely in the hands of Americans, as are the large de luxe hotels to which each year thousands of visitors come.

These hotel interests are remarkably successful in preserving the illusion of a paradise untainted. The bronzed bodies of the surf riders, the familiar "Aloha Oe," the flower garlands that float on the crests of the great waves in the wake of each receding steamer, the green and glowing verdure of the island itself, all contribute to this illusion. And these things in a sufficiently pleasant degree are carefully cultivated and preserved. It is a paradise now for golfers and fortnight visitors, but not for the natives, who hailed the white men as gods 150 years ago.

the agility of a cat he swung himself up, whimpering; then, in panic, crawled higher and still higher, ever whimpering.

A shout of triumph came from the deep throat of Kimball. Like a gorilla he followed up, up. The topmost bough bent under the black's weight; bent farther as he scuttled higher, until four fingers and a thumb closed about his ankles and he was pulled from the thin branch, at which he clawed frantically.

For a moment the black swung, kicking, head downward, until Kimball, bracing himself in the fork of the tree, seized the native's other ankle. With a twist of his mighty wrist he took the bakki by the throat and legs and cracked him upon his knee, then let the dead thing slip through space.

Kimball climbed down and stood for a moment in the moonlight, all sense of time and direction temporarily lost. His coat, half torn from his back, flapped in the breeze. Thorns had ripped his trousers into ribbons. A wet smear ran along his cheek. Dazed, he turned down the slope and stalked on. Presently he reached familiar ground, then crossed the nut grove to a bungalow which nestled, eerily quiet, among the foothills.

WITH heavy steps he mounted to the veranda. Two empty chairs, a table on which stood glasses, a bottle, a mess of pearls, money and 10 cards, five facing upward and five turned down. Kimball knelt grunting by the still form of McTavish and his lips moved. If it should have been a prayer, it wasn't.

"I guess you're quits on that deal," he muttered, and carried all that was left of Sandy McTavish indoors.

Then he returned to the veranda. Slowly, one by one, he turned over the five cards which had lain before McTavish. Four of them were aces.

Half an hour later, Faber, sitting with three other islanders, frowned as Kimball walked through the screen door on to his veranda.

"McTavish is dead. One of the hill men killed him with a bolo," he announced simply. "He's got folks back in the States. You fellows will be sending his stuff on, won't you?"

"Dead!" broke from Faber. "Good God! Why, yes, I s'pose we'll have to"——

"Send these along, too," said Kimball.

In front of the four men he laid a bundle of money and a chamois bag containing pearls. Then he stalked away. Kimball was a gambler, every inch of him, but the stakes belonged to Sandy's Janette, according to his own code.

When Funny Faces Had a Serious Significance

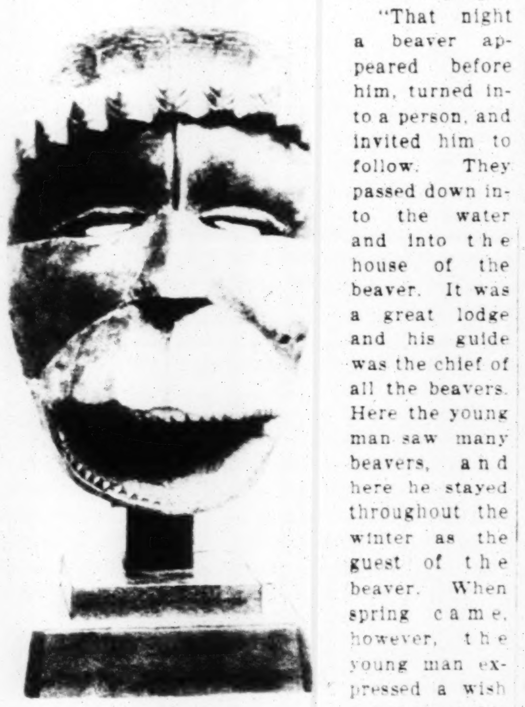
Demon Masks Worn by Earth's Primitive Peoples Were Seldom Put On in a Spirit of Levity, According to Dr. Clark Wissler of the American Museum of Natural History.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

FUNNY faces, nowadays, are worn with a view to amusing, and sometimes frightening, little children. Their purpose in the past, however, has not always been so devoid of significance, according to Dr. Clark Wissler, curator-in-chief of the American Museum of Natural History, writing in the current number of the museum's publication, Natural History.

Dr. Wissler points out the serious nature of the religious ceremonies surrounding the use of the false face, or mask, and outlines, in answer to a hypothetical question as to why museums pay so much attention to them, the importance these apparently insignificant visages have enjoyed in the past.



A Congo "funny face."

There is, perhaps, scarcely a type of primitive civilization that does not make some provision for the use of masks in its tribal customs, according to Dr. Wissler. The Iroquois Indians he regards simply as a typical instance.

"There is something impressive in Iroquois false faces," Dr. Wissler comments. "They have a striking individuality, especially in the treatment of the eyes and the mouth. Carved from single blocks of wood, with cavernous eyeholes, strong noses and protruding lips, the face framed in with long hair falling loosely from a wig, such images peering from the shadows of open fires, around which Indians love to gather, impress themselves too deeply on the mind to be forgotten."

The trouble with our interpretation of the mask is, according to Dr. Wissler, that we attribute our own ways of thinking to the savage mind. Because we put little or no value upon them, tolerating them only in light, frivolous associations, we fail to see how the savages could regard them otherwise. But they were seriously used, and to quote Dr. Wissler once again:

"The masks are part of the regalia worn in savage ceremonies, chiefly religious. Such ceremonies may have many features, but most of them possess regalia and a ritual in which are songs and dances. Here, again, we often misjudge the savage, for to us a dance is anything but religious, and so his dancing upon such occasions, if it does not shock us, at least provokes pity for his lack of understanding."

No matter to what part of the world we turn, we find the belief that these ceremonies, songs and dances were not designed by man but were given to him ready-made and in some mysterious fashion, just as in the case of the Iroquois Indian who started the False Face Society. Someone, remarks Dr. Wissler, some time, usually in the good old times now passed, met a supernatural being who taught him the whole ceremony.

To take an example:

"An interesting Indian tale recounts the experiences of a young man who wandered out alone. Coming at last to a place where the beavers had a dam and their houses in the water, he sat down to meditate. Those beavers, he thought to himself, must possess some extraordinary power to do as they do, and so he resolved to sleep there, hoping that the chief of the beavers might take pity on him and help him to attain to a place of power and respect among his own people.

"That night a beaver appeared before him, turned into a person, and invited him to follow. They passed down into the water and into the house of the beaver. It was a great lodge and his guide was the chief of all the beavers. Here the young man saw many beavers, and here he stayed throughout the winter as the guest of the beaver. When spring came, however, the young man expressed a wish to return to his people. So the beaver called into his lodge all the head beavers and, becoming like people, they performed a ceremony, teaching the young man their songs and dances."

Then, as Dr. Wissler continues to narrate, the lad was conducted to the dry ground, to his old camping place, and so returned to his people, where he started the ceremony he learned from the beaver. Commenting on this legend, Dr. Wissler states:

"WHEN we review this tale, we note, first, that there appeared to the Indian a beaver which took on human qualities, because it spoke to the Indian and conferred upon him powers and imparted information, and so the Indian started a ceremony. But what is this ceremony like?

"It begins with a narrative like the preceding; then the leader of the ceremony takes the part of the beaver, other participants are the beaver's helpers and, finally, one person takes the place of the original hero, who is said to have been received into their lodge by the beavers.

"The ritual which follows is supposed to repeat the events, step by step, by which the beaver conferred this ritual upon the first Indian. In other words, the incident is staged with an appropriate cast and the participants become, in a way, players presenting a drama."

This applies not only to this particular ritual, but, as Dr. Wissler remarks, is well-nigh universal among mankind, primitive and civilized:

"Naturally, rituals and symbolic procedures believed to have originated with mythical beings cannot well be demonstrated except through the impersonation of these mythical beings who, as we have stated, while often conceived of as animals or birds, are also human, having a kind of alternating personality, exceeding the power of real human beings as well as animals in that they can change their bodily forms and do other things impossible for either animals or humans.

"The wearing of a mask is the usual method of impersonating these mythical human beings or their animal counterparts. When the American Indian impersonates the buffalo, he may put the skin of the head over his own head and look out through the eye holes.

"The effect may be heightened by having the whole skin fall over the shoulders of the wearer and down the back, the characteristic buffalo tail dangling below. Also the bear plays a part in the mythologies of many peoples and so is impersonated with great frequency."

That dancing with an animal mask is an old, old custom is shown by certain Stone Age pictures upon the walls of caves in France, Dr. Wissler asserts.

"One of these shows a dancer wearing the skin and head of a deer, while in another cave are three dancers in a row, with heads and skins of chamois or similar animals. These last seem to be dancing by jumping up and down, holding the feet together, as do the native women in Australia when imitating the kangaroo."

IT IS difficult to summarize the distribution of masks among the earth's many races, according to Dr. Wissler, but it may safely be said that "the intensive use of masks is more frequent in the western highlands of the two Americas than in other sections." Dr. Wissler continues:

"The most elaborate and also the most artistic masks were, as may be expected, among the old native civilizations of Peru in South America and of the Maya and the later Aztec in Mexico and Central America. Among the simplest and crudest were those of the Eskimo of the far north and of the Ona near Cape Horn.

"The Ona usually cover the head and face with a piece of rawhide, upon which are painted a few spots in color to symbolize the spirit represented. One particular mask of this kind, according to the descriptions of observers, bore red and white spots, the emblem of the god of the heavens. Shifting to the far north, the Eskimo around Hudson Bay used a few simple masks of skin, rather loosely fitted to the face and bea simple markings."

Ella's still in Chinatown with her father —
DID YOU YOUNGSTERS EVER HEAR THE CHINESE LEGEND ABOUT THE MAGIC BALL OF IN CHI, WHICH SAVED HIS LIFE, WON FOR HIM A FORTUNE, AND RESTORED THE EMPEROR'S HEALTH?
NO! TELL US, DADDY!
IN CHI, WHO WAS A VERY SMALL PERSON, WAS THE SON OF A POOR CHEMIST, IN WONG, AND WORKED IN HIS FATHER'S SHOP—
SHORTLY BEFORE THE AGED IN WONG ASCENDED THE DRAGON TO THE LAND OF ETERNAL BLISS, HE GAVE IN CHI A MAGIC BALL, WHICH HE DECLARED WOULD MAKE IN CHI'S FORTUNE—IF USED PROPERLY—
FOR SEVERAL YEARS, IN CHI EXPERIMENTED WITH THE BALL, TRYING TO DISCOVER HOW ITS MAGIC WOULD WORK— BUT NOTHING HAPPENED. THE BALL KEPT ITS SECRET—
NOW, AT THIS TIME, THE EMPEROR TSU SI TI FELL ILL. IN VAIN THE IMPERIAL COOKS TRIED TEMPTING HIS APPETITE WITH HUMMING-BIRDS' TONGUES AND OTHER DELICACIES. HE GREW SICKER, MORE PEEVISH, DANGEROUSLY BAD TEMPERED—
東
石見子
AT LENGTH HE SENT COURIERS TO BRING BEFORE HIM ALL THE CHEMISTS OF THE CITY, THAT THEY MIGHT MIX HIM A MEDICINE TO CURE HIS ILLNESS. AMONG THEM WAS IN CHI—
THE CHEMISTS DID THEIR BEST. THEY MADE POTIONS OF DRAGONS' BLOOD, EAGLES' FEATHERS, SEA-SERPENTS' SCALES—AND THE EMPEROR FELT WORSE. AS EACH CHEMIST FAILED TO CURE THE EMPEROR, HE WAS SENTENCED TO DEATH—
THEN CAME IN CHI'S TURN, HIS LIFE AT STAKE. HE MADE A SILENT PRAYER TO HIS ANCESTORS, AND RECEIVED A SUDDEN INSPIRATION, AS THOUGH HIS FATHER HAD SPOKEN—
BOLDLY IN CHI SAID TO THE EMPEROR: "THIS MAGIC BALL WILL CURE YOU, IF FOR EIGHT DAYS YOU WILL THROW IT ABOUT, RUN AFTER IT, AND PICK IT UP. THAT IS THE ONLY WAY TO MAKE ITS MAGIC EFFECTIVE."
THE EMPEROR TRIED IN CHI'S PRESCRIPTION. HE THREW THE BALL, STOOPED TO PICK IT UP, PERSPIRING PROFUSELY, AND BEFORE EIGHT DAYS PASSED DECLARED HIMSELF CURED—ALL HE NEEDED WAS TO GIVE HIMSELF THE AIR—AND LET EXERCISE, RATHER THAN HIS MAJESTY, DO THE REST!
SO DELIGHTED WAS TSU SI TI THAT HE PARDONED ALL THE OTHER LUCKLESS CHEMISTS, CONFERRED GOLD AND JEWELS ON IN CHI, AND MADE HIM COURT CHEMIST, SO AS TO KEEP HIM REMINDED OF HIS DAILY DOZEN OR SO—
SO THAT WAS THE ORIGINAL MEDICINE-BALL—AND DADDY, I THINK YOU'D BETTER TAKE SOME OF THE SAME BEFORE YOU GET SICK!
